House Votes $46,915,207 Supply Bill For District

U. S. Will Furnish 5 Millions; Sum Is $762,000 Below Budget Estimates

(Other District budget news—Page 4.)

By James D. Secrest.

The 1940 District supply bill was passed by the House yesterday in record time after 2 hours and 50 minutes had been devoted to debate and reading of the 98-page measure.

It carries $46,915,207, of which the Federal Government will pay $5,000,000, to operate the District government during the next fiscal year. Falling $762,473 below budget estimates and $1,450,845 under the 1939 appropriations, the measure is one of the smallest in recent years.

Unless the total is raised substantially by the Senate, the District's 1940 deficit will be $3,496,732. Chairman Collins pointed out that this could be reduced to approximately $200,000 by retention of the $1.75 realty rate, scheduled to expire June 30. Members of the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs, however, showed no disposition to drop the pending tax measure, designed to increase revenue.

Three Amendments

Only three minor amendments were made on the floor, and these were accepted by Collins, who piloted the bill through the House with military precision.

These are:

Twelve thousand five hundred dollars added to last year's $5,000 appropriation for the Griffenhagen survey;

District officials required to provide parking space for members of Congress in front of all public buildings;

The commissioners are barred from uprooting the present parking meters.

Passage followed debates on Gallinger Hospital and local suffrage and condemnation of the sale of liquor to minors and an alleged local milk monopoly.

Throughout the session there were never more than 60 members on the floor and the number dwindled several times to half that figure. On the only contested amendment—to strike new jobs of a $7,500 medical director and two assistants at Gallinger from the bill—the vote was 29 to 10 to sustain the committee.

School Funds Curtailed

Carrying money for capital improvements not included in the budget estimates, the supply bill's total is held down by sharp curtailment of operating expenses, especially in the schools.

One of these capital expenditures inserted by Collins, however, was left suspended in midair by a point of order raised by Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania. This eliminated an authorization for the Commissioners to enter into a contract for construction of a new main library, but left intact an initial $350,000 appropriation.

Collins, who has urged the library construction for several years, did not contest the point and intimated the authorization for a $1,118,000 building, to be erected on the present site of the National Guard Armory, will be restored in the Senate.

Point Not Quick Enough

An effort which if made in time would have halted a reorganization of the Fire Department by reduction in the number of station houses, was made by Representative Schwert (Democrat), of New York, a member of the House District Committee.

Schwert raised a point of order against the proviso a few seconds after the fast-reading clerk had passed the legislative language.

The proviso was denounced during general debate by Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, another member of the District Committee, who complained that the committee members had not had an opportunity to study the bill as it was not released until noon.

Anticipating a reduction in the working hours of local firemen and possible adoption of a 5-day week, the House sub-committee on ap-

Dewey Abandons Scalding Inquiry

New York, April 6 (AP).—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's office announced late today it had dropped its investigation into the fatal scalding of Irving Eaton, stock broker.

The investigation was begun when friends told Dewey that Eaton, supposedly wealthy, left less than $1,000 when he died three weeks ago after falling into a tub of hot water. Eaton was said to have lost $125,000 in stock market speculations.

'Revival of the Spirit of National Defense'

Slicker-clad soldiers, 3,000 strong, paraded in the rain past the Nation's Capitol yesterday in the Army Day parade, attesting what President Roosevelt termed a "revival of the spirit of national defense." They swung from the Capitol plaza down Constitution avenue, where they were reviewed by officials of the Army and Navy. (Other pictures on Page 25)

Jury Acquits F. B. Rhodes Of Perjury

Out 25 Hours on Former President of Loan Association

Fred B. Rhodes, 64-year-old lawyer and former financier, yesterday was acquitted of perjury by a jury which deliberated 25 hours.

Rhodes, former president of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association, had been on trial nearly two weeks before Justice Adkins for swearing to an allegedly false report of the association's condition, which was submitted to the Comptroller of the Currency in 1935.

Rhodes waited calmly Wednesday night and all day yesterday for the jurors to report, then he broke nervously through a throng of friends and church members who wished to shake hands with him. His voice quavered as he borrowed a nickel from William E. Richardson, one of his counsel, to telephone the good news to his wife.

Among those congratulating Rhodes, who steadfastly denied that he ever intended to swear to any false report, were members of the choir of Temple Baptist Church, of which he has been a member.

"I don't know what to say, I'm so happy," Rhodes said. "I was confident of vindication."

The verdict yesterday was the first clear-cut decision on the charges which were presented after the Fidelity closed in 1936 with a loss placed at $700,000. Rhodes was tried twice on charges of forgery, but both juries disagreed.

100,000 Stand in Rain to See Parade of U. S. Armed Might

5,000 Uniformed Marchers Paced By 14 Bands Commemorate Army Day; Modern Weapons on Display

By Scott Hart.

A glimpse of America's armed might was caught by 100,000 rain-soaked people here yesterday as 14 bands paced more than 5,000 uniformed men and women up Constitution avenue in Washington's annual Army Day parade.

Throughout America, thousands of other soldiers marched in celebration of Army Day, like spokes in a vast wheel of defense radiating from Washington.

Here, the rain, falling from a leaden sky, pouring in one instant, abating slightly for a while, soaked through the canvas over the reviewing stand at Sixteenth street and Constitution avenue, where Cabinet officers, Army and Navy commanders, representatives of the embassies and ladies with open-toed shoes absorbed water.

Directly across from them, deep crowds were ribboned off on both sides of the street, some under umbrellas, some bareheaded, all wet. The crowds at the curbsides began at the Capitol, where the parade first moved. It was thinly distributed there; but at the intersection of Pennsylvania and Constitution avenues there was a swelling of the lines that grew deeper near the reviewing stand and remained densely packed as far westward as the eye could follow.

Maj. Edwin S. Bettelheim, adjutant general, Order of the World War, the sponsor of Army Day, said the parade was seen by 100,000 persons. The youngest marchers

Surgeon Removes Stone Casing From Woman's Heart

Rochester, Minn., April 6.—Her heart freed, through surgery, from a hardened calcium case, Mrs. Matt Lyon, of Rochester, Minn., first woman to undergo a rare "stone heart" operation here, late today was reported in a "very satisfactory" condition.

A half-inch layer of calcium, as hard as stone, was cut from Mrs. Lyon's heart in a four-hour operation at the Mayo Clinic for correction of the condition technically called calcification of the pericardium.

During the tedious operation a Mayo Clinic surgeon worked at short intervals, to permit the heart to "rest."

Bandit Kidnaper Slain by G Men

G-men shot and killed 27-year-old Bennie Dickson, bank bandit and kidnaper, at the end of a four months' hunt last night when he emerged from a hamburger stand in St. Louis, Mo.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation reported here that Dickson, surrounded, reached for a revolver.

Remembering two previous gun battles with police, from which Dickson and his 17-year-old schoolgirl wife had escaped, the agents stopped him with a volley.

It was stated in St. Louis that a "woman in brown" who entered the restaurant with Dickson had tipped off the agents.

Park, Anti-Toxin Pioneer, Dies

New York, April 6 (AP).—Dr. William Hallock Park, 75, director emeritus of the bureau of laboratories of the New York City health department, died in his Park avenue apartment today

Dr. Park, a native of New York and a former professor of bacteriology and preventive medicine at New York University, was credited with having produced, in 1894, the first diphtheria antitoxin made in this country.

Hundred Couples Help Science To Seek Ideal Birth Control

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 6.—A Baltimore scientist revealed today several hundred married couples were taking part in experiments to determine if and when there is an exact period of non-fertility in the human female during a regular cycle.

Dr. Carl G. Hartman, of the Carnegie Institution of Baltimore, declared in an interview he had proved there was such a period in monkeys, where conception did not take place, and he added that "you can bet your bottom dollar the same will prove true of women."

Here to deliver a paper before the American Association of Anatomists on "studies on reproduction in the monkey and their bearing on gynecology and anthropology," Hartman said a 10-year study with 600 female monkeys had revealed "definite periods" of fertility and non-fertility.

"Various data in that field have been collected from time to time with relation to women," he said, "but it was not until the National Committee of Maternal Health received the co-operation of intelligent, biologically-minded women not inhibited by being guinea pigs, that a long-range project was feasible."

"No attempts are being made to prevent conceptions," he pointed out, "it is simply an experiment designed to give us the most complete data to date on this subject."

He said the experiment had been going on "for four or five years," and that "the answer will be of vital interest to those whose religion definitely opposes contraception in any form."

SEC Sues To Protect Its Secrets

Says Gianninis Hired Former Agent Who Had Access To Confidential Data

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday appealed to the United States District Court for the northern California district to stop one of its former attorneys from divulging confidential information to Bank of America, Giannini-dominated institution.

William J. Mahaney, a former investigator in proceedings against Giannini interests, the SEC charged, is employed as an attorney for the bank as a result of an arrangement with L. Mario Giannini, son of A. P. Giannini and president of the bank.

The commission brought the court action jointly with the Justice Department. It accused Mahaney of falsifying the identity of his employer at the time he resigned from the commission on January 3 last.

Says He Knew Secrets

This falsification, the commission charged, was for the purpose of forestalling action restraining him from disclosing to Giannini interests confidential information arising in the course of investigations relating to the bank, Transamerica Corporation, holding company for Giannini banks, and Timetrust, Incorporated.

The SEC on Wednesday brought an injunction proceeding in the northern California Federal Court against Timetrust, A. P. Giannini and others to prevent the sale to "unwary" persons of Bank of America stock under the guise of an investment plan, patterned after a savings bank account. Purchasers, the commission said, are sold "Timetrust certificates" on an installment basis, and the money, less fees, is invested in bank stock.

Mahaney, the commission said, had access to information of a highly confidential character in connection with this proceeding, as well as the action against Transamerica Corporation to determine whether its stock should be delisted from stock exchanges due to "false and misleading" financial statements filed with the commission.

Mahaney had been in the employ of the commission at its San Francisco regional office since March 25, 1935, the SEC said. His resignation was effective February 20, the date of the expiration of his annual leave. Although he ceased active duties on January 3, he continued to occupy an office in the San Francisco regional office until January 5.

Employed Since January

The commission charged that he had been in the employ of the bank since January 1.

At Mahaney's request, the SEC said, he was transferred to the Washington office on October 11 last, and had access to confidential information concerning the Giannini inquiries.

The SEC said it had information that, at the time Mahaney asked to be transferred to Washington, "he had formed the intention of terminating his employment with the commission and entering his present employment."

Rum Truck Upsets On U.Md. Campus; 4½ Cases Stolen

Overturned on the University of Maryland campus yesterday, a liquor truck was speedily rifled of part of its contents before the slightly injured driver returned.

The truck crashed when a wheel dropped into a deep gutter and within a few minutes four and one-half cases of liquor disappeared. When the driver, an injured hand bandaged, returned, he shooed away a crowd of about 50 persons who were going through the truck's scrambled load.

University authorities promptly threatened to expel any student discovered near the truck, which was returned to its wheels after three hours of work.

Wife Calls Wynn 'Perfect Schemer'

New York, April 6 (U.P.).—Mrs. Frieda Wynn, wife of the comedian, Ed Wynn, charged in Supreme Court today that "the perfect fool is the perfect schemer at heart."

Suing for separation, the former show girl asserted that Wynn's "whole being is dual."

Detroit, April 6 (U.P.).—Five persons were killed tonight at a railroad crossing 10 miles west of Detroit when a Pere Marquette passenger train struck an automobile.

The victims were not immediately identified.

Italy Stays Hand, Rome Hears Zog Fears Revolt; Nazis Warn Poland

Britain May Lead Warsaw Into War Through Alliance, Says Berlin Press

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 6.—An official German press declaration warned Poland tonight she would be "an accessory to the aggressive war policy pursued by the English government" if she "concluded an alliance against Germany."

The Deutscher Dienst, a commentary distributed by the German official news agency, indicated Poland had avoided negotiations with Germany to settle their differences, declaring:

"Instead of continuing further on the policy of reconciliation with Germany, introduced by the Polish Marshal Pilsudski (the late strong man of the state), and agreeing on a final solution, striven for also by Germany, with all its power, and thereby to remove for all time all the difficulties between the two countries, there followed the astounding irrational act of mobilizing Polish forces against Germany."

Staff Talks Continue

The commentary was published as talks between Italian and German military chiefs continued with the greatest secrecy at Innsbruck, talks it was taken for granted dealt with action the armies of the axis powers might take if trouble should come.

Although officials said the talks were of no "particular importance," some interpreted them as a timely warning, while Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, concluded an Anglo-Polish defensive alliance in London — which Prime Minister Chamberlain told the British Parliament was directed at no country.

Nazis earlier expressed belief Prime Minister Chamberlain had failed to get Poland as a full partner in the British-French sponsored "Stop Hitler bloc" and the Deutscher Dienst commentary declared:

"In its history, England often has been a dangerous adviser and by preference has brought smaller nations together for its own imperialistic aims.

"Did Beck, perhaps, feel the same way when he, at least, hesitated to return to Warsaw from London with a signed agreement?" (Chamberlain told Parliament technical talks, presumably military, would be undertaken before the treaty finally was concluded).

Albania Believed Topic

Informed quarters expressed the belief the Innsbruck talks between the chief of the German high command, Col. Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, and the Italian undersecretary for war, Gen. Alberto Pariani, touched on the Albanian situation and said Germany would stand by Italy in any action concerning Albania.

The conversations began yesterday in the district government building at Innsbruck.

It was assumed Keitel would go to Berchtesgaden to report to Chancellor Hitler.

Deutscher Dienst declared Germany always sought to regulate outstanding questions with Poland by bilateral agreement and put their relations on a friendly "lasting basis," but that Poland "reacted strangely."

The commentary continued that Poland "swung blindly into aggressive English war politics against Germany and thereby made one's self a tool of powers which not only do not want a German-Polish understanding, but also seek to prevent it by every means."

Neutrality Is a Myth, Says Baruch

Advocates 'Cash And Carry' Policy At Senate Hearing

Mr. Baruch's statement—Page 11.

By Robert C. Albright.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of President Wilson's War Industries Board, yesterday told a Senate committee there is no such thing as absolute neutrality and advocated a trade policy of "come and get it," treating all belligerent nations alike.

Baruch said no arms embargo policy would "prevent war, take us in, or keep us out."

"If we want to make a gesture, let us do so, but let us not do it under any idea that it does either neutrality or peace," said the Democratic Party's veteran counselor.

Second witness before Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings on revamping the neutrality act, Baruch recommended a "cash and carry" trade policy on all commodities in war time, warned against repercussions from economic sanctions but declared America can escape involvement in the next European conflict "without burying our head in the sand."

Stand Wins Praise

Declaring attempts at complete neutrality and its opposite—sanctions—have failed, that partial attempts to embargo war goods lack "realism," and international law at this time is "a minus quantity" he urged the committee to try "to meet conditions existent at the moment."

He said that can best be done by permitting any nation "to get what it needs from us, provided it takes title at the port of shipment, and provided further that the shipment is not made in American craft."

Unlike former Secretary of State

Stocks Fall $1 to $4 As Foreign Scare Spurs Dumping

New York, April 6 (AP).—Wall street traders viewed the tangled foreign scene today, thought of its possible repercussions and many decided a long week-end was no time to hold the speculative line. Result: Many leading stocks declined $1 to $4 a share or more.

A few losses ran to as much as $8, as the Associated Press average of 60 prominent issues, at $43.40, touched the lowest since June 22, last year, off $1.50 today.

G-Men to Track Down Report Alien Agents Have Joined Bund

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is attempting to run down reports that alien agents are joining the German-American Bund, it was learned yesterday.

The inquiry is being made at the request of the State Department, it is understood.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Murphy revealed that activities of the bund and similar organizations, as well as complaints of espionage, were discussed by him on an airplane jaunt this week.

Accompanied by J. Edgar Hoover, F.B.I. chief, he stopped at Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and New York. He talked over local problems with District attorneys, he said.

Murphy explained that the new investigation of the bund, which is part of a broad inquiry into spy activities, was continuing. Asked whether criminal prosecutions would result, he explained that the purpose of the investigation was to find out whether Federal laws were being violated.

In cases where Federal laws have been violated, whether by bund members, Communists, or others, he declared, prosecutions will follow.

The F. B. I., Murphy intimated, is making a particular effort to ascertain whether aliens engaged in subversive activities have violated passport or immigration laws. Other violations which may be uncovered, it was explained, include failure to register certain [illegible] of firearms, failure to register with the State Department as agents of foreign principals, and similar statutes.

It appeared that the F. B. I. in its new investigation still would be unable to gain access to membership records or bank accounts of the bund.

King Reported to Have Told Duce Nation Will Rise If He Submits

By the United Press.

Rome, April 6.—King Zog of Albania tonight was understood to have sent an urgent message to Premier Mussolini warning him the Albanian people would resist any Italian attempt to destroy their independence by armed occupation.

Zog, asserting he could not guarantee the passiveness of his people in the face of any threat to their independence, also was reported to have threatened to abdicate.

The monarch, according to reports, threatened to give up his throne unless Albanian independence was respected.

Agrees to Concessions

He agreed to concessions, however, and Fascists believed a compromise might be reached within 24 or 48 hours.

Zog was said to have expressed willingness to submit to most of Italy's demands for extended domination over the tiny Adriatic kingdom but to have insisted that any strengthening of the November 22, 1937, military alliance between the two countries must preserve Albanian sovereignty.

In effect, Zog was reported to have rejected any idea of an Italian protectorate.

Zog Prepares Army

Sereggi, an aide de camp to Zog, arrived Wednesday by airplane from Tirana, capital of Albania, where preparations were reported under way to put the Albanian army of 14,000 men in a state of readiness.

Many Fascist leaders believed that inasmuch as Italian troops have made no move to occupy Albanian territory a compromise would be reached granting Italy her demands within the framework of Albanian sovereignty.

Zog's message, which reached Rome as Mussolini made a sudden airplane flight to his Jesi military airfield 19 miles west of the Adriatic port of Ancona, was said to have stressed the fiery temper of Albania's 1,000,000 people and the danger of revolt if outward independence were lost. Sereggi was said to have reported growing evidence of unrest in Albania.

Fascists berated the Western powers for putting alarming interpretations on the military consultations under way at Innsbruck in the Austrian Tyrol, 20 miles above Brenner Pass, between the chiefs of the German and Italian general staffs.

Democracies "Incendiary"

Newspapers told "the foreign incendiary firemen" that the Rome-Berlin axis never put dire interpretations on the frequent general staff consultations of Great Britain and France.

In Berlin, however, Nazi circles intimated the Innsbruck consultations—generally regarded as the Rome-Berlin axis' answer to the "Stop Hitler" block being organized by Britain—might lead to an outright military alliance between Italy and Germany.

The Prince of Hesse, chief go-between for Hitler and Mussolini, arrived tonight at the Italian resort of San Remo and was said to have brought a personal message from Hitler for Field Marshal Goering, No. 2 Nazi and commander-in-chief

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

GILT OFF THE DOME.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Mysteriously, as in a horror movie, a colored janitor appeared one noon at the office of Secretary Wallace and announced he was there to wash the Secretary's back.

Miss Le Hand . . . wide-eyed

"Someone phoned that I was to wash your back, suh!" said the man, who carried a brush and a pail of water.

* * * *

"I don't have time to have my back washed," said the Secretary of Agriculture, absent-mindedly, and went on with his work.

Callers in the anteroom giggled and pinched themselves. It sounded a little like a prank out of "The Thin Man" . . . Some suspicious souls thought it might be an Ickes joke.

The janitor seemed to vanish in a puff of smoke.

* * * *

When an airplane crashes, Washington air officials always hope their inspectors will find one of the propellers was faulty . . . A bent propeller tip might tear a motor out via vibration . . . And it's a simple ailment to diagnose and cure . . . But recently they've found the propellers intact.

"—physical exams for candidates?"

Instead, they sometimes find indications of "wing-flutter," a structural bug which occasionally takes almost a year of readjusting to remove from some newly designed airplanes. A deadly thing, wing-flutter; it can appear suddenly under new stresses and vibrations after a plane has been partially tested, and it rips a plane apart in the air like an explosion. No planes are permitted to go to the Army or to air lines until "wing-flutter" is eliminated.

* * * *

With a couple of patriarchal Democrats, Hull and Garner, getting the nod from Gallup for the 1940 nomination, and the ailing Hopkins still the leading New Deal threat, some of the more realistic politicians think it might be time to submit candidates to a physical examination.

* * * *

Can they pass the same sort of an exam that an ordinary general must pass to remain in the Army? After all, the Presidency is much more strenuous than the life of a general in peacetime (or wartime, for that matter) . . . If a mere general retires at 64, should a President begin at 70 or 72?

Doc, the stethoscope!

"—enemy catch 'um too"

Army experts are ogling not only television but also "facsimile" as a method of spreading the lowdown in the next war. Facsimile, as you know, is the gadget which prints things via broadcast waves on a roll of paper attached to your radio . . . Right now it seems a little more likely to out some ice soon than television, in wartime.

* * * *

For one thing, facsimile can transmit maps, orders, data, reports, from headquarters to the front or (with the exception of the orders) vice versa.

The catch is that the enemy probably would pick up all your maps, orders, data, reports, etc., with their machines, too, after a little delay in tuning in . . .

Wouldn't it be queer if both television and facsimile were used in battle before you have a chance to enjoy 'em in your living room?

* * * *

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: In Washington's embassies and legations the most popular jest-of-the-week has been the remark attributed to Gen. Franco: "I asked 'em for soldiers and they sent me Italians!" . . . At least two diplomats have been using the same gag in prophesying Hitler trouble with the indigestible Czechs: "The Czechs will come out of Hitler's stomach the same way they went in!" . . . Imagine that!

Privately, I think the Italians are now as good soldiers as the Germans.

* * * *

You get a faint idea of the informality that prevails around the White House—and the hilarity the President enjoys when he's with a few old cronies he can trust—from the current tale about the wide-eyed comment of his personal secretary, the charming Marguerite Le Hand.

After listening to badinage and horseplay for part of an afternoon when the President was away from Washington on a holiday, she threw up her hands.

"To think that the destiny of the country is in the hands of you two!"

Charge Nazis Dump Wood Pulp in U. S. Is Studied

The Customs Bureau disclosed yesterday it had ordered an investigation to determine whether Germany was "dumping" wood pulp in the United States at prices detrimental to the American industry.

James H. Moyle, commissioner, advised Representative Smith (Democrat), of Washington, the order had been issued.

Smith Calls Parley to Seek Farm Harmony

Drops Direct Cotton Subsidy Bill Fought By Mid-Westerners

With Western and Southern farm blocs still vieing for farm plan control, Chairman Smith of the Senate Agriculture committee, yesterday called a conference for tomorrow of Senators "representing all farm sections."

Although Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the western farm bloc, said he may not attend the meeting, Smith said his purpose is to work out sectional differences and agree on a program.

Smith earlier had abandoned his direct cotton subsidy bill, opposed by the mid-westerners, and declared for $275,000,000 for parity payments on five farm commodities.

Negotiating with another group of Southern Senators, Lucas had formulated another plan, asking $150,000,000 additional for farm surplus disposal, and $250,000,000 for form parity payments Senators Russell, of Georgia, and Bankhead, of Alabama (Democrats), introduced the latter proposal as an amendment to the farm appropriation bill, while Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, yesterday introduced the $15,000,000 farm surplus proposal.

Combined with the $90,000,000 already available from customs receipts for surplus disposal and the $500,000,000 in the farm bill for soil conservation payments, the additional amounts asked for domestic and export surplus aids and for parity payments, would bring total subsidies to farmers to $1,000,000,000.

The "revolt" from Smith's direction of Senate farm plans was led by Western dairy section Senators, who objected to separate treatment of cotton and complained the parity price plan made no provision for dairy products. Lard, eggs, citrus fruits and other surplus commodities also would benefit from the enlarged surplus disposal fund, which as well would provide money the Administration has asked for subsidized export of cotton and wheat.

Fighting subsidized exporf of cotton, Smith and Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, seek to place the Senate on record against it. If the $150,000,000 surplus disposal appropriation is favorbaly reported by the Appropriations Committee, a floor amendment may be offered barring its use for subsidized export of cotton.

Jewish Council Maps Fund-Raising Drive at Meeting

The Jewish Community Council was told last night that "Washington Jewry must make greater sacrifices this year than ever before if the United Jewish Appeal is to be a success." The fund-raising drive is scheduled to begin April 24.

Drive Chairman Morris Simon and Rabbi Isadore Breslau placed responsibility for the drive's success with the Jewish Organizations of Washington. The members of the council represent 80 per cent of Washington Jewry.

Louis E. Spiegler drive director, stressed the need for obtaining 500 or more trained workers.

Colored Control 15 Pivotal States

By the Associated Press.

Representative Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, the only colored member of Congress, said in a statement last night colored voters held the balance of power in 15 States which would be pivotal in the 1940 presidential election.

The Chicago election, he siad, showed this was true in Illinois and showed, too, that the colored voters would "not stand for an anti-Roosevelt Democrat" in 1940.

Mitchell said the "pivotal states," in addition to Illinois, were California, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and West Virginia.

The Gallup Poll

Drastic Campaign to Reduce Auto Accidents Favored by American Public

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 6.—The American public does not complacently accept the idea that people are bound to be killed in automobile accidents, and it is in a frame of mind to submit to measures of the most drastic sort if there is any chance that traffic accidents could thereby be reduced, according to National surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

GEORGE GALLUP

Last year 32,000 people were killed in automobile accidents, or one person every 15 minutes. Nearly a million were injured, or two persons every minute.

In recent surveys by the Institute a half dozen proposed safety measures were put to the public—measures which have been suggested from time to time by engineering experts and safety groups. All of these proposals meet with a high vote of approval.

Favor Inspection

Thus, the majority of voters are in favor of compulsory brake and headlight inspection, strict driver's tests with regular physical and mental examinations, revoking the licenses of drunken drivers, and strict laws against pedestrians who "jay-walk" or cross the street against traffic lights. The majority even go so far as to favor speed "governors", on motors to prevent driving at high speeds.

Another proposal receiving wide discussion today is compulsory auto liability insurance. This too is favored by a large majority of voters.

	All Voters.	Car Owners Only.
Percent favoring:
Compulsory brake and head light inspection	90%	88%
Strict drivers' tests with physical and mental examinations	87	86
Revoke licenses of drunken drivers	95	95
Strict laws against jay walking	89	90
Speed governors	67	61
Compulsory auto liability insurance	76	72

Experts Disagree

Engineers and safety groups disagree as to the effectivness and practicality of many safety measures. Some argue that speed governors would not necessarily reduce accidents. The significance of the survey lies not so much in the vote on any specific measure as in the fact that the public appears to be earnestly concerned with taking action. The majority of voters express a willingness to submit to almost any form of legislation or regulation that may reduce automobile casualties.

It seems clear that if a program acceptable to experts in the traffic field is worked out, public support would not be slow in coming.

U. S. to Back Efforts to Free State Trade, Jackson Says

Chicago, April 6 (AP).—Solicitor General Jackson informed Representatives of 44 States and four Territories tonight the Federal Government would support efforts to remove State trade barriers.

In an address at a conference called to consider means of restoring free trade among the States he promised.

"The Federal authority must and will uphold the constitutional mandate that commerce among these United States be free. We will continue to take direct action in the courts where necessary, wherever and whenever a predatory parochialism or a local parasitic interest tries to flourish by obstructing the general commerce among the States."

A "growing tendency" to erect "tariff walls" between neighboring States, he said, had resulted in discrimination, retaliation, rivalries and reprisals. He told how "port-of-entry" laws, registration fees and taxes and the regulation of weights and sizes of trucks had led to "border wars."

He recalled that Secretary of State Hull had opposed State trade barriers and that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has opined they "cause large and unnecessary economic losses to the whole community."

Gov. Carl E. Bailey of Arkansas—one of the seven Governors attending the parley—declared the best method of expanding the farmer's market, improving the entire Nation's economy and eliminating interstate trade barriers was "the re-establishment of free commercial intercourse among the States by equalizing freight rates."

Pearys Celebrate Discovery of Pole

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 6.—Friends and relatives of the late Admiral Robert E. Peary held a small dinner tonight to celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of Admiral Peary's discovery of the North Pole. The dinner was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Carman and was attended by Mrs. Robert Peary, now 76; Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Peary, jr., Mrs. Edward Stafford, daughter of the admiral, and Emil Diebitsch, brother of Mrs. Peary, sr.

Mrs. Stafford, who was born in Greenland and whose husband is a lawyer in Washington, will unveil a portrait of her father at the Explorers Club on Sunday.

Social Security Head Asks Subpena Power

Chairman Arthur Altmeyer of the Social Security Board yesterday asked Congress to give his agency broad powers to issue subpenas and administer oaths, to facilitate taking evidence in claims filed by the board.

The House Ways and Means Committee, which is hearing Altmeyer and other witnesses on proposed changes in the security act, also received a letter from President William Green of the American Federation of Labor urging that employers be required to give employes receipts for social security tax deductions from their salaries.

Vote Deferred On 100 Million Relief Fund

Question Reopened In Senate Despite Democratic Hopes

Contrary to Democratic leadership hopes of avoiding a floor battle, the entire WPA question was reopened in the Senate yesterday as long speechmaking deferred a vote on the $100,000,000 emergency relief bill.

An agreement between Administration and "economy" forces that the $100,000,000 measure—satisfactory to neither—would be indorsed by both sides was unable to prevent a three-hour attack on the bill be Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who urged that the Senate grant the President's request for $150,000,000.

The Republicans, meanwhile, were planning to call up the Vandenberg resolution, under which the WPA would maintain its rolls at maximum schedule until June 7, when funds would be exhausted. In the interim, Congress would be expected to establish a new policy toward WPA.

Roberts Named Counsel

On the other side of the House, the newly-created WPA investigating committee appointed as its counsel J. O'Connor Roberts, Washington attorney, prominent Legionnaire and former solicitor of the Veterans' Administration.

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, will be the first witness Tuesday, Chairman Taylor, of Colorado, said. The Appropriations subcommittee handling relief—composed of the same members as the investigating group—has already taken extensive testimony from Col. Harrington during hearings on the two WPA bills this year.

Charges of filibustering floated about Senate cloakrooms yesterday as advocates of a $150,000,000 relief appropriation held the floor practically the entire afternoon. Supporters of the committee bill indicated that the liberal bloc was stalling for time, so pressure could be exerted on waverers either directly or through mail and telegrams from home. It was also suggested that the cause of the $150,000,000 might be helped if the vote were postponed unti the return of President Roosevelt from Warm Springs.

Adams Charges Politics

However, Senator Pepper, leader in the floor drive for more relief funds, denied he was attempting to defer a vote. He denied that he had conferred with the President, but added that "I am sure the President would like to see my $150,000,000 amendment accepted."

In a heated exchange with Senator Pepper, Senator Adams, of Colorado, chairman of the Appropriations sub-committee on relief, accused the WPA of increasing its rolls last winter "for the purpose of coercing Congress by virtue of pressure which would be incited and engendered at home." According to Adams, 309,000 persons will be dropped from WPA between now and July 1 if the $100,000,000 appropriation is granted. But, he maintains, an average of 125,000 persons a month leave WPA of their own accord.

Pepper, on the other hand, said a WPA official had informed him yesterday that 767,000 persons would have to be dropped from the rolls before July 1. The Floridian challenged his opponents to seek "more perfect success by cutting out the whole WPA program."

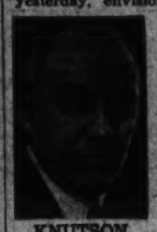
Cleric Subsidized Against Unionism, U. S. Aide Charges

C. W. Whittemore, trial examiner, reported to the National Labor Relations Board yesterday that the Hamrick chain of textile mills, at Gaffney, S. C., was subsidizing a "mill preacher" who told his followers the Bible taught "us to be content with our wages" and that the C. I. O. bore "the mark of the beast."

Describing this as one of several instruments of labor coercion and discrimination employed by the mill chain, Whittemore recommended that the board order the mills to stop discouraging membership in the Textile Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.), or any other labor organization, and to disestablish certain collective bargaining "clubs" which the trial examiner said were company-inspired.

On Capitol Hill

Three members of Congress, who voted against entrance into the World War 22 years ago yesterday, envisioned the aftermath of any future war and came up with the same answer—"No."



KNUTSON

Recalling what one termed "the greatest mistake made in the history of United States Government," Senators Norris (independent), of Nebraska; Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, and Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, reaffirmed their stand of nearly a quarter-century ago, against any war in Europe for American soldiers. They predicted Congress will "never again" under any circumstances, send American troops into a European conflict.

The House yesterday established an all-time record for lack of attendance.

Out of the 435 members, only 3 were in their seats when Representative White (Democrat), of Idaho, made a lengthy speech on the Nation's monetary problem.

The Senate approved a compromise bill permitting the Federal Government to tax State salaries and the States to tax the pay of Federal workers.

The measure was approved earlier by a joint Senate-House conference committee. It now goes back to the House for final action.

The bill includes provisions expressly subjecting the salaries of State and Federal judges and legislators to State and Federal income taxes. All State or Federal salaries paid before January 1, 1939, are exempt from taxation, however.

The Presidential nomination of Frederick I. Thompson, of Alabama, as a commissioner of the Federal Communications Commission to replace Eugene O. Sykes who resigned to enter private law practice, today was approved by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

A controversial "prevailing wage" provision was written into the Government's insured housing program yesterday by a Senate banking sub-committee in approving a $1,000,000,000 increase in the Federal Housing Administration's insurance limit.

At the request of the American Federation of Labor, the Senate group voted to require that the "prevailing wage scale" be paid on all projects insured by FHA and costing $16,000 or more.

A similar amendment applying to all FHA projects regardless of cost was dropped at the last session after much argument and pleas from FHA officials that it would cripple their program.

P. U. C. Head to Talk

Washington's "taxicab situation" will be discussed by Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association in the Mount Pleasant branch of the Public Library.

Boys Club Funds Drive Ends Today

With $63,500 collected of the quota of $75,000, campaign workers and Metropolitan Police Boys Club officials will close their drive with a luncheon at the Cosmos Club today.

Unit heads will make final reports, according to L. Gordon Leech, campaign director, who says the drive may come close to going "over the top."

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, general campaign director, James E. Colliflower, club president, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, recently sent personal letters to all workers urging a special effort so that the five club units and the summer camp at Scotland, Md., might operate during 1939 without financial handicap.

Burr Treason Record Sent to Archives Here

Cincinnati, April 6 (AP).—Papers in the treason trial of Aaron Burr, kept in the Federal Court files here for 75 years, were sent today to R. D. W. Connor, United States archivist, at Washington, for permanent safekeeping and preservation.

Representative Hess (Republican), Ohio, recently announced he would introduce a bill in Congress to have the papers transferred but later discovered this would be unnecessary.

Burr was indicted in January, 1803, at Chillicothe, former capital of Ohio.

House Unit Approves Big Air Reserves

Plan Would Allow Training of 15,000 Pilots in First Year

The last phase of President Roosevelt's emergency defense program was launched in Congress yesterday as the House Interstate Commerce Committee voted approval of plans to train a huge reserve of air pilots for the Army and Navy.

Because committee members felt the machinery of the vast training project could not get under way by summer, the group reduced the number to be trained the first year to 15,000. Thereafter, however, the full 20,000 recommended by the President will be allowed. The flight instruction, to be carried on at 200 colleges throughout the country, is expected to give tremendous stimulus to civil aviation as well as provide a war reserve of pilots.

Meanwhile, a House Naval subcommittee returned from an inspection of Caribbean islands, convinced that the proposed Puerto Rican air base should be established immediately as our "eastern outpost against aggression from Europe." Members of the group said there was a possibility of further legislation at this session for other additional naval facilities in the vital Caribbean area.

Day's Developments

Other developments were:

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, speaking in Chicago, declared that even if all of the Army's expansion plans were approved, the United States would rank no higher than seventeenth among the armies of the world. He declared that "a small, compact force, capable of expansion in an emergency and equipped with the best of modern arms and equipment, is all we want."

Representative Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, member of House Military Affairs Committee, told an Army Day crowd in Cincinnati the majority of the American people realized that "governments which deplore war face those which glorify it, and they have decided that those who want peace must be prepared to defend it."

The Senate Appropriations Committee postponed until today final action on the second deficiency bill, carrying $157,000,000 for defense purposes, including funds for supplying the Regular Army and National Guard with new weapons and equipment.

In reducing the number of youths to be given flight training the first year of the program, the House committee reduced the funds authorized from $7,300,00 to $5,675,000. It approved the action of its sub-committee in restricting the life of the program to five years, as it views the decentralization of training as an experiment.

In keeping with this decision, the bill bars the Civil Aeronautics Authority from purchasing land in connection with the program. It is planned to rent all facilities, including planes, and hire instructors to conduct the training at airports near landing colleges and universities.

Besides building up a reserve of pilots partially trained for an emergency, the schools would be a source for the present Army and Navy expansion programs. By eliminating most of the prospective failures before they reach the Army and Navy schools, the output of the latter will be increased, officials state.

Round-table Planned

The Naval sub-committee visited Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guantanamo, Cuba, and points in Haiti and Santo Domingo. They will report to the House Naval Affairs Committee, and a round-table discussion with Naval officials as to the situation is planned.

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, said the group felt that the proposed major air base at San Juan should be "rushed to earliest completion." The project is a part of the naval base development bill now pending in the Senate.

"San Juan will be a dagger pointed at Europe and Africa," he declared, "giving us a pivotal point for the defense of South America and the Canal. We must also develop Guantanamo as a base for the fleet."

President Signs Bill For Pinckney Papers

Warm Springs, Ga., April 6 (INS).—President Roosevelt tonight signed a bill authorizing the Library of Congress to acquire by purchase the papers of Charles Coteworth Pinckney and Thomas Pinckney, including therewith a group of documents relating to the constitutional convention of 1787.

Charles Coteworth Pinckney, Revolutionary North Carolinian of note, won a niche in history with his challenge: "Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute."

The paper are now in possession of Harry Stone, of New York City.

Smelt Fanciers Bury the Hook, Eat Together

Beulah, Escanaba Forces Friendly at Michigan Diner

There were only a few faint, dying echoes of animosity between the veteran smelt fanciers of Beulah and the publicists for Escanaba smelt as the Washington delegation took all children of Michigan under its wings in the Congressional restaurant last night for a dinner of Michigan products.

Barbara Banks, 18-year-old Queen of Smeltania, awarded Representative Jesse P. Wolcott, of Michigan, a certificate as champion smelt eater when his score was announced as 41. She invited Representative Fred Bradley, host at the dinner, to share her throne as King of Smeltania.

Representative Paul Shafer, of Michigan, president of the Michigan Society, introduced William J. Duchaine, managing editor of the Escanaba Daily Press. Shafer admitted that the first smelt run he had ever seen was in Beulah.

Duchaine, amid cheers from Mayor Arthur L. Finch and his delegation of Beulahites, admitted that smelt had been the subject of an annual jamboree in Beulah long before Escanaba had thought of exploiting them. Escanaba, however, had worked harder over the matter in the past five years, he added. And the smelt of Escanaba are perkier—they will even go up the tailboard of a wagon if it is let down into the stream when they are running.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg occupied a prominent place at the table of honor, but he refrained from taking sides. Also neutral was Vernon J. Brown, Michigan auditor general who attended as the representative of Gov. Luren Dickinson. Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, was appointed Smelt King by Mayor Finch earlier in the day.

Circus Performer Hurt in Plunge

New York, April 6 (AP).—Friedrich Kotsis, 35, billed as Rosello, Swiss aerial acrobat, was injured seriously tonight when he fell 20 feet during the finale of his "Man in the Moon" act at the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus in Madison Square Garden.

More than 8,000 spectators saw him lose his grip while descending a 60-foot rope and plunge to a wooden stage.

Ballou Says School Board Can Cut Playgrounds Costs

Transfer From Supervision of D. C. Commissioners Will Save $35,000 Annually in Operating Expense

The proposed transfer of all playground activities from supervision of the District Commissioners to the Board of Education, as provided in the District supply bill, constitutes a victory for the school authorities although it now has the approval of the District heads.

The consolidation will effect an economy of $35,000 a year in operating costs, according to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools. Both Miss Sibyl Baker, director of playgrounds, and Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center Department, are to be retained, Dr. Ballou told the Collins sub-committee. No mention is made of Lewis R. Barrett, coordinator of recreation.

Barrett, in testimony before the sub-committee, strongly opposed the placing of the District playgrounds under the Community Center Department although he urged a unification of recreational activities. The transfer also is contrary to the recommendations of the Griffenhagen reorganization plan.

Barrett proposed a new recreational set-up headed by a board of recreation. He questioned the efficiency of placing all playgrounds under the Community Center Department. Final control of the recreational facilities, he said, should rest with the Commissioners, rather than with the Board of Education.

Economies outlined by Dr. Ballou as anticipated from the merger are principally based upon an adjustment of salaries, including those of the directors, and the use of employes of the two departments interchangeably throughout the year. A few minor positions are to be abolished.

"It is contemplated that the existing recreation services provided by the department will be continued during the coming year," Dr. Ballou said, "but no expansion of playground work to other sections of the city is contemplated in view of the suggested savings."

The Board of Education, Dr. Ballou said, believes that a position of assistant superintendent of schools in charge of recreation ultimately will be necessary to effect "the desired program of financial economy as well as increased administrative efficiency."

Marines in Blues Parade for Chief At Warm Springs

Warm Springs, Ga., April 6 (AP).—Marines in dress blues celebrated Army Day before President Roosevelt and a handful of wheel-chair patients of the Warm Springs Foundation here today.

The 71 officers and men comprising the special guard for the temporary White House atop Pine Mountain entertained their commander in chief at their noonday mess and later put on a special drill. Lieut. Col. Charles T. Brooks, camp commander, stood beside the President's car explaining the maneuvers.

Robert N. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, who has been mentioned for the Securities Commission chairmanship, conferred with the President, but White House officials said it was purely a "personal visit."

Another caller was W. L. Miller, chairman of the Georgia Highway Department.

Dr. Snyder Heads Northwestern U.

Evanston, Ill., April 6 (AP).—Election of Dr. Franklin Bliss Snyder, vice president and Dean of Faculties of Northwestern University, as eleventh president of the school was announced tonight by Kenneth F. Burgess, president of the board of trustees.

Dr. Snyder will succeed Dr. Walter Dill Scott, who will become president emeritus next September.

Can't Eat Medal, So War Hero Sends It Back

Boise, Idaho, April 6 (AP).—Medals don't buy meals, so Idaho's greatest World War hero sent his Congressional medal of honor back to the War Department today.

Thomas C. Neibaur wrote to his friend, Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho:

"I am sending you my medal of honor and propose that you see to it that it is given to Secretary of War Harry Woodring, who, no doubt, has performed a much more patriotic duty to our country by saving the people the few dollars necessary to pay my claim than I did when I stopped an enemy counter-attack and saved the lives of a number of American soldiers October 16, 1918, in the Argonne Forest of France.

"I am trying to support a wife and seven children on the pay of a WPA laborer and the small disability allowance I now receive, and I find that that sum is not sufficient to support a medal of honor."

Borah had asked that Congress promote the private to the rank of major and give him $2,200 as retirement pay. Neibaur said the Senate committee rejected the measure on recommendation of the War Department.

Murphy Denounces Mercy for Informers

The practice of "turning State's evidence" is return for court leniency was bitterly assailed yesterday by Attorney General Murphy in his press conference.

He criticized the system of "undercover deals" between prosecutors and criminals who agree to furnish evidence in return for an easing of justice or an outright waiver of prosecution. Such arrangements, he said, should have no part in Federal enforcement policies.

$48 Per Family Limit Set on D. C. Relief

Committee Votes $900,000; $2,513 For Lewis Inquiry

Testimony of a special assistant auditor, C. B. Whaley, apparently persuaded the House sub-committee handling the District appropriations bill not to allow additional relief funds above the $900,000 voted last year prior to a $20,000 investigation.

Although the bill carries $2,513 more funds for the special inquiry conducted by Burdette G. Lewis, beyond the $20,000 appropriated last year, there is no word of testimony in the 900-page transcript of the executive hearings regarding the voluminous report of Lewis and his aides.

Lewis spent an afternoon explaining his report to the sub-committee.

Whaley, who worked under the direction of Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, testified at some length, however, to the effect that the $900,000 appropriation last year was ample to care for relief needs and that no unemployables went without aid.

The sub-committee not only kept the relief appropriation at $900,000 but wrote in a $48 per family limitation on all relief payments, including home care for dependent children, old age assistance, and pensions for needy blind. This figure, it was understood, was selected because it represents the maximum WPA wage scale for unskilled workers in the District.

The 1939 appropriation carried a limitation of $60 a month on general relief payment and a $75 maximum for payments under home care for dependent children. No restrictions were placed on pensions to old or needy blind persons.

Whaley, who was assigned last year to the Public Assistance Division, told the sub-committee that the 1939 appropriation for relief cared for all unemployables who asked for aid.

"In considering the total relief items, including both funds for the public assistance and the funds for the WPA and the value of food furnished by the Surplus Commodities Corporation," he said, "the funds for next year are adequate to meet the relief needs of the District of Columbia."

He charged that the Public Assistance Division actually paid out some of its funds since December to employables because there weren't enough unemployables to utilize it. The case load for February and March, he said, was higher than for winter months "and employable cases have been added because there was more money in the last six months for expenditure than was expended in the first six months of the fiscal year.

Otto J. Cass, deputy WPA administrator for the District, testified that the WPA had "fairly well taken care of all the employables, insofar as any quotas that have been assigned to us are concerned."

Testimony of Miss M. Alice Hill, director of the Public Assistance Division, and Welfare Director Elwood Street was restricted to an explanation of the budget estimates and a report of activities during the last year.

C. E. Lamson, director of the District Public Employment Office, told the sub-committee that 48,000 persons were registered on the active file of unemployed in the District, but that this number included 12,000 working on WPA jobs and 600 who are working but seeking a better position.

Street Quits Welfare Post For Chest Job

Accepts Richmond Offer to Direct 2 Charity Groups

Severely criticizing the "prompting circumstances," the Board of Public Welfare yesterday "regretfully" accepted the resignation of Elwood Street, welfare driector, effective June 15.

Street will leave about May 15, however, to become secretary and director of the Community Fund and executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, of Richmond, Va. He will take advantage of his accrued overtime.

Street's resignation, the third in less than a week in the Welfare Department, followed closely the recommendations of Burdette G. Lewis' report on the local relief setup, which was presented to Congress last week.

In one section of his voluminous report, Lewis described the welfare director as a "public relations man" and not an administrator.

Started With Chest

In his letter of resignation, Street said several years ago he had notified Community Chest and Councils, Inc., of New York City, the national clearing house for such agencies, that he would like to return to this field. The Richmond offer resulted from this request, he said.

Street came to Washington ten years ago to organize the Community Chest and was director up until the time he accepted his present job five years ago.

He said he accepted the welfare post because he wanted to "apply the principles of community organization and social work administration in the field of public welfare."

"At that time the District Welfare Department was the most complete department of public welfare in the country in range of services covered," he stated.

Disapproved Move

Congress in 1937 placed the municipal hospitals, which at that time were under the board, with the Health Department.

This action, he said, "destroyed the unity of the program and changed considerably the character of the work which I had agreed to do."

At the time of his appointment adequate funds for meeting local relief needs were available, he said.

"Since then funds have become increasingly inadequate and I see no prospect for any increase which will make it possible either to meet human needs in the District as I believe they should be met or to employ sufficient staff with which to do an efficient or satisfactory job in the field of public assistance," he stated.

Offers His Aid

A sum of $900,000 for relief expenditures is included in the District supply bill approved yesterday by the House. This figure, which has been time and again declared inadequate by many social welfare experts, was one of the reasons for the resignations last Saturday of Mrs. M. Alice Hill and Miss May O. Hankins, director and assistant director, respectively, of the Public Assistance Division.

Street said he feared the present board of welfare, composed of unpaid citizens, would not be continued under the plans of reorganization of the local government as recommended in the Griffenhagen report.

He said he would aid the board in selecting not only his, but the successors to Mrs. Hill and Miss Hankins. He was ordered by the board to canvass the field of prospective candidates for his job and make recommendations.

Sarnoff, 2 Others To Get Awards

Annual merit awards conferred by the National Institute of Immigrant Welfare will go to David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America; Dr. William Allan Neilson, president of Smith College, and Albin Polasek, head of the department of sculpture, Chicago Art Institute, Leifur Magnusson, of Washington, president of the institute, announced yesterday.

The awards, given to citizens of foreign birth who have made outstanding contributions to American life in science, art, education and public affairs, will be given at the institute's fourth dinner April 19, in the Hotel Biltmore, New York.

Belt Route Forecast for Capital in '40

Would Enable Tourists To Skirt District on North-South Trips

A through highway that will enable tourists and commercial traffic to skirt the Capital when driving north or south along U. S. Highway No. 1 and an auxiliary roadway to Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway in the vicinity of the Zoo are anticipated in the 1940 highway appropriations.

Funds for the preparation of plans and a report are carried in the current bill. Details remain to be worked out.

An appropriation also is carried for the preparation of plans for a grade separation span along Fourteenth street over Water street or Maine avenue, as it is now called, in southwest Washington.

The through highway, it is understood, would probably swing through southwest Washington toward Anacostia and then turn northward to connect with the Baltimore boulevard. The Rock Creek Parkway auxiliary road is sought to handle additional traffic from Calvert street southward during rush hours.

The bill carries $550,000 for construction of a bridge along Massachusetts avenue over Rock Creek and Rock Creek Parkway, where there is now a narrow culvert. Last year Congress authorized the widening of this culvert, but highway officials subsequently estimated that the bridge could be built as cheaply. The original estimate of the culvert cost, however, was only $300,000.

An appropriation of $700,000 is carried in the highway items for continuing construction of the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge. The total authorized cost is $2,000,000.

Twenty-eight major paving projects and two street widening jobs are provided for in the highway appropriations. The widening authorizations are for Seventh street, from Constitution avenue to Independence avenue, and Eleventh street northwest, from Rhode Island avenue to Vermont avenue.

Southeast: Thirty-third street, Alabama avenue to Denver street.

Southeast: Nineteenth street, A street to B street.

Northeast: Sixteenth street, C street to D street.

Northeast: Twenty-fifth place, Perry street to Bunker Hill road.

Northwest: Gallatin street, New Hampshire avenue to Third street.

Northwest: Seventh place, Quackenbos street to Rittenhouse street.

U. S. Advertises For Skeleton Of Adult Man

With the Procurement Division going "Mother Hubbard" on a life-size scale, family closets were expected to be ransacked throughout the Nation yesterday, as an advertisement appeared for "one skeleton, human, adult, male, with bones of a single individual." The Government wants an exhibit for the Marine Hospital at St. Louis.

The bones must be of excellent quality, and the mounting of the best type. Boasting a natural sternum and cartilages, the skeleton must have removable arms, legs, feet, skull, and one removable hand. And the skull must have a horizontal cut, not necessarily received during life.

One Government contractor yesterday said, "They must be looking for the Ghost of the New Deal."

School Budget Cut but Little By Committee

Funds for Teacher College Disallowed; Fuel Funds Trimmed

Substitution of money to provide plans for a new Abbott Vocational School in lieu of plans for a new Wilson's Teachers' College constituted the major change in the school budget estimates, other than the absorption of the playground department.

The sub-committee appropriated $20,000 for the Abbott school plans and directed that the building be placed on the site of the old Tuberculosis Hospital, at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest. Budget estimates for the teachers' college were disallowed.

Funds were included in the appropriation for purchase of additional sites to buy land for a northeast senior high school.

On other appropriations, except for school furnishings, the sub-committee followed rather closely the budget estimates.

The sub-committee again cut the fuel and lighting allowance by $25,000, regardless of the supplemental estimate requested this year, and pointed out that "responsible District and school officials "had testified that there was no need for the deficiency estimates."

"In the opinion of the committee," the report stated, "more efficient services on the part of the custodial personnel and more effective supervision and better training of such personnel would result in material economies in the operation of the public schools."

Construction items carried in the school appropriations are:

Completion of Coolidge High School, Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest, $450,000.

Eight-room addition to Montgomery School, including assembly hall-gymnasium, $229,000.

Completion of Thomas Jefferson Junior High School and library, $500,000.

Ten-room addition to Randall Junior High School, $140,000.

School site purchases, other than for the northeast senior high school site, included additional land for Montgomery School, a site for an elementary school in the vicinity of Massachusetts avenue and Macomb street, and land adjoining the Syphax School for construction of an eight-room addition and assembly hall-gymnasium.

Estimates for school furnishings were cut $64,562 because the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School will not be completed before September, 1940.

D. C. Guard Head To Get $3,000; Musicians Payless

Brig. Gen. A. L. Cox, commanding general of the District National Guard, gets a salary of $3,600 for the first time in the 1940 District supply bill, but musicians in the militia hereafter will have to play for the joy of it.

Besides giving the National Guard $150,000 to acquire a site for a new armory, the House sub-committee made provision for a paid administrative staff, but it repealed, upon Gen. Cox's recommendation, an act of 1899 which stated that musicians on parade or engaging special ceremonies should be paid extra.

The only trouble with the law, Cox explained, was that no appropriation was ever made for the purpose, and band members had to bring suit for the extra compensation.

"It is the view of the commanding general," he added, "that no soldier organization can be run in the courts and, in order to obviate any possibility of further suits of that character, the change in language (repeal) was recommended."

House Passes $46,915,207 Bill for District; Sum Is $762,000 Below Budget Estimates

propriations directed the Commissioners to make a study of fire station locations and report a plan for consolidations to the next Congress. Meanwhile, they are barred from filling vacancies which occur during the year.

There are now 39 fire stations in the District, and the sub-committee pointed out that two-thirds of these were built at a time when fire-fighting equipment was horse drawn. Motor vehicles obviate the need for so many stations, the report stated.

The committee provision for a new medical director at Gallinger Hospital, together with two assistants, provoked the most prolonged controversy as members of the District Committee aided Representative Miller (Republican), of Connecticut, in contesting the allocation of funds.

Miller Attacks Agreement

Miller attacked the recent Gallinger agreement between the Commissioners and the medical schools of George Washington and Georgetown University. It constituted a surrender of authority, he charged, to the medical schools.

The $7,500 medical director is not needed, Miller said, and the money could be more efficiently used to employ additional social welfare workers at the hospital. In New Haven, he said, the medical schools pay $300,000 for the privilege of having students practice in the municipal hospital.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, backed Miller, and Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, who conducted a recent Gallinger inquiry, stated that the jobs were unnecessary. Representative Shafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, charged that the job was to go to a political spoilsman, but Collins hotly denied it and told the House that the plan was designed to improve the service at Gallingher.

Under questioning by Nichols, Collins said that he considered Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent, a good administrator but felt the hospital needed "a good medical man."

Hayden Job Abolished

The debate brought out the fact that the job of H. B. Hayden, business manager of the health department, had been abolished by the sub-committee.

During general debate and intermissions in the reading of the bill, Chairman Randolph, of the District Committee made a plea for local suffrage, and Representative Rich argued against it on the ground that Congress should retain control of the District.

After suggesting that all District residents could "arrange" to set up legal residence in Maryland, Virginia, or another State, he was challenged by Representative Marcantonio (Republican), of New York, with the statement that such practice would be illegal.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, criticized the police for not enforcing the ban on liquor sales to minors and intoxicated persons in the District.

Warns of Dry Law

"If we do not protect the youth of our country," he said, "prohibition is going to return, and one of the first places it lights will be the District of Columbia."

Representative Stefan (Republican), of Nebraska, a member of the Collins sub-committee, made the charge that a milk monopoly exists in Washington, and other Western members joined in condemning the restriction of the milk producing market. Stefan expressed the belief, however, that the authorized milk investigation would effect an improvement in conditions.

Although a similar transfer was balked by members of the District Committee last year, the absorption of all municipal playgrounds by the community center department was passed without objection.

The transfer, which abolishes the District playground department, has been sought for several years by the Board of Education and until this year was opposed by the Commissioners.

Collins, in his opening statement, pointed out that the bill carried $150,000 of the unused municipal center appropriation for the purchase of a site in Southwest Washington and drafting of plans for a new National Guard Armory.

Funds for Bridge

The subcommittee also put in funds, he pointed out, for $550,000 bridge along Massachusetts avenue over Rock Creek parkway and ordered engineering survey for a secondary parkway as far north as the Zoo and a superspeed highway to carry through traffic around Washington's congested area. A survey also is provided for a grade separation span at Fourteenth and Water streets southwest.

Health Department appropriations, he said, totaled $2,508,080, which is $148,536 above budget estimates because of extra allowances for Gallinger Hospital. Welfare appropriations fall $57,960 below budget estimates.

Included in the latter is $20,000 for the purchase of land and the drafting of plans for a new National Training School for Girls, probably in Prince Georges County. The bill carries a limitation of $500 an inmate on the institution's cost.

$50,000 for Promotions

Administrative promotions for some 760 or 800 District employes are alowed in a $50,000 appropriation.

While outside its scope, the sub-committee suggested that the superintendent of insurance make a study of local fire insurance rates, which members called far too high.

Another legislative transfer effected by the supply bill moves the inspection of taxicabs and sightseeing buses from the Public Utilities Commission to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. This was opposed by the commission.

House Action To Reduce Beds At Gallinger

Patient Roll Likely To Be Cut to 600 Under New Set-Up

A reducton in the average number of patients at Gallinger Hospital from between 900 and 1,000 to 600 is expected to result from policies invoked by the House sub-committee on District appropriations although provision is made for 82 additional employes and a chief medical director at $7,500 a year and two associate medical officers at $3,200.

The sub-committee proposed that the reduction in patients be effected by enforcement of a one-year-resident restriction in admissions, except for emergency cases, and shifted much of the burden of charity work to privately-owned hospitals.

At the same time it recommended that the organic act of the commission on mental health be amended so as to reduce the time required for such proceedings from 30 to 11 days. Such an amendment, the report stated, will cut by nearly 100 the daily average patient load at Gallinger.

Addition of 82 employes, as recommended by the budget bureau, will enable the hospital to place all nurses on a 44-hour week and to reduce the weekly working time of orderlies and other employes.

The sub-commitee recommended the immediate demolition of the wooden buildings at Gallinger upon completion of the two new ward buildings under construction with WPA funds.

Provision for 52 additional employes at the Tuberculosis Sanatoria at Glenn Dale, the report stated, will permit the reduction of working hours "of many employes now required to render considerable overtime service."

Besides granting increased appropriations for charity work at privately-owned hospitals, the sub-committee gave Emergency Hospital $25,000 for the establishment of a 24-hour clinic to be operated in conjunction with George Washington University Medical School.

The comparative private hospital appropriations for 1939 and 1940 are: Children's, $66,000 and $80,000; Emergency, $60,000 and $80,000; Casualty, $45,000 and $75,000.

Columbia Hospital is given $30,000 "for reimbursement to such hospital for the replacement of boilers."

Dr. Mann Off To Restock Zoo

Dr. William M. Mann, director of National Zoological Park, left Washington yesterday for New York on an animal collecting expedition to South America.

The Mann party consists of the Zoo director, his wife and Dr. John H. Gray, retired Washington economist, and 28 head of trading animals. Two young American bisons, two civet cats, two emperor geese, a binterong (bearcat), two Texas red wolves, eight turtles, a monitor lizard, six gila monsters, 12 prairie dogs and two bald eagles.

Dr. Mann hopes to bring back, in their stead mammals, birds and reptiles.

Stinsons Gay At Bridal Fete, Broker Says

Overholser Testimony Invoked to Refute Drugging Charge

During a honeymoon cocktail party in a New York hotel, Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson was a gay and charming hostess who entertained her guests with complimentary remarks about her new and third husband, the District Court heard yesterday.

"I observed nothing at all unnatural. They seemed most genial and happy. There was quite a crowd there," F. Cliffe Johnstone, real estate broker, said in a deposition read by Carroll Beedy, attorney for Joseph Whitla Stinson—who is accused of keeping the Washington society matron drugged for several months so that he "could marry her and get her money."

Unable to finish all testimony this week, Justice Luhring yesterday adjourned the court until April 17, thus providing a ten-day break in the longest annuiment case in District history. For four weeks testimony has continued with drama unremitted.

Dr. Overholser Testifies

Lawyers, doctors, nurses, detectives, bankers, friends, and the principals themselves have testified. Yesterday the defense continued its efforts to build up a refutation of the wed-while-drugged charges. Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, declared the plaintiff could have taken all the drugs charged to her accounts and still have been mentally competent.

"Rather than being hysterical and upset, as she is supposed to have been, she would have been more composed than the normal person and suffering from less tension," he said.

Dr. Oscar B. Hunter and Dr. John Reed joined in declarations that the stomach pump revealed nothing dangerous on the detective thriller "poison night" in the Crounse mansion out on Wyoming avenue—after "Jo-Jo" had departed with alleged threats to sell to the underworld a $230,000 trust fund Mrs. Stinson had set up for him soon after their engagement.

Nurse Cabled Stinson

Two members of the Metropolitan Police force—Sergts. Paul E. Ambrose and H. G. Wannamaker—were called by the plaintiff's attorney, Alvin L. Newmeyer, in an effort to impeach the testimony given earlier in the week by Miss Jessica Shoemaker, nurse-companion to Mrs. Stinson who is also accused.

When the two went to Miss Shoemaker's home in Alabama to investigate poison charges being made by Mrs. Stinson, the nurse told them—according to the written record introduced yesterday—that she had sent two cables to Stinson in Europe, one about his dog she was keeping and the other to acknowledge receipt of a check from him.

Lady Lawyers Win First Cases

Yesterday was a highly successful day in District Court for these two lady lawyers. Misses Estelle B. Moore (left) and Katherine N. Hawes, both natives of Washington, won the first cases of their careers when they argued before Justice Adkins. They are graduates of George Washington University's law school

Metals' Fight for Open Shop Called Violation of Liberties

La Follette Says Trades Association Challenges Government; Accuses Group Of Hiring Spies and Strike Breakers

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee declared yesterday that antiunion activities as carried on by the National Metal Trades Association present a "challenge to the Government itself."

"There is a significant gulf between sporadic violations of law and a concerted and planned campaign on the part of the most responsible and influential members of our economic system to nullify a duly enacted national labor policy," declared a report made to the Senate by Chairman La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, another member of the committee.

"The occasional offender can be dealt with within the statutory and administrative framework of the law itself," the report added, "but when the interest of society in freedom of association for workingmen has found statutory embodiment, the persistence of the National Metal Trades Association in its avowed program presents a challenge to government itself."

The committee, which investigated the organization in January, 1937, accused it of "stubborn resistance" to the Wagner labor relations act and said that despite revelations regarding its union "espionage" and "strikebreaking" activities it "still holds itself ready to render assistance to members in time of strike."

The association was described as consisting of about 900 members, including some of the biggest automobile manufacturing concerns. The keystone of its policy was said to be maintenance of the open shop.

The committee added that "the open shop policy as practiced by the National Metal Trades Association . . . results in the infringement of civil liberties and the statutory rights of labor to associate freely."

The committee said "the open shop policy is defined by the National Metal Trades Association as hostile to the principle of collective bargaining."

Deputy, Who Hit 2 Policemen, Fined

For assaulting two policemen when stopped for speeding, Michael E. Broderick, former United States deputy marshal, was fined $35 in Police Court yesterday.

Broderick is alleged to have struck Policeman E. M. Brown and E. C. Moore, at the Eighth Precinct station, February 5, after being stopped by Brown for speeding on Connecticut avenue northwest. Suspended when the charge was made, Broderick resigned.

U. S. Acquisition Of Patrick Henry Estate Proposed

By the Associated Press.

Bills introduced by Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, and Representative Burch (Democrat), Virginia, provide for the purchase by the United States of Patrick Henry's estate—Red Hill—in Charlotte County, Virginia.

The bills would limit the purchase price to $125,000 and provide for administration of the memorial through the National Park Service.

Anglo-Polish Pact Formally Announced

By Ralph W. Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, April 6.—As the Rome partner in the Hitler-Mussolini axis backed with warships today his diplomatic pressure on Albania, Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons a Polish-British agreement which brings into being a triple alliance—Britain, France Poland—intended as a stage in the formation of "a grand peace alliance" for defense against further aggression in Europe.

Each of these powers is now obligated to come to the aid of the others in case they are attacked. As outlined by Chamberlain, the Polish-British agreement is a provisional, mutual aid pact—now in effect, pending the elaboration by experts of a formal treaty of alliance.

Though Chamberlain left tonight to spend the holiday as the guest of Lord Forbes in Scotland, he took the unusual step of ordering an airplane kept ready to fly him back to London in case of necessity.

"Watching Developments"

Questioned in the House of Commons on the newly developed crisis in the Adriatic, the Prime Minister said he had just learned three Italian warships had arrived off Durazzo and the British government was "closely watching all developments."

In reply to a query as to whether Great Britain had "any interest in Albania," the Prime Minister replied:

"No direct interests. We have a general interest in the peace of the world."

Tracing the course of the Italo-Albania negotiations, Chamberlain said that, according to the Italian version, the King of Albania himself had suggested a strengthening of the Italo-Albanian alliance, that "certain difficulties had arisen" and that still, according to the Italian version, "Italian interests had been threatened."

The prime minister then continued:

"I have not yet received a detailed account of the viewpoint of the Albanian government, but I have just received from that government a denial of any report that it had accepted conditions incompatible with Albanian sovereignty and national integrity. The British minister at Durazzo reported at 8:25 a. m. that, at that time, all was quiet."

Chamberlain added that he had no information "that a new, revised agreement" had been reached between Italy and Albania.

Reviews Fleet

Chamberlain's statement on the Anglo-Polish agreement was delivered while Col. Josef Beck, the Polish foreign minister, who headed the Polish group in the negotiations here, was inspecting the British home fleet at Portsmouth.

With irritation here increasing as a result of the alleged activity of Nazi spies and agents in this country, the question was raised again today in the House of Commons. In reply to questions, Sir Samuel Hoare, the Home Secretary, disclosed that recently three agents of Nazi organizations had been deported. According to reports, these three were engaged in commercial activities in London.

The British Foreign Office issued today a communique concerning the question of Jews in eastern Europe as considered in the Anglo-Polish conversations. The communique read:

"In recent conversations, M. Beck expressed the desire that any international efforts for the treatment of the Jewish problem should be extended to that of the Jews in Poland and that Jewish emigrants from Poland should have their due share to any opportunity of settlement which may be found.

"M. Beck was assured that His Majesty's government would at any time be ready to examine with the Polish and Rumanian governments proposals for the solution of the particular problems arising in Poland and Rumania which are part of the large problem."

Japanese Reject French Protest

Tokyo (Friday), April 7 (AP).—The foreign office today disclosed it had rejected a protest from France against Japan's assumption of jurisdiction over the Spratly Islands situated strategically in the South China Sea, and claimed by France in 1933.

The French Ambassador to Tokyo, Charles Arsene Henry, registered the protest Wednesday, the foreign office disclosed.

Neutrality Myth, Says Baruch, Asks 'Cash-and-Carry' Policy

Neutral

Stimson, who Wednesday was attacked by isolationist Senators when he urged power for the President to name an "aggressor." Baruch's stand against America "taking sides" won the praise of mandatory neutrality Senators.

But in answer to a question on what this Nation should do "if we thought Great Britain and France were going to be destroyed," Baruch's reply was similar to Stimson's:

"If it threatened us and we thought the Western Hemisphere would be invaded, I would gravely consider what we ought to do."

'Protect This Hemisphere'

Urging the need of an adequate defense, Baruch said America's seawater barriers have been narrowed but "our defeat here certainly can never happen" if rearmament precautions are taken.

"We must rely upon ourselves to protect this hemisphere," he cautioned. "We must be ready to do it. It is not necessary to do it on the continent of Europe. If advocating protection of ourselves and our hemisphere is war mongering, then I plead guilty."

Conceding that "most of our individual sympathies" lean to France and England, he said his "desire to keep us out of war overcomes my heart." He said if policies in international trade are allowed to "follow our sympathies, we may be idealistic but we are not neutral."

To the argument that his "come and get it" war trade proposal would aid France and Britain in the Atlantic and Japan in the Pacific, he replied that the same condition holds true in normal commerce—that Germany and Italy lack credit to trade here and China is blocked by Japan.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, the Senate's outstanding advocate of "freedom of the seas" and nonintervention, said he was not against the cash and carry plan "in totality," but opposed features aiding Japan as against China.

Baruch said that also disturbed him. He said serious consideration should be given to an amendment permitting Americans "at their own peril" to ship goods to belligerents who could not carry it in their own ships. But he said he feared this departure from the rule would "make it more difficult to keep out of war."

When the Idahoan commented that Baruch wasn't proposing "neutrality," the witness replied, "There ain't no such animal."

Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, Administration stalwart, wanted to know "why it is so important to treat everyone alike." Baruch said the other alternative was "economic war." Earlier he had declared that failure of economic war would lead to "military war."

Johnson Commends Him

Pleased with Baruch's espousal of his own "cash and carry" plan, Chairman Pittman several times entered the discussion to amplify the testimony of the New York financier. Pittman said the two prime causes of American entry into the last war were destruction of American property and loss of life. Neither would be possible, he argued, if title had been transferred to the belligerent purchaser before goods were shipped in foreign bottoms, or if Americans were precluded from traveling on belligerent vessels, as his bill proposes.

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, bitter critic of Baruch's wartime chief, President Wilson, and first to fly Wednesday at Stimson's proposal for more Presidential discretion in foreign affairs, was friendly in his questioning of Baruch. He commended Baruch for his "frankness" and said they had "common ground" in their hatred of war.

But when Johnson envisaged complete repeal of the neutrality act and reliance on international law, Baruch said "that would take us back where we were in 1917." The witness said there is no international law now "except the law of might" and "nobody else, except us" recognizes international codes. Baruch modified his answer when Johnson insisted the law is still there, and Pittman injected that it merely "sleeps" during wartime.

Under questioning by Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Baruch said Americans predominantly prefer to remain neutral, but are not "afraid" to fight.

"We just don't want to fight in somebody else's war," he said, "but anyone who thinks Americans won't fight if her rights and the Western Hemisphere are endangered is making a very great mistake."

Senator Reynolds, advocate of a "hands off" policy, and persistent critic of British policy, fairly beamed when Baruch agreed this country should "keep its nose out" of other nations' affairs. But the North Carolinian complained that France and Britain could "come and get it" under Baruch's trade policy, while Italy and Germany could not.

"They can't get it now," retorted Baruch. "They haven't the credit."

"Do you consider Soviet Russia a democracy?" asked Reynolds.

"No sir," replied Baruch.

"Not Up to Us"

Reynolds wanted to know why, then, the "democracies" of Britain and France are now seeking Russian aid.

"Any port in a storm," replied Baruch. "If politics makes strange bedfellows, war makes still stranger ones. Any way, it is not up to us to say what they ought to do, when we don't propose to do anything about it."

"If Great Britain allies herself with Russia, do you think it would cool our ardor toward Great Britain and France?" asked Reynolds.

"Probably," said Baruch.

When Reynolds asked if the United States shouldn't press war debt collections from Britain and France, Baruch said he favored debt readjustment, "but it would be a little like Shylock to press it at the present time."

Earlier, Russia had been under fire by Johnson, who called it the "greatest state for liquidating human beings in the history of the world." Johnson asked if Baruch would want to unite with Russia.

"I don't think we want to unite with anybody," said Baruch.

Burgos Denies Rumors of More Italians in Spain

Paris, April 6 (AP).—The Spanish government tonight assured France there had been no recent landing of Italian troops at Cadiz, Spain.

The formal assurances were given Foreign Minister Bonnet by Spanish Ambassador Lequerica in response to French and British requests to Burgos for "clarification" of persistent rumors of fresh Italian troop movements to Spain.

In previous representations to Generalissimo Franco's government, France obtained promises Italian legionnaires in Spain would be kept a reasonable distance from the Pyrenees Mountains which divide Spain from France.

of the German air force, who is on vacation there.

Goering is expected to come to Rome tomorrow night or Saturday morning to confer with Mussolini and Ciano and then proceed to Libya for an inspection of Italy's defenses adjoining French Tunisia.

Reply Believed Delivered

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, April 6.—The Albanian answer to Italian proposals was believed to have been handed to Foreign Minister Ciano today by the Albanian Minister, Gen. Sereggi, as Italian warships appeared off Durazzo, Albania's principal port, and Italian residents evacuated the interior.

No statement has been issued about the meeting between the Italian and Albanian statesmen, but foreign diplomatic circles were pessimistic as what little news trickled out of Albania indicated that feeling was hardening against Italy.

Gen. Sereggi returned to Rome last night after flying to Tirana to consult with King Zog. No indication of the nature of the Italian proposals was given in Italian quarters here, but reports from Tirana state they were of an "embracing nature," which suggests a protectorate in everything but name.

Mexican Oil Settlement Plan Reported Rejected Here

By Walter Fitzmaurice
Copyright, 1939 by International News Service

Official quarters disclosed last night that the laborious negotiations conducted by Donald R. Richberg for settlement of the Mexican-American oil controversy apparently had failed.

These sources, said Richberg, had informed Secretary of State Hull and Undersecretary Welles that the British and American oil companies he represented had declared "utterly unacceptable" the settlement offered for their $400,000,000 expropriated properties by President Cardenas.

The Cardenas plan, set forth in a letter written to Richberg by Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican ambassador to Washington, reportedly provided:

Consolidation of the properties the Mexican government owned and of those it secured by expropriation in a single company, the government holding title.

Management of the production, refining and domestic distribution of the product by the government, and of export distribution by the companies.

A three-way division of income in percentages assuring fair wages to the workers, equitable royalties and taxes to the Government, and compensation to the companies for the value of the expropriated properties over a long period of years.

Provision by the companies of sufficient new capital to cover depreciation and depletion among the expropriated properties, and assure exploitation of the Government's presently undeveloped holdings.

Control of investment, dividend and other fiscal policies by a finance committee, on which the companies would have a minority representation.

Unanimous dissent greeted Richberg's outline of the offer at a secret meeting of the principal oil executives in New York, it was learned.

Vote on Amlie Delayed; Friends Hint Withdrawal

A Senate interstate commerce subcommittee has postponed a vote on the nomination of Thomas R. Amlie to be an Interstate Commerce Commissioner pending reported negotiations for his withdrawal. It was learned last night.

Friends of the Wisconsin Progressive, who formerly insisted his nomination stand, said Amlie has been considering asking the President to withdraw it.

Informal polls of the Senate have indicated his nomination would be rejected, even if the subcommittee approved it, and the President some weeks ago was so informed. A majority of the subcommittee now is said to be definitely opposed to confirmation.

The Biography of

Her Majesty the QUEEN

LADY CYNTHIA ASQUITH, intimate friend and companion of Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, has written a complete biography of the British Empire's most gracious lady. Beginning with the Queen's childhood at Glamis Castle, this story takes you through her development into womanhood, her marriage to the Duke of York, tells of her activities on behalf of her subjects and her accession to the throne. Every woman will want to read this story about a glamorous woman of whom the world knows so much, and yet so little.

Manchukuo Buys for War, Hull Tells Nye

Japan Using Puppet State to Get U. S. Munitions, He Says

Japan has been importing large stocks of war supplies from the United States through Manchukuo for use in her military operations against China, Secretary of State Hull said yesterday in reply to an accusation by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, that the State Department was exaggerating the obstacles set up by Japan against this country's trade with her puppet state.

Senator Nye declared the State Department in protesting the closing of the open door in Manchuria had resorted to "window dressing" to make it appear that American trade was being discriminated against. He said the State Department had overlooked a substantial increase in Manchurian imports from the United States in the last two years.

Hull Digs at Nye

Secretary Hull conceded that Manchuria's imports from the United States in the last two years were abnormally large, but he pointed out that the bulk of the imports were raw materials and materials of a military and heavy industry character destined for use by Japan against China. He added, slyly, that he did not know whether Senator Nye, an isolationist, would look with enthusiasm upon official encouragement of that kind of trade.

"The increased imports of Manchuria in 1937 and 1938 from non-Japanese sources were obviously connected with Japan's preparation for and execution of military operations, and the figures for those years warrant no inference that Japan's occupation of Manchuria has more widely opened the doors of commercial opportunity or benefited American enterprise in Manchuria," a State Department statement said.

"Far more important than the figures of the import trade into Manchuria for the two exception years are the following facts," the department asserted. "By administrative measures of a discriminatory character, American business enterprises have been excluded from the field of distribution within Manchuria. Preferences in force, favoring Japanese enterprise, have compelled many American enterprises to withdraw from Manchuria and have discouraged other American enterprises from operating in Manchuria. The branch of a large American bank at Mukden was closed several years ago and one of the largest American importers, an American firm, of American machinery in the Far East, was impelled to close its offices in Manchuria. By legislation, establishing exchange and trade control, all foreign trade and enterprise in Manchuria except Japanese have been and are being discriminated against."

He said that to contend that normal trade would increase under such conditions would be similar to arguing that water in a stream would flow more freely and rapidly if a series of dams was erected in the stream.

Democratic Front Is Being Restored Under Britain's Leadership, Asserts Delbos

Daladier's Stand Held Fatal to Duce's 'Intrigue'

By Yvon Delbos

Former French Foreign Minister.

Paris, April 6.—The international tension due to the recent German coup de force, to the renewed German menace to Europe, to the claims and attacks of the Italian Fascists on France will probably continue for some time.

A slight clearing of the national horizon would, however, appear to be announced by the fact that although the totalitarian states have not abandoned their intentions they have, none the less, been obliged to cope with a far stronger resistance during the last few days.

This result is due, in the first place, to the firmness of the terms by which Premier Daladier expressed the unanimous resolution of the French people with regard to the pretensions of the Rome government. Endeavoring to intimidate France by a press campaign and by organized vituperations, also by vaguely menacing discourses leaving every doubt as to the scope of its claims, the Italian government hoped to delude France into trying to dissipate the danger by concessions.

Intrigue Nullified

By replying that France, who owned no one anything, would cede neither an inch of her territory nor any one of her rights, and by countering intimidation with a demonstration of the firm resolution of France, Premier Daladier has reduced the intrigue to naught.

This is shown by the embarrassed tone of the Italian press and by the speech made by Premier Mussolini at Reggio, Calabria. Simultaneously the appeal to the solitarity of the peoples who are determined to defend with their independence the very existence of civilization and liberty has been heard in the whole world.

This general restoration of the front of freedom is progressing satisfactorily, thanks to the resolute attitude of Great Britain, which in agreement with France has given the signal and has set the example. It is finally being realized that the totalitarian states cannot be held up in their conquests unless the nations threatened definitely combine to stop them. They have, in fact, undertaken to dispel themselves the illusions that may have been entertained since the Munich agreements.

Veil Rent Asunder

The veil has been brutally rent asunder. After the assassination of Czecho-Slovakia nothing remains of the Munich agreements by which her integrity was guaranteed. Nor of the British-German and the French-German declarations. Nor of the pretexts alleged by the Reich to justify her conquests.

There is no more question of racism, since the Czechs and the Slovaks are not German, nor of the right of the peoples to self-determination, since it is impossible to affirm that the Czechs were the oppressors of Germanism and at the same time aspired to be Germanized.

Stripped of all wrappings, this system is nothing more than the law of the jungle. The alleged necessity of vital space which increases in being satisfied, as explained in the Italian note of December 17, 1938, knows no limits.

Thus, on the basis of successive, increasingly illegitimate pretexts, Germany is gradually creating the empire of central Europe. The absorption of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Memel has not slaked her thirst for conquest, but rather the contrary. Already her claws are ripping the flanks of a Poland three-quarters encircled, and of Rumania, whose oil and wheat will refresh her strength to seek further prey.

It Was High Time

It was, therefore, high time to revise the situation, the more so as disquieting symptoms had arisen in the regions of Holland, Belgium and Switzerland. Great Britain realized this fact and has now taken measures which may change the face of history.

It was inevitable Great Britain, with France and the other interested countries, should take the essential precautions to cope with a possible aggression on the western front whatever its direction. But it was doubtful whether she would overcome her objection to definite engagements in central and eastern Europe.

Not only has Great Britain decided to do this but it is she who has given the impetus to the formation of a common front against aggression by appealing to all the nations concerned without exception. Unfortunately the influence already exercised by Germany in some of these states and the difficulty of conjugating action between Soviet Russia and Poland have prevented this plan from maturing promptly.

Beck's Doubts Overcome

Failing an immediate defensive coalition or a common declaration which might have proved unavailing, the British government rapidly endeavored to cope with the most imminent danger and to consolidate the principal rampart of the organization—namely, Poland.

She met with certain objections on the part of Mr. Beck, who, believing in the success of special negotiations with Germany, hesitated to embark upon a different method. Further, it was possible that he feared that he would merely precipitate an aggression by taking this precaution.

But the German menace had become so definite and imminent and the reaction of Polish opinion so strong that such considerations had to be put aside. When a country like Poland is obliged to mobilize it would be suicide to refuse an offer that might mean salvation. It was in these circumstances that Neville Chamberlain was able to make his decisive statements of March 31 and April 2.

System May Be Enlarged

While awaiting the conclusion of its other consultations the British government undertakes to give Poland every assistance in its power if the latter considers that resistance is necessary in her vital interests. The provisions of this agreement are being defined, as well as the question of financial assistance, during Beck's visit to London. It is further probable that the problem of reciprocity will also be settled, together with the accession of Lithuania to the system (a matter of vital importance for Poland), and, above all, of Rumania.

The point is to extend to the case of a German aggression the mutual obligations contracted by these countries for the event of a Russian aggression. Rumania would benefit by a British and French guaranty similar to that granted to Poland and by commercial agreements, which, like that just signed in Paris, would preserve her from the economic penetration on which Germany counted to enforce her political hegemony over Bucharest. Further, since Rumania is a member of the Balkan entente, the point at issue is the adherence to this vast organization of Turkey, Yugoslavia and, perhaps, Bulgaria.

Way for Russia to Aid

As for Soviet Russia, with whom Great Britain is pursuing active and confidential negotiations, the question of the entry of her troops into Rumania and above all into Poland is not raised for the moment but with her air force, supplies of arms and raw materials she can most effectively co-operate in the common defense, apart from the fact that a free passage through the Dardanelles would enable her to contribute efficaciously to the military operations.

Thus the three obstacles that can best hold up the Reich in its campaign of conquest have been or are about to be constituted—the certainty of encountering Great Britain both in east and west, the necessity of fighting on two fronts, the eastern factor being far stronger than supposed, and finally the prospect of a long war in which the economic and financial superiority of the peoples attacked and the increasingly friendly attitude of the United States to their cause would assure their victory.

Berlin Calls Plot Papers Forgery

Berlin, April 6 (AP).—Germany tonight dispatched a note to Argentina, describing as "clear forgeries" documents purporting to reveal an alleged Nazi plot to bring Argentine Patagonia under the dominion of the Reich.

Denying Germany has any designs for the acquisition of the southern Argentine region, the note declared that a German investigation of the affair disclosed the fraudulent nature of the letters and other papers on the basis of which the Argentine government arrested several Germans.

The note flatly declared:

Heirs to Denmark's Throne Reach U. S. for Goodwill Tour

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 6.—The ruddy-faced heir to the throne of Denmark and his princess, pretty and carefully tailored, arrived on the Danish-East Asiatic liner Canada from Copenhagen, amid a 21-gun salute today for a five-week goodwill tour of America.

The royal visitors—Prince Frederik and Princess Ingrid—are determined to visit as many Danish-Americans as possible as they speed from city to city in the interests of their country and its commerce.

The Prince brought greetings from his father, Christian X. His aides gave the impression his mission was the same as that of the former Prince of Wales, regarded as England's first salesman.

Incidentally, Denmark sells only three and a third million dollars worth of goods to the United States annually; the United States last year sold nearly $25,000,000 in merchandise to Denmark. There are 550,000 Danes in the United States.

The Prince said business was good in Denmark, there were no strikes and only 100,000 were unemployed. His wife said she wanted to see "your clothes and your homes."

Ingrid, 29, now and formerly a Swedish princess, and Frederik, just turned 40, married in 1935.

The Danish and Icelandic Colony's reception for 2,000 tonight will climax the royal couple's day here. Tomorrow they will motor to San Francisco.

Slovak Freedom Labeled Fiction By Roosevelt

The Administration served notice on Germany yesterday that it regarded the independence of Slovakia as a fiction.

The State Department released the text of a proclamation by President Roosevelt to put into effect the Turkish-American Trade agreement announced last Saturday.

Despite the treaty signed between Germany and Slovakia last month whereby Germany set up Slovakia as an "independent" state, with an autonomous administration and foreign office, President Roosevelt declared:

"Because I find as a fact that the treatment of American commerce by Germany is discriminatory, I direct that such proclaimed duties shall not be applied to products of Germany.

"Products of Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia, now under the de facto administrative control of Germany, shall be regarded as products of Germany for the purposes of this paragraph."

STEWARDESS NURSES on 2 B&O Trains!

The NATIONAL Limited to CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE, ST. LOUIS
The SHENANDOAH to PITTSBURGH and CHICAGO

First introduced in the East on the Shenandoah, Stewardess-Nurses have become so popular they are now in service also on the National Limited. Reflecting B & O's will to please, they are aboard these two popular trains with only one purpose in mind—to make your trip to the West more enjoyable.

These smartly-uniformed Stewardesses—who also are Registered Nurses—are at the service of Pullman and Coach passengers, without extra charge. You may need information about train connections, hotels or points of interest along the way. Call the Stewardess-Nurse. If you have a telegram to send or a letter to mail, she'll take care of it. Maybe you'd like a glass of warm milk for the baby.

The Stewardess-Nurse is always glad to act as "mother's helper"—and women do appreciate this convenience. If you're an elderly person or if you're not in good health and need extra attention, you'll find the Stewardess-Nurse anxious to serve you.

Both trains are completely Air-Conditioned, with latest-type Pullman equipment; also Individual Reclining Seat Coaches with Lunch Counter, Tray Meal Service to Coach Seats and Coach Lounges.

'Royal Family' Is Represented Here Again

Ethel Barrymore Colt Comes to Earle Today; Amusements Throw Off Signs of Spring; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THERE HAVE BEEN RUMORS flitting about of late that Ethel Barrymore Colt, headlining the new week's bill at the Earle Theater, beginning today, will be making her debut as a singer when she appears on the Thirteenth street stage. One suspects that there is something a little fallacious in that announcement.

BELL

This column seems to recall that Miss Colt, daughter of the brilliant actress, Ethel Barrymore, and niece of the youngest of the "royal family," John Barrymore, whose engagement at the National in "My Dear Children," last week, was cut short by a violent attack of laryngitis, sang a song or two with Rudy Valee in one of George White's "Scandals" some years ago, when Mr. White had the bad judgment to present his gaucherie in the Auditorium, instead of in midcity.

Whether our memory is faulty or not, the fact remains that Ethel Barrymore Colt has had a varied career in the theater. Despite her scant score years, the brunette Miss Colt, whose likeness adorns this page this morning—unless prelaid plans have gone askew—has made a bit of a reputation for herself on the lighter musical stage, on the legitimate stage and in radio. Furthermore, she has written lyrics and librettos for musicals, managed her own troupe—The Jitney Players—and found time to dash off a few pieces now and again for use outside the world of entertainment.

There seems to be another of those fallible legends going around about Miss Colt. There hase been suggestions that she embarked upon a career in the amusement world against the wishes of her mother. As I seem to recall it, Ethel Barrymore Colt made her stage debut in her mother's company. That would have been—and this memory isn't infallible, either—in "Scarlet Sister Mary," in which Ethel Barrymore and all others in the cast appeared in "blackface."

Miss Colt, as I have intimated, later engaged the interests of the Shuberts, George White, the Municipal Opera Comany, in St. Louis, and others of the top-flight impresarios. She also has appeared in many of the foremost of the "summer theaters" operating along the Eastern seaboard and is chief stockholder in, and manager of, her own pet Jitney Players.

Quite a person, this youngest of the Barrymores, and one in whom the family traditions happily promise to survive for many years to come.

If Easter egg-hunting is what has been worrying you or your small offspring these past few days, it might be reiterated that there will be plenty of fun of this sort out Bethesda way, come Saturday and Monday. The egg-hunting, with some important cash prizes available to those who find the ones done up in cellophane, will revolve more or less around the Boro Theater in Bethesda, one of the major operations of that indefatigable independent exhibitor and chain-theater proprietor, Sidney B. Lust. Mr. Lust is allied with the Maryland county authorities in the conduct of these Eastertide celebrations and is almost as much in a dither about them as he is concerning the Father and Sons Banquet, which he also is engineering at the Mayflower later this month.

Signs of spring are in the air. Robins are pulling angle worms out of the ground and the croci are springing up through the suburban turf, but that isn't all.

Here is a bulletin from the Roadside Theater to the effect that annual tryouts for the acting company will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, April 19 and 20. The place will be room 201 in the new School of Government Building, at George Washington University, Twenty-first and G streets. The tests will begin each evening promptly at 7:30 p. m., and if you pass successfully you may find yourself acting this summer out in the old red barn.

Then there is the matter of Glen Echo Park. That genius of summertime amusement out in the air, Leonard B. Schloss, drops a line to say that Glen Echo will be coming along soon for the greatest season in its long history. Its history has been so long principally because Mr. Schloss has made it so.

More of this later. The opening, however, is set for April 15, which is by way of being a Saturday.

A friendly note from Edwin Steffe, featured on last week's bill at Loew's Capitol Theater. He pays high tribute to Sibyl Bowan, Eddie Peabody, Manager Howard Burkhardt and all the others who seemed to want to see him "get over." He says "they are all grand, genuine people." I can vouch for that. But Mr. Steffe, in case he hadn't heard of it, falls into the same category. So everything is even!

And speaking of Sibyl Bowan—as we have been almost continuously since she came to town a week ago, to co-headline the stage bill at the Capitol—never let yourself be trapped into taking her out to "dine and wine." Miss Bowen is poison. She doesn't drink, she doesn't smoke and she doesn't even eat!

—Because she is so enthusiastic a supporter of everything Father Flanagan has done at his Boys' Town, in Nebraska, and contributes so generously to the support of that institution every year, we struck up a fine affinity with Sibyl by remote control—principally by mail. On her present visit to the Capital we met for the first time.

We attempted to fete Miss Bowan as a meager expression of our admiration of her character, as well as her incomparable work on the stage. So she ordered a sardine sandwich and a glass of milk!

Shades of Lillian Russell!

On next Monday, in the Willard Hotel, the Variety Club will hold one of its justly celebrated luncheons. Carter Barron and Rudolph Berger, one of the Eastern division managers for Loew's, Inc.; the other, Washington manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will be co-kings for the day. The speaker of the occasion will be my esteemed fellow-Hoosier, Frederic William Wile, noted columnist and commentator on the political scene, who has chosen "Napoleon, 1939 Model," as his topic. One suspects that there may be something in his talk about Hitler and Mussolini.

The boys at the Earle Theater are having an easy time of it these past few days. Having just emerged from a hectic week of Kay Kyserism, it now becomes known that the box office at the Earle will open this morning at 9:45 o'clock for the accommodation of the early comers who will avail themselves of the privilege of being first to see "Dodge City" and the "Youth Parade of 1939" stage revue. Of course that public rehearsal of the stage show will have something to do with it. From 10 to 11 a. m. the public will be permitted to see precisely how a co-ordinated stage show is strung together. It should be an interesting exhibit—take it from one who has been through the mill, as the saying goes.

Boy-Turn-Off-the-Alarm-Clock Note

But who wants to get up at 9:45 a. m.? Who even wants to go to bed at 9:45 a. m.?

Miss Colt will be heard in a cycle of songs—not for the first time locally, since memory seems to recall that she did the same thing in an ancient (more or less) edition of George White's "Scandals," at the now defunct Auditorium

Boy Tarzan Trains As Fast Swimmer

Stunt Pilot Lands In Small Pasture

Garland Lincoln, famous airplane stunt pilot, was employed recently to set a ship down in a small pasture surrounded by oak trees on Gopher Flats in San Fernando Valley.

Lincoln's difficult landing was for a sequence in the Bob Burns film, "I'm From Missouri," with Gladys George. The pilot was required to bring the airplane to a stop in a hog wallow.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 6.—When asked what they wanted for a wedding present, Clark and Carole said in unison: "A tree." They've started a grove of friends, in that way they can watch friendship grow. Their wedding, in a real church with a real minister, united two real people. No lemon trees accepted. They've got one!

Just after telling you what a glamour girl Spring Byington is, I found her in bed at Warner's studio. No, she wasn't ill, just working in "Give Me a Child." Spring has eight children in this one; has five in the "Jones" series; four in "Alexander Graham Bell." If they keep on coming she'll be in my grandmother's class, who had 12. All grew up, but two were drowned in the Johnstown flood.

Oh, come on, now. Let's give Spring a dressy part.

George Brent is following in the footsteps of Gene Raymond. Takes two piano lessons a week. Says it's relaxing. Wonder how long it will take him to learn Mendelsohn's Wedding March? In his clothes for "The Old Maid" he certainly looks like a handsome gentleman from the deep South.

John Wentworth, United's clever artist, is making some of the loveliest commercial pictures you've ever seen in Technicolor. Without the help of Natalie Kalmus, too.

Now that we're trying all sorts of innovations, why not give a prize to the real workers? Pick the best assistant director from each lot—and believe me, they're good, and let him direct one picture each year. Also a cutter and cameraman! They have saved more pictures from the shelf than almost any other group of people inside the studio. And include them in the Academy Award voting with a special Oscar for the best one. And consider the people who have won three awards as post-graduates and give them a special place of honor on the judge's stand.

That fine newspaperman from Seattle—Michael Foster, who's never written for the screen before, is now doing the script for "Gone With the Wind."

When Boris Glagolin, former director of the Literary Art Theater in Moscow, was introduced to Alan Dinehart, who'd only said, "How do you do," Glagolin commented: "You've been using the telephone a great deal today, haven't you?" Says people with an artistic temperament give out so much over the phone they completely strip the vocal cords, making the voice sound husky, tired and flat. After hearing that I've cut my calls down to 100 a day.

Penny Singleton is wildly excited about going to the Blondie Ball at the Waldorf Astoria, May 9, given her by the syndicate that publishes the Blondie comic. When Penny changed the color of her hair a whole new career opened up.

Joan Crawford found out there's no glamour or stand-ins in justice.

Paul Whiteman celebrated his forty-eighth birthday, and is going stronger than ever. Says that man knew what he was talking about when he said, "Life Begins at 40."

Lillian Hellman is now lazying down the lagoons of New Orleans dreaming up a new play. The price offered for her "The Little Foxes" is $200,000. But Claire Booth wants $250,000 for "Kiss the Boys Godbye." If she's not careful, that satire will go with the wind, too.

They've had to put on a special set of clerks to take calls and complaints since Adrienne Ames got that tax reduction on her wardrobe.

Understand the picture, "Rose of Washington Square," is really the story of Fannie Brice and Nicky Arnstein. Wonder how Baby Snooks will like that?

U.S. May Guard Press From Radio Inroads

Unlimited Opportunity Might Injure Public, Says FCC Report

Three members of the Federal Communications Commission indicated yesterday that the Government eventually may take steps to protect newspapers from "unlimited" competition from radio stations.

They recommended at the same time that the FCC grant broadcasting licenses for one year instead of six months.

Commissioners George H. Payne, T. M. Craven and Norman S. Case, in the second section of their report on proposed rules revisions, said:

"It cannot safely be argued that Congress always will permit radio licensees unlimited opportunity to secure all advertising business to the serious detriment of the economic structure of important and necessary services rendered to the public by unlicensed media."

Super power was vetoed again. The committe held that the broadcasting industry is not yet able to harness the excessive powers which electrical science provides. It decreed that not enough is known at present about the social and economic effects of such high power.

The commissioners said that extension of license periods from six months to a year would stabilize the broadcasting industry, which long has urged such a move to eliminate uncertainty over continuance of operations.

The report was submitted to the full commission after Payne, Craven and Case held extensive hearings. Oral argument will be held before the commission acts on the proposals.

FCC Chairman Frank R. McNinch has said he looked with favor on longer licenses and he and the three commissioners reporting tonight would give advocates for longer licenses a majority on the seven-man commission.

The commissioners, emphasizing widespread economic effect of high-powered stations said:

"It cannot be concluded safely that if radio competition with other media should be highly successful, the public interest would be served by permitting the economic annihilation of these other media.

"Consequently, it may be possible that influence might be exerted to stem an economic trend having adverse social effects. Such a movement has been attempted already but so far without success."

The commissioners pointed out that newspapers "have a far greater capital investment and affect the employment of many thousands more people than radio.

"Labor displacement resulting from technological development is one of the social problems of the modern age and consequently this is a significant economic factor to be considered in the future of radio advertising business."

National

Unique among the Savoy operas is "The Yeomen of the Guard," last night's offering of the D'Oyly Carte Company at the National Theater. It is a serious work, and its popularity in the public mind is negligible compared with the other works.

Sullivan's friends at Queen Victoria's court had long been trying to win him from the frivolities of Gilbert's inane scores (so they described them) and after the not too phenomenal success of "Ruddigore," the thoughtful Gilbert exerted himself to appease Sullivan's dissatisfaction. He wrote a genuinely lyric and romantic libretto, allowing great opportunity for his collaborator's musical and dramatic effects. When the score of "The Merry Man and His Maid" reached him, Sullivan was delighted. The score he wrote for this tale of the Tower of London was the composer's favorite of all his works.

Last night's audience heard why. The moving story of Jack Point boasts the beautiful most musically expert finale of all the operettas. "I Have a Song to Sing, O." For the inspiration of this melody, Sullivan always thanked Gilbert. As a general rule the composer would ask the librettist not to give him an inkling over any likely tune he may have had in his head for any particular lyric and Gilbert did not mind, explaining that only a rash man asked him to hum. But in the case of "Sing O" Sullivan was at his wit's end. Although highly pleased with his words as they were, the obliging Gilbert offered to recast them. Then Sullivan asked him what he had in his mind when he wrote the lines and Gilbert hummed a sea-chanty he had heard some sailors sing. That became the theme for the number.

Musicianship being the strong point of the visiting London company, the performance was a treat for our town, which does not often hear "The Yeomen" and rarely so well sung. Martyn Green, dropping the grey hairs and lines of his comedy roles, showed himself to be a youthful Jack Point with a fine style for his music.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service.

Hollywood, April 8.—The deadly dullness of the past week was lifted today when Darryl Zanuck admitted he had bought all rights to Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Bluebird" for Shirley Temple. I don't know when I've been as thrilled over a purchase for the Maeterlinck story is so beautiful and is such a good idea right now. The price paid was not disclosed, but the plan to film the play, which has been translated into every language and seen on the stage in every civilized country, calls for a $2,000,000 budget. Of course, it will be made in Technicolor, with Gene Markey producing.

LOUELLA PARSONS

When Paramount filmed it in 1918 it was advertised merely as a special and emphasis was laid on the story rather than on any particular star. Studio set designers and technicians have been put to work at Twentieth Century-Fox to get in readiness what will be Shirley's most pretentious film. She will be 10 years old April 23, and I can't imagine a nicer birthday present than having the chance to carry the message "The Bluebird" contains. She will make it in the fall after her summer vacation and when she finishes "Lady Jane."

Paul Muni is again reading the script of "We Are Not Alone," the James Hilton novel, and there is a possibility that when Miriam Hopkins and Director Edmund Goulding sail for England Paul will travel with them on the same boat. He is one actor who never has to paly a role unless he feels it is right for him, and so the final decision as to whether or not he co-stars with Miriam is up to him. If he should agree to play the doctor, "We Are Not Alone" will be made before "Beethoven" and, of course, in Author Hilton's native England.

Virginia Bruce, whose popularity with the fans has put her in the star class, now gets Robert Montgomery in her next picture, "Stronger Than Desire." Before the Hays office gets worried about that title, it just "ain't" what it sounds like but is based on the melodramatic idea of a criminal lawyer falling in love with a girl he is defending on a murder charge. Montgomery, who has been getting his picture in the papers testifying at the block booking hearing in Washington, will be back in town next week, when the picture is scheduled to get under way.

Wanted: A dancing partner for Ginger Rogers, who is left completely in the cold since Fred Astaire moved to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. I hear, through the underground route, that an effort will be made to bring Jack Whiting from England. You may remember him—he's Douglas Fairbanks, jr.'s step-papa and is married to Bess Sully Fairbanks, first wife of Doug, sr. Young Whiting, a talented actor, has made one or two pictures here, but nothing outstanding so far.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Wayne Morrises, 'tis whispered, have dated the stork. She was formerly "Bubbles" Schinasi; Erich Maria Remarque, author of "All Quiet on the Western Front," Marlene Dietrich and Joseph von Sternberg, a highly interesting luncheon threesome; now it's Omaha that beckons the critics. "Union Pacific" will be opened there April 28 by Paramount with a bang-up preview; Sylvia and Douglas Fairbanks are leaving unexpectedly for England on Tuesday and their friends are sorry to have them go; Gracie Allen smashed the fenders of her car trying to learn to pilot a car, and Maple Drive is still ducking for cover when she takes her daily lesson; the Jules Steins hosting a cocktail party in honor of Ernie Byfield, of Sherman Hotel (Chicago) fame. Speaking of Doris Stein (Mrs. Jules) she and Mary Pickford wore identical hats to Mrs. Basil Rathbone's luncheon, but, being wise women, neither cared.

Sam Harris and his bride, the former Mrs. Peggy Watson, due here in three weeks to visit Peggy's brother, George Brent; a literary foursome at a cafe were Anita Loos, John Emerson and the Aldous Huxleys; Richard Arlen and Virginia Grey looking more in love than ever.

Civic Opera Group to Be Started Here

Meeting Tomorrow Begins Drive to Insure Capital Performances

A plan to insure opera for Washington next winter will be initiated tomorrow morning at 10, in the office of District Commissioner Hazen, it was announced yesterday.

At that time, the Civic Opera Association of Washington, D. C., is to be incorporated. Several meetings to discuss plans for the association have been held, the last being on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Representative William T. Byrne, of New York. Mr. Byrne is former president of the Albany Philharmonic Society. Another meeting is planned for Monday night, at which drives for membership will be organized in detail.

A. Conti Berenguer, who almost single-handed underwrote the opera performances given in Washington this winter, is chairman of a temporary executive committee, organized preceding election of directors. The other members are Isaac Gans, Representative and Mrs. Byrne, Dr. Thomas Cajigas, Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, vice president of the Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Amelia Conti, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Co.; Dr. Mario Maiolatesi, president of the Italian Circle, and Miss Clelia Fioravanti, who sang in this winter's operas.

It is expected that two drives will be started by the middle of this month. One will be for contributing membership at a comparatively small sum, to include attendance privileges. The other will be for a separate opera sustaining fund.

Set Record

A huge circular stage 145 feet in width has been built in the record time of ten days in a new building at Paramount for the Jack Benny-Dorothy Lamour picture, "Man About Town." Curtains 50 feet high have been made to cover the stage.

Senators Told How War Has Hurt Movies

Central European Market Practically Nil, Says Producer

By the Associated Press.

Foreign wars and recent international disturbances have cost American motion picture producers millions of dollars, Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, testified before a Senate Committee yesterday.

Kent, appearing in behalf of "the eight major producers," opposed legislation which would outlaw "block booking" in the multi-million dollars industry in this country.

Block booking is the practice by which theater owners are required to rent films in groups instead of choosing individually those they wish to exhibit.

The tall film executive complained the proposed legislation would not accomplish its purposes and would cripple the industry "that has gone through the entire depression without one dollar of Government help."

Discussing foreign sales of American films, Kent said wars and fluctuating foreign exchange had taken a heavy penalty. His company, he testified, did a $1,250,000 annual business in Spain that "was completely wiped out by the civil war."

"A few weeks ago we were forced out of Italy by a state monopoly that proposed to buy our pictures at practically nothing and keep the profit for itself," Kent said. "We had been building a lucrative business in China after many years of effort which has been largely destroyed by the Japanese invasion.

"Our former prosperous business in Japan has wasted away to practically nothing."

Kent added that his company was forced to spend $2,500,000 this year in England to meet the requirements of British law and that "all but two or three of the eight companies are out of Germany."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, April 6.

PRIDE: Estelle Winwood, who just completed a road tour with Clifton Webb in "The Importance of Being Earnest," attended a charity luncheon together with Dame Sybil Thorndike . . . One of the socialite guests studied these two ladies of the theater and told the toastmaster, "They're charming, aren't they?" . . . "Look here," Miss Winwood assured her, "we are no more 'they' than you."

SOLUTION: Special Prosecutor Amen has subpenaed Allen MacDuffie of the Securities and Exchange Commission to tell all he knows about the McKesson & Robbins mess . . . MacDuffie is the one who exposed Coster and revealed that he really was ex-convict Musica . . . He first learned of Coster's identity when a mysterious phone caller reached him at his office, where MacDuffie was working on the McKesson & Robbins investigation . . . "I'd like to talk to you about Coster," the caller said . . . "Well, who are you?" MacDuffie asked . . . "I," was the almost accidental reply which sent Government agencies checking through the records, "am Musica's old lawyer."

SURPRISE: Mischa Auer broadcast for the "If I Had the Chance" program the other night . . . The screen actor arrived at the studio and immediately was told that before broadcasting he must first join the American Federation of Radio Actors and pay the initiation fee of $26 . . . Mr. Auer still hasn't recovered from the surprise. For he was broadcasting without pay.

DEFEAT: The fines assessed against Jack Benny and George Burns are not the only financial victims of the current smuggling cases . . . Albert Chaperau, whose arrest started this investigation, was a guest at the now famous dinner party at Mrs. Lauer's, where the maid overheard their schemes and turned informer . . . At that party Chaperau was to receive $22,500 to close a deal involving the bringing of a movie called "Tarakenova" to America . . . Mrs. Lauer was to have a participation interest.

CONFESSION: the Christianis, the high-wire balancing act which is a feature of the Ringling Brothers Circus, went to the Bertram Mills Circus, in London, on a loan, a few months ago . . . During their routines, they noticed a dark, bearded and distinguished face watching them from a box . . . After their performance, they were invited to meet that man—Haile Selassie . . . The man whose kingdom had been taken from him complimented the Christiani group upon the excellence of their high-wire act . . . "Italians, aren't you?" asked Selassie, mindful of the bombing of Addis Ababa . . . "That's the way I like to see Italians who go up into the air—harmless and entertaining."

CHATTER: That new evening tabloid which Ralph Ingersoll will publish will be called "Light." . . . Harry Warren, of the songwriting team of Warren and Dubin, now will team with Johnny Mercer . . . Burgess Meredith will be starred in a new radio show, written and directed by Ed Byron, to be called "Prosecuting Attorney." It will be based upon the career of Tom Dewey . . . Vincent Sheean is going to Hollywood . . . Sidney Solomon, who owned the Central Park Casino, will conduct a 1,200-seat restaurant at the Hall of Fashions exhibit at the Fair . . . Juanita Hansen, the ex-screen star, will join The Gang-Busters, an anti-crime crusade exhibit at the Fair. She'll lecture on the evil of drugs.

MISTAKE: Mrs. Boris Thomashefsky, whose husband helped bring the Yiddish Theater to America, now is working in the new Ginger Rogers picture . . . She moved into a new apartment house in Hollywood and, while her telephone was being installed, accepted her landlord's invitation to use his telephone . . . Mrs. Thomashefsky now is the most popular lady in that vicinity—all because her landlord has notified the neighbors that she receives many phone calls from Clark Gable . . . The frequent caller is Mr. Gable all right. But the "Mr. Gable" who calls her is not Clark, but her now-retired contemporary of the Yiddish stage—Max.

CRIME: District Attorney Dewey, who had announced a number of extortion-indictments against Lepke Buckhouse and Gurrah Shapiro, now has no faith in the reports that Buckhouse—America's No. 1 fugitive—plans to surrender . . . Shapiro surrendered more than a year ago, was convicted in the Federal Courts on another charge, but was kept at the House of Detention to await Dewey's prosecution . . . Last week, however, Gurrah secretly was removed to the Federal prison at Atlanta.

Pawns

The alarm manifested in Albania over the possibility of an Italian invasion is justified and understandable. A nation of not much more than a million inhabitants, with only a tiny army and no industrial resources to speak of, Albania is obviously in no position effectively to fight back. To be sure, she has an ally. But that ally happens to be the very nation that now threatens her existence.

What is true of Albania is also true of all other small nations of the continent, particularly those having common frontiers with the totalitarian powers. Every one of these states is now aware of the fact that its continued national existence is at the mercy of the Fascist dictators and that, at any moment, its fate may be the fate of Austria and Czecho-Slovakia.

These small countries are under temptation, therefore, to pursue one of two courses. The first is voluntarily to enter the orbit of the Berlin-Rome axis and in so doing save what they can of their national existence. But they can no longer be sure that even such servile action will save them. On the other hand, the temptation to seek shelter under the wing of the anti-Hitler bloc, which Great Britain and France are now trying to form, may bring upon their heads the very disaster they are seeking to avert.

The totalitarian nations can certainly be expected to do all in their power to prevent their encirclement. And one thing they can and will do is to intimidate those defenseless countries, whose course is still undetermined, in an effort to prevent them from joining any coalition hostile to Berlin and Rome.

Mussolini's Albanian maneuver, while adding nothing to Italy's resources or her military effectiveness, may be motivated entirely by the desire to impress Yugoslavia and Greece and the other Balkan states with the dangers of flirting with London and Paris.

Thus more than ever the small nations become the unhappy and unwilling but helpless pawns in the dangerous game of power politics now being played for such tremendous stakes in the Old World.

An Awkward Device

Chairman Altmeyer of the Social Security Board has informed the House Ways and Means Committee that he is opposed to any reduction in the 3 per cent pay-roll levy for unemployment compensation. Instead of lowering taxes he urges general liberalization of State unemployment insurance laws. Since liberalization would entail increased outlays, Mr. Altmeyer no doubt fears that an immediate lowering of the Federal levy would cause many States to cling to their present meager scale of benefits. Furthermore, it might seriously weaken the financial soundness of the insurance systems of some States to reduce the pay-roll taxes.

It happens, however, that the District of Columbia and various States find the 3 per cent pay-roll tax more than adequate to meet current demands. Last year benefit payments in the District amounted to less than 27 per cent of the receipts from pay-roll taxes. Even if the present insurance system were liberalized, as it should be, it is estimated that the additional cost of desirable modifications would not be great. It seems absurd that overtaxed District employers should be making payments which are not needed for unemployment benefits, and which under the law cannot be used for any other purpose.

Certainly in case of the District a reduction in the pay-roll levy seems to be justified. Accordingly a bill was recently introduced into the House to relieve local employers of the obligation to pay the 3 per cent levy. From the viewpoint of the Federal authorities, however, there are serious objections to any changes in the present Federal tax. If exceptions were made for the District, pressure to lower the rate for the entire country would result. And varying Federal levies from State to State would entail discrimination that would doubtless invalidate the tax.

In short, the Federal tax to finance unemployment insurance is an extremely awkward device. If we had a Nation-wide Federal system of insurance, this excise could be adjusted from time to time to cover necessary costs and leave a margin for contingencies. As matters stand, a levy that is too high for one State may be too low for another. And, as the system is on a State basis, there is no way of using the surplus of the one to cover the deficiencies of the other.

It is one of those embarrassing dilemmas that, in default of a practicable solution, naturally inclines officials connected with the Social Security Board toward inaction.

Funds For The District

There are many commendable features in the 1940 District appropriations bill passed by the House yesterday. That measure carries funds for a number of urgently needed improvements, while keeping the budget total substantially below the sum appropriated for the current year. Most of the economies have been effected in administrative expenses. It remains to be seen whether essential community service will thus be impaired.

Especially gratifying is the provision of funds for 82 additional employes at Gallinger Hospital. At the same time, the burden on Gallinger should be lightened by the increase of $64,000 in the fund for care of charity patients in private hospitals. Together these items should go a long way toward lifting Gallinger out of the class of second-rate municipal hospitals to which long years of neglect have assigned it.

Other credit marks must be given for the provisions to employ 26 additional policemen, to purchase a site and make plans for a new National Training School for Girls, to effect a partial consolidation of the District's makeshift recreational system, and to grant funds for a new central library. The preliminary move to give Washington an arterial highway linking main routes between Maryland and Virginia will also meet with general approval.

Against these favorable points, however, some deficiencies stand out in sharp contrast. The appropriation for the proposed new library is left in an uncertain status because authorization to proceed with the project was eliminated on a point of order. In view of the District reorganization bill soon to be presented to the House, it might have been better to have deferred action on the merger of school and municipal playgrounds.

Foremost among the deficiencies of the bill is its relief appropriation placed at $900,000 in spite of the findings of Burdette G. Lewis, the special investigator hired by Congress, that this sum is entirely inadequate. After all practicable economies have been made, Mr. Lewis concluded, there will still be needed an additional sum of more than $859,000 to finance long-range plans of rescuing the unemployed. But the committee flagrantly ignored his advice. Indeed, it even eliminated his testimony from the transcript of hearings released to the public. Nor did it offer any explanation of its own for this arbitrary procedure.

There is a good deal to be said for the equalization of benefits paid by the WPA and the public assistance division in Washington. But it is the WPA arrangement and not that of the PAD which is faulty. "Wages" are fixed by the WPA without regard for the number of dependents who must be supported from any individual's pay check. In other words, benefits are not measured by actual need. On the whole, direct relief grants are lower than WPA wages. But to restrict such benefits to $48 per month in all cases, regardless of the size of the family, will certainly entail severe hardship.

Even more serious is the refusal to appropriate any funds for jobless breadwinners who cannot obtain WPA employment. With the inevitable curtailment of the WPA, this category of destitute families is almost certain to increase. For Congress to close its eyes to their plight after an impartial investigation has revealed their suffering would be utterly inexcusable.

This pursuit of an irresponsible relief policy in the District is undoubtedly one of the major reasons for the resignation of Elwood Street as director of public welfare. No doubt there are other reasons why Mr. Street is eager to return to the relatively placid task of directing Community Chest activities. But the consistent refusal of Congress to vote enough funds for operation of an efficient relief system is ample justification for the step he has taken. Under these circumstances the Board of Public Welfare may have difficulty finding a high caliber director willing to face such handicaps.

The FHA Record

During March the Federal Housing Administration reports that all its records for home financing were broken. Small-home mortgages accepted for appraisal totaled $121,700,000 compared with the previous high of $104,000,000 for last August. By the end of March home mortgages to the amount of $1,450,000,000 had been insured, while total insurance including that on property improvement loans amounted to $2,300,000,000.

At the current rate of operations the present $3,000,000,000 limit upon the amount of outstanding insured mortgages will be reached long before the end of the coming fiscal year. Consequently, business and financial interests, with few exceptions, have heartily supported legislation to extend the provisions of the housing act and raise the statutory limit of outstanding insurable mortgages. While the FHA asked that this limit be increased to $6,000,000,000, the provision for a $4,000,000,000 maximum contained in the bill reported out by the House Banking and Currency Committee would enable that organization to operate freely during the coming year. The larger sum was intended to permit FHA to continue indefinitely without further enabling legislation.

Congress should act quickly on this proposal so that the FHA may plan its financing program for the months ahead without being hampered by legislative uncertainties. Since the FHA is not a spending organization there are no considerations of expense to delay action. Moreover, there is no other New Deal agency which has done as much as the FHA to stimulate private business activity in a particularly depressed industry.

Time For Revision

So long as the outlook for a peaceful settlement of the dispute between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. appeared bright, it seemed wise for Congress to defer action on proposed amendments to the national labor relations act. But a month has passed since President Roosevelt made his appeal to the two organizations and nothing has been accomplished. Negotiations have just been suspended for an indefinite period, and it seems doubtful whether they will be resumed in the near future.

Under the circumstances there is no excuse for further delay in considering plans for revising the Wagner act. The Senate Labor Committee has already voted to begin hearings next week and Chairman Norton of the House Labor Committee has indicated that she will not oppose a similar course on the House side.

The injustice resulting from the one-sided character of the law has been magnified by the persistence of factionalism which subjects employers to injuries and inconveniences against which they have no redress. This inequality before the law was brought forcibly home by a recent decision handed down by the District Court of Appeals in the Zirkin case. Through no fault of his own the employer in this instance was made the victim of a struggle between competing unions. The court held that only the NLRB could end the factional union dispute by certification of the representative bargaining unit. And as the employer had no right under the law to appeal to the board to render a decision, the court concluded that he had no legal remedy to protect his business against injury.

So long as the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. continue to wage war against each other, the administration of the Wagner act will be especially difficult, no matter how intelligently it may be revised. However, the difficulties will be sensibly diminished if the law is amended with a view to giving employers as well as employes a fair deal.

It is especially important, in view of the labor schism, that employers should have the right to invoke the jurisdiction of the board for settlement of disputes concerning rights of representation. Not only would such direct appeals obviate the hardships inflicted upon employers by inter-union rivalries. Employer suspicion and antagonism would also be minimized if the NLRB were recognized as a protector of employer as well as employe rights under collective bargaining agreements.

Dr. Putnam's 40 Years

The warm tributes paid Dr. Herbert Putnam this week on his completion of 40 years as librarian of Congress were as fitting as they were well-deserved.

In the four decades since he assumed his present post, the Library of Congress has made tremendous strides. Today it can without exaggeration be called, as it has been called, "the greatest of the world's great libraries"—one which, in the words of President Roosevelt, is "universal in scope and national in service."

For this constructive growth in size, function and usefulness, no small measure of credit belongs to Dr. Putnam. A man of broad vision and great learning, he has made the Library of Congress an institution of which all Americans have reason to be proud.

WPA Jokes

From the Hartford Courant.

The American Federation of Actors has announced a positive prohibition against jokes directed by its members against the WPA and its employes. The regulation was hardly necessary; one WPA joke is very much like another, and the main point on which they are based—slow motion—is by this time almost as stale as "Who was the lady I seen you with last night?" There was a time when the concept of a man resting on a shovel raised laughter; today it is good only for a yawn.

But it is not only over-familiarity that has dulled the point of the WPA joke. Hartford, at least, has had one exciting demonstration of the fact that WPA employes can work amazingly well when their hearts are in their jobs. Last September when the flood waters threatened to repeat the disaster of 1936, hundreds—at times, thousands—of WPA workers slaved day and night to build the sandbag dike along Sheldon street and Van Dyke avenue that kept the flood out of the city. No one who saw the devoted work by the WPA men during those hours when no one knew whether or not the river could be held back can smile at even the freshest gag concerning the inertia of the employes of the Works Progress Administration.

Novel Peace Plan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am neither priest nor prophet, but I recognize in Europe today the psychology which inevitably leads to war. Great Britain's cry, "Stop Hitler," will be as fruitless as her cry to halt Bismarck in his military preparations for war, or Wilhelm when he was on the march. They have the same war psychology in Europe today, the same economic chaos and the same overpopulated territory.

Even if Germany's colonies are returned to her, she will be no better off than she was in 1914. Now Germany and Italy need gold. Italy needs it to colonize Ethiopia and to carry on foreign commerce with other nations. Germany needs her colonies so that much of her excess population may migrate; but without gold for this purpose and to carry on foreign commerce, her economic condition is quite hopeless.

Germany, with her 80,000,000 people crowded into a territory no larger than our State of Texas, and Italy, with her 40,000,000 people crowded in a territory not much larger than our State of Florida, are subjected to great economic pressure. This condition must be relieved or there will be a continuation of the old World War, with a little different alignment, but more destructive and cruel.

Crying for Hitler to stop is very much like shouting at the furnace to prevent a boiler explosion. Attempting to corral Germany and Italy with a military alliance is like waving a red flag in front of an angry bull. Another war to stop war would be fruitless. Then where is the remedy? Here is my formula:

1. The return of Germany's colonies taken from her by the Treaty of Verseilles.
2. That England and France resume payment of their war debt installments to the United States.
3. That the United States purchase from Germany and Italy new, modern military equipment, including airplanes and submarines, to the extent of $1,000,000,000. That this equipment be paid for in gold after the delivery and approval. That the contracts shall be divided between Germany and Italy on a ratio in proportion to their populations.

This plan would cost the United States nothing, while it would save the world from another calamity—another Dance of Death.

Education For Prisoners

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Various things which could be done in the District penal institutions to improve the morale of the prisoners are neglected—things that would mean little cost. These things are important if the chief aim of the institutions is to build the men up mentally, morally and physically and turn them out better men and citizens than when they entered.

At the Occoquan Workhouse, housing about 1,200 men, there is no library and there is also no school. From about 5 to 9 p. m. each day—and, of course, a much longer period Saturdays and Sundays—these men are idle, with nothing to do but play cards, talk and read (if they have reading matter). As the workhouse furnishes no reading matter, a few men have books and papers sent by relatives and friends while the rest must borrow from the few or read nothing.

Moreover, the publications on hand are usually the cheapest fiction, detective and crime stories, etc. It goes without saying that thousands of Washington people would donate literature for these prisoners. And it would not hurt the Treasury if a few dollars were spent to buy books of merit, vocational, civic and other instructive volumes, and put them in a library available to the inmates.

If the objection is raised that the inmates at Occoquan are mainly short-timers, serving 15, 30 or 90 days, the answer is that a large share of these men are recidivists and have served several terms there. The fact that so many of them keep going back shows that the policy in force does not set them right and renabilitate them. Good reading matter and schooling would be important factors in accomplishing these ends. A school could be conducted easily in the auditorium building in which movie shows are held two nights a week. There are numerous intelligent prisoners who could act as teachers under supervision.

Brickbats For New Deal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I, for one, am getting rather fed up seeing President Roosevelt so often pictured in the news as standing proudly on the "New Deal's record of six years of progress" in the betterment of the average American.

Any careful, impartial examination of that record proves that the Administration's "six-year plan," with all its "humanitarianism," has been anything but beneficial to the country as a whole. I think the great masses of the people are at last waking up to this fact and the New Dealers are finding it more and more difficult every day to defend Roosevelt "progress."

Let us recall just a few of the most important New Deal acts: The unconstitutional NRA, the attempt to make another rubber stamp out of our Supreme Court, refusal openly and publicly to condemn the C. I. O. sit-down lawlessness, the attempted autocratic New Deal bureaucracy, involvement of the United States again in foreign affairs by implying that America's frontiers are on the Rhine.

Mr. Roosevelt has already more than doubled our national debt, although he strongly protested against governmental extravagance before he was elected. But, then, what can we expect? As Governor of New York he soon had that State millions in the red. We might have known that he and his brain-trusters would sink Uncle Sam even more deeply and hopelessly in debt!

G. R. TAGGART.

Good Friday Observance

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The advent of another Good Friday must remind Washington residents that the business and civil interests of our National Capital do not join with our religious institutions in the definite recognition of this solemn day to the extent to be noted in a growing number of our other great cities.

The Washington Catholic Evidence Guild, which for the past eight years has been conducting Good Friday services for everybody in Franklin Park, cordially invites religious organizations of every denomination and business, social and political organizations as well, to join with the guild now in a movement to the end that in 1940 the hours between 12 and 3 p. m. be set aside for the commemoration of the supreme sacrifice of Jesus Christ on the cross. Our National Government, through President Roosevelt, has indicated the importance of religion in the life of a free people.

Here is an opportunity to give public expression of that importance. Let us add Nation-wide recognition of Good Friday to our peculiarly American and most laudable Thanksgiving Day. Separation of church and state does not mean the ignoring of religion by the state. Definite encouragement of the religious life and its expression among all the people is entirely consonant with our theory of the best relation between these two great societies in America.

Surely in these dark hours in the history of mankind we need very much to learn that lesson of renunciation of self and giving of self for others which is so perfectly shown to men in the death of Christ upon the Cross of Calvary.

REV. CHARLES A. HART.

The Contrast Between 1893 And 1939

To the Editor of the Post:—We were much interested in reading Walter Lippmann in his "Traveling at Home," and Irvin Finck in his letter on "Land for Unemployed." Perhaps that which caused greater interest to the writer was that he lived and passed through "the Cleveland panic" which started in 1893. And perhaps one great reason as to why the panic at that time did not have the direful effect of the present "depression," was that President Cleveland did not call in "brain trusters" and "depression busters."

Truly the panic was fearful, crops were short and grain prices low, with many thrown out of employment. We raised our corn, hauled it to the market and sold it for 8 cents per bushel—our wheat for 25 and 30 cents per bushel. As to cattle and hogs the bottom fell our of the market. But we did not "kill pigs." We did sell our hogs for from a half to 1 cent per pound, and we who had more pigs than we could care for, gave them to our neighbors who had no pigs. Cattle were very cheap, but there were no cattle sales. We were not preparing for a "depression." We lived and tried to get rid of "the panic."

Neither did we have farmers rushing to Washington in an effort to get relief and loans. Each took care of himself and did what he could to help his unfortunate neighbors. Times were truly hard, something that we had never seen before, but we never lost our heads.

And the best of all was that we had a thoughtful man at the head of our Government, one who had arisen from poverty, and one who had wisdom not to set aside our land laws. Free Government lands could be had for the homesteading, or timber-claiming, the result being that thousands who were out of employment got hold of a team and wagon and started for the West to get land. It took only a trifle to homestead 160 acres, and the thousands were not afraid to make an effort to help themselves.

Agriculture along the lines of nature has always been the builder to prosperity, and the sooner our people get the thought, "back to the land," making their own way, the sooner shall we be the happy people our fathers were.

D. PAUL ZIEGLER.

The Post Impressionist

Bishop Brent: A Memoir

THERE MUST HAVE BEEN some quality out of the ordinary about this man that should have caused so many people all over the world to pause spontaneously to commemorate the anniversary of his passing.

We knew the bishop first in Manila, and after that in China, and then at The Hague, and Geneva, and crossing the Atlantic and at odd places up and down the world, for 20 years and more. He had asked us to visit him, but when we arrived in Manila we found that he was away. He had left word, however, that the young chaplain who lived with him would look after us.

Just before sunset one evening the bishop returned from the mountains, where he had been trying to make good Episcopalians out of the Igorottes. He was in khaki and looked very tired and not at all like a bishop—but rather like a soldier or a planter at the end of a hard day's work. He had been hiking through the jungle and the steep mountain passes and had the look of coming from a long way off. His thoughts seemed to be with something he had left behind—perhaps his troublesome Igorottes, who for the moment were more real to him than his own drawing room.

Yet when I think of the bishop today it is in his plain black clothes with a gold chain about his neck and the big cross hanging down in front. And the great amethyst ring on his finger, which hung loose and heavy, and which he constantly turned. These outward symbols of the church gave the bishop a certain advantage—but at the same time made life complicated. When men marked the cross and clerical dress they grew slightly embarrassed.

But it drew the women. Most clergymen seem to have this curious hypnotic influence over women. This is true with ordinary clergymen—but the bishop was a superclergyman. The women wanted to confess their sins, and to be guided, and given advice and all to end with prayer. It was a big order. And the bishop must often have been perplexed and somewhat disturbed. Because, after all, which many people forgot, he was a bachelor and a very human man, who liked the companionship of women and was devotedly fond of children.

It is also true that in some ways the bishop was like ordinary men, with personal ambitions and fondness for worldly things—small things, like other men. He liked big houses and important people. But at the same time one felt he wore a hair shirt because of his weakness for these temporal things. His manner of life was simplicity itself. His home was without ostentation. He never smoked or drank or even took coffee. He drank milk.

But a great spiritual understanding and a burning faith had been put into this man. It was perhaps the combination of the compelling light within and the rather homely body that encompassed it that made it easy for people to approach him. His outside was so simple and plain and his manner so unassuming. He had, besides, keen wit, and loved a good story and had a disarming chuckle that was as infectious as surprising.

The bishop had promised to take H. a tour of the Philippines for the purpose of gathering opium data. We had one of the Government Coast Guard boats and were gone two weeks. We went farther and farther south and the weather grew hot and hotter and the air more wet and steaming. The boat was small and we were always running into the tail end of typhoons and near-typhoons that made our little boat leap about in the hot mists and foaming waves. Sometimes we landed at uncharted ports and were carried through the surf in chairs by natives. The bishop and H. interviewed doctors, and Government people, and missionaries as to how opium go into the islands, from where—and how much, who smuggled it and who smoked it, and a thousand other questions, all to be summed up in preparation for the conference to be held at Shanghai after Christmas.

We left Manila Christmas night for Shanghai. This gave H. a chance to whip the American program into final shape and prepare for the conference before the other delegates arrived. The bishop was the last to reach Shanghai. He had wanted H. to be chairman of the commission because of his greater knowledge of the subject. But H. had proposed the bishop's name before his arrival and although the British had expected to fill the chair they yielded in the end and the bishop was unanimously appointed.

The bishop sat on a raised platform facing the hall, with a table before him like an altar. Behind him were three long windows through which, over his shoulder, he could see the distant Whangpoo River filled with ships from the four corners of the earth. Afterward the bishop told me he was so full of qualms at the position thrust upon him that he longed to slip out of the window and board the first ship sailing for the Philippines.

But, as a matter of fact, the bishop made an admirable chairman and unconsciously raised the whole level of the meeting. The fact of his being a religious man seemed to evoke personal response, principally from the non-Christian delegations and the representatives of the great Christian states of Europe, whose dominant thought in connection with the opium traffic had hitherto been based upon revenue rather than righteousness.

So altogether it had been an inspiration to make Bishop Brent presiding officer. After the close of the sessions the bishop returned to the Philippines and H. to the Department of State. This marked the opening chapter of America's long fight against the opium evil.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Via Villard

"A HUMAN BEING possessed of a tremendous sense of wrong that completely mastered him"—that's the way Oswald Garrison Villard, in his autobiography, "Fighting Years" (Harcourt, Brace, $3.75), describes his own grandfather, William Lloyd Garrison, the most inspired, most effective and most intolerant of abolitionists. The memory of that grandfather is the key to Oswald Villard's own character. "It is one of my failings, I know," he says, "but I guess I never have been able to work happily with men or women who were incapable of hot indignation at something or other—whether small or big, whether it stirred me personally or not, if only it were something."

No one ever complained of any incapacity for indignation in Oswald Garrison Villard. This autobiography is a stirring chronicle of close to a half century of impassioned, and often effective, indignations. But it is also, and most winningly, a chronicle of the sunny family life which was the background of those indignations. Villard wanted other men to be as good as his own father and mother and grandfather, and in the patterns of goodness which those forebears had outlined for him. He felt himself sprung from a tribe of saints, and his slogan was saintnesse oblige.

HIGH POINT in that Villard childhood was the driving of the last spike in the Northern Pacific Railroad, at Gold Creek, Mont., in 1883. Oswald was 11, and he loved the excitement of it. His father took to Montana with him, for the historic rite, 500 guests, in six special trains. Among them were two future chief justices of England, two earls and a couple of lords; assorted German dignitaries; Grant, Sherman and a host of lesser American generals, and the cream of the world's newspapermen. President Arthur met the party at Minneapolis. It wasn't a gold spike, as legend says, which joined the tracks from the two oceans; it was iron, and is rusty today, as Oswald Villard, who treasures it in his safe, knows.

Two years teaching history at Harvard convinced young Villard that he wanted to follow the family tradition and become a newspaperman. First, he apprenticed himself to Talcott Williams' Philadelphia Press, there learning something of the degradation of which an American newspaper can be capable. Six months with it taught him "exactly what a newspaper office ought not to be." Then he became president of his father's New York Evening Post, when Godkin and Horace White were its editors.

The Evening Post of those days never had more than 35,000 circulation, but its influence was amazing. Gov. David Hill, who hated it, said: "I don't care anything about the handful of mugwumps who read it in New York City. The trouble with the damned sheet is that every editor in the State reads it." He might well have said, every editor of consequence in the country. It fought a host of historic battles.

OSWALD VILLARD'S life story is studded with historic friendships—and with equally historic hostilities. None of the recent crop of journalistic biographies can match this crusader-editor's stories—for none of the correspondent-authors have been, in any comparable sense, actors on the stage. Theodore Roosevelt, Charles Evans Hughes, Woodrow Wilson, Ramsay MacDonald, were in turn first Villard's heroes then his friends, finally his abominations. He coined for Wilson the historic phrase, "too proud to fight"; he rephrased for Henry Ford the slogan, "Get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas." And what stories he had to tell about those men!

They are history, they are gossip, they are the work of a master story teller. Much of Villard's genius lies in his genuine and infectious excitement. After almost four decades he is still agog when telling how he confronted E. G. Bellairs, henchman of Leonard Wood, with the man's own criminal record; how Henry C. Frick, the steel magnate, recalled to him that early morning conference in the White House in 1904 when, as Frick put it, "we bought" Theodore Roosevelt "and then he didn't stay bought." You can see the cringing politician when Villard tells how, in 1910, he drove the Republican leader of the State Senate out of public life. You can see the bloody streets of Munich in Villard's stories of his experiences in the revolution in 1919.

THE WORLD WAR turned the current of Oswald Garrison Villard's life more, I think, than even he realizes. He stood by his own, his mother's, his grandfather's, peace principles. For that he was ostracized by society and forced out of his newspaper, and he found himself vilified as if he were a traitor and a Red. That experience gave him new insights and a new circle of friendships. He still sees his embattled post-war years as editor of The Nation as a continuation of the old Garrison-Villard tradition. I think they were more than that, and do him more honor than mere hereditary loyalty could possibly do. They created a new Villard tradition, all his own.

It is hard for me to judge the campaigns of those years, or Villard's account of them. Through the first post-war decade I was one of his "lieutenants," and no chief was ever more generous, more inspiring, more lovable or more exasperating. We all—it was a great staff to work with—shared Villard's embattled passions. If today some of his judgments of individuals seem harsh, it is because he was ever, even in his gloomiest moments, at heart a Utopian American optimist. He expected too much of men in political office . . . Many editors have written in behalf of the abstract ideal of freedom of the press; no editor in my time has acted so consistently, and at such cost, to retain the living, flaming meaning of that phrase. This book is the distillation of a lifetime as a free-press man.

Baruch's Statement On Neutrality

A partial text of the statement by Bernard M. Baruch on proposed neutrality legislation follows:

A sound neutrality law will prove a definite aid to peace and, at the moment, an aid to the preservation of our method of life, system of government and the flow of our trade and commerce. A neutrality measure therefore, is an integral part of our protection and preparedness. But, neutrality does not mean the certainty of bringing about what we all want—to stay out of war . . .

We dare not wholly abandon the protection of neutral rights. It is unsound to believe that if we hold no dealings with the actual belligerents we shall avoid the friction which makes for war . . .

To prohibit one type of export (war weapons) without prohibiting the other (food) is a legalistic formula that I think is devoid of real justice. To embargo the sale of implements of war, under conditions that now exist, might be the means of cementing into power the stronger nations and reducing weaker nations to slavery or worse. We are trying to meet conditions existent at the moment. We are not trying to legislate for all time to come. If, when, and as the circumstances that now justify this revision should change, the law can be changed. I see no difference in time of war, between the sale of life-sustaining wheat and death-dealing guns. Wheat is essential for the armies but were we to keep wheat away for that reason, the deprivation might become a mass-killing, particularly of women and children.

Doubts if Law Can Ban Friction

It may be doubted if any law, however wise, can do away with friction. It is just as easy to engender disputes over wheat, copper or cotton, scrap steel and pig-iron (essential to non-combatants as well as to armed forces) as over sales of ammunition and artillery. . . .

Both the old law and the new bill carry on the "cash and carry" idea. I think I was the first to suggest that, or its twin "come and get it" which is more descriptive of the plan. It treats all nations alike. Each has an opportunity to get what it needs from us provided it takes title at the port of shipment, and provided further, that the shipment is not made in American craft. Of course, it is obvious that this will largely limit sales of supplies to those able to pay for them and able to move them, but after all, that rule holds good in normal commerce. I do not see that we are required to adjust all inequalities of this sort. If that is our intention we may as well face it and go to war. . . .

As we now suppose, this rule would prejudice Germany and Italy in favor of France and England. Most of our individual sympathies run that way but when we—not as individuals but as a nation—let our policies in international trade follow our sympathies, we may be idealistic but we are not neutral.

Furthermore, on the continent of Asia, most of our individual sympathies run to China rather than to Japan and here the proposed rule works the other way. If we, tomorrow, recognized a fact as obvious as the sun in the sky—that a state of war exists between Japan and China, and so invoked this rule—we would be favoring Japan and prejudicing China. We have avoided that by refusing to recognize an existing condition of war. But it certainly was an uncomfortable position to have recognized undeclared war in Spain where Germany and Italy were involved and not to recognize it in Asia where China was involved. . . .

Now, when whole nations have become instruments of war and war itself an impact of civilizations . . . it is as important to supply and sustain the civilian contingent as the military contingent. Continuity of supply of every product in constant volume is absolutely necessary to maintain a great nation in war. . . .

We have now an absolute prohibition of the export of lethal weapons. Now, on the essential principles we are discussing here—the principles of neutrality or keeping out of war—this has nothing to do with either. It springs from another high purpose, which is to prevent our country from selling any kind of weapon with which men kill each other. It is a rebuke to war as an institution. It will not prevent war, take us in, or keep us out of war. If we want to make a gesture, let us do so but let us not do it under any idea that it aids either neutrality or peace. If we do not supply the weapons, other nations will. . . .

As I have stated earlier, chemicals, petroleum, steel and rubber are just as essential to the mass-murder of modern war as machine guns or airplanes, or, for that matter, motor trucks, locomotives and optical glass.

It is for this reason that I am now willing to include everything in the cash and carry plan. It is also for this reason that I think we should approach this discussion recognizing plainly that any economic restriction or discrimination is harmful to some belligerent, and should proceed with great caution.

I understand that some of the pressure for this legislation is the reverse of a wish to treat all nations alike. It has been suggested that the aggressor nations, if not halted, will start a European war, that if there is a European war we can't keep out of it, and that therefore the only way to keep out of war is now to engage in economic war against them to prevent their starting a European War.

On that theory, if our economic war fails we will be in military war, and I think that if we make economic war that conclusion is inevitable. I am not sure that even with the utmost economic pressure we could prevent European war if it were determined upon by the aggressors.

I also question the theory that we must take part in any European war. . . . I venture to believe that this country or this hemisphere can escape involvement in European conflict, and we can do this without burying our head in the sand. We can still raise our voice against faithlessness and brutality.

You will hear it said that if we do not go in of our own volition our turn will come next. It is true that our barriers of seawater have been narrowed by science and invention. But they are still formidable. It is incredible that without almost complete domination of the water and sky of both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, a military attack in truly threatening force could be launched against this hemisphere from either Europe or Asia of such resistance as this and other American, if not European, nations could offer. . . .

Our defeat here certainly can never happen if we maintain a defense adequate to prevent it. It is far easier for us to maintain such a defense than it is for any of the threatening nations to build up an offensive force sufficient to overcome it. . . .

All of these efforts toward neutrality bear on the future of our foreign commerce. If we serve notice now on the nations of the world—those with ships and credit and those without—that the instant they suffer the misfortune of war—innocently or not—we will cut them off from any trade to the extent here proposed, how many of them will feel wholly confident in relying on us for necessary supplies in peace? Why would they not seek other suppliers, more dependable in both peace and war?

We must realize that what we mete out, we will get back. From the time we become involved in war, England, adopting our rule, might shut us off from our vital war supplies of tin, rubber, nickel and tea, except as we would come and get it in our own ships, some of it half-way around the world. . . .

World Commerce Being Killed

The bearing of unnecessarily harsh restrictions on the new reciprocal trade treaties is also plain. If we are to avoid the commerce-destroying bi-lateral barter-system and to attempt to break down trade barriers and restore the flow of free private commerce by reciprocal agreements, we should also avoid all possible new barriers to trade, such as any proposal to restrict all exports within unnecessarily narrow and, to some nations, impossible limits. . . .

The commerce of the world upon which rests both the peace and prosperity of the world is dying. It is being killed by increasing restrictions of barter, tariffs, quotas and self-containment. With one hand, through Mr. Secretary Hull's efforts we are attempting to restore it. With the other, through some of the extremist proposals and attitudes on this legislation, we threaten to restrict it further. Such a course I regard as unwise.

While I agree with the cash and carry plan, these thoughts lead me to raise a question on the sanctions in these bills. They make shipment, or transportation to belligerents a felony. What we are really trying to say is that we are ready to abandon our old rights as neutrals under international law. But in order to abandon them is it necessary also to abandon our commerce?

Under the peace act it would be a crime to transport to a belligerent under the American flag even in a case where there is no risk at all. We might be abandoning much or even all of our shipping trade for nothing. Would it not serve all of our purposes in such cases not absolutely to prohibit such shipments but to serve notice on our people and the world that the American flag will not protect them? Should there be flexibility in these laws, which in appropriate circumstances might be determined by the Secretary of State, we could then say: "Ship at your peril," rather than to say: "You can't ship at all." . . .

Low-Cost Housing

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Dark Horse

WHILE VICE PRESIDENT John Nance Garner loyally avers that the houses he has built in his home town for considerably less than two FHA-insured houses are just as good except for "doodads," a dark-horse candidate for the title of low-cost house-builder has been discovered.

The dark-horse is the Farm Security Administration in the Department of Agriculture. Farm Security is the successor and heir of the Resettlement Administration, the subsistence homesteads division of the Department of Interior, and the old rural rehabilitation section of the old Federal Emergency Relief Administration—all three of which conducted some rather expensive experiments in housing during the early years of the Roosevelt Administration.

For the last two years, however, Farm Security has been working its way toward the rock-bottom of housing costs. On the statistical record, it seems to have come near to that theoretical bottom, for its costs make even the frugal builder of Uvalde sound a trifle spendthrifty.

Last year on its Soutneast Missouri resettlement project, Farm Security built five four-room houses for $930 each and 89 five-room houses at an average cost of $1,105 each. These were farm houses, without bathroom, but "substantially built," according to the Farm Security housing specialists. They have insulated walls and ceilings, double floors, and each has a screened work porch and a small front porch.

Low Costs Attained By Mass Construction

THESE exceptionally low costs were attained by the use of mass construction methods. The lumber was "pre-cut" in a small portable sawmill in about one-sixth of the time ordinarily required for handsawing. The wall panels and gable ends were nailed together on the ground, then hoisted into place and caulked.

Using conventional construction methods, however, Farm Security has been able to get the houses built by private contractors for prices ranging upward from $1,165. Five houses of a slightly more commodious five-room design are now being built for Farm Security by a private contractor in Greenville, in northeast Texas, for about $1,300 each. These include two porches, bathroom spaces (but no plumbing), double floors, the best grade of shingles, and three coats of paint on the outside walls.

Low-cost housing is a kind of sideline of the Farm Security Administration. Most of the tenants whom it is helping to become farm owners are settled on farms with old houses and buildings which can be reconditioned. But it has to do a certain amount of new construction, and its houses are designed for durability, as well as low initial cost, since they are supposed to last 40 years with a minimum of maintenance and repairs. The clients of Farm Security pay only 4.3 per cent in interest and amortization on their loans, which include land and essential equipment in addition to necessary farm buildings and a house.

Fewer 'Doodads' Lower Expenses

FARM SECURITY recently published a booklet containing plans for low-cost houses which it has worked out in Texas and Oklahoma. It contains 12 plans for houses which are supposed to cost from $1,165 to $1,525 when put up by private contractors.

Farm Security is not projecting itself into any rivalry with John N. Garner. Its offices in Washington have no data on the plans, specifications and costs of Mr. Garner's houses in Uvalde. Possibly the Farm Security houses cost less than Mr. Garner's, because they have fewer "doodads."

But the Farm Security housing experts make no secret of their belief that they have demonstrated how to build substantial farm houses at prices below any attained before by Government or private industry. Many of their designs would be just as suitable for small city and town houses, available to Mr. Garner, of course, if he wants a few pointers on economical housing.

FHA Specifications Unnecessarily Rigid?

CONTRARY TO the apparent impression of some of Mr. Garner's friends, the FHA—Federal Housing Administration—does not build houses. It insures mortgages on houses. The two FHA "demonstration houses" in Uvalde were built by private interests. To obtain an FHA mortgage, however, a house must come up to certain specifications. Mr. Garner seems to think that the FHA specifications are unnecessarily rigid for Uvalde. However, as both of the FHA-insured houses in controversy have been sold, at least two citizens of Uvalde apparently thought the houses were worth the price. Applications for FHA insurance on small houses in the Nation as a whole reached a new high-time record of almost $122,000,000 last month.

FHA has, however, an entry for the low-cost housing prize. It is the prefabricated house devised by Frank Watson and put up in Fort Wayne, Ind. The estimated cost in Fort Wayne was about $1,400, including land, landscaping, plumbing, etc. This includes about $500 for WPA labor, which is a subsidy under the Fort Wayne plan. The Fort Wayne houses rent for $2.50 each per week. FHA experts think the Fort Wayne costs could be reduced in a town with a warmer climate and lower labor costs—such as Uvalde.

Possibly Mr. Garner—and the rest of us—could get a few pointers on economical housing from FHA's Mr. Watson also.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Freedom Of Action

This country wants peace, security and freedom to live its own life the way it wishes to live it. These three things may be compatible, but there are times in history when they are not. The second two are a definition of the first. The absence of war, accompanied by a condition of extreme insecurity and with the conditions of life dictated by somebody else or some other nation or some combination of nations, is not peace. It is either an armistice between wars or permanent slavery.

THIS COUNTRY has a very good chance of maintaining peace, security and freedom to live in the kind of society we, ourselves, wish to make. The condition of our maintaining these three, which together mean real peace, is freedom of action. Therefore, we ought to repeal the neutrality bill. We ought not to repeal it because we want to make the world safe for democracy. We ought not to repeal it because we want to stand behind the British and French. We ought not to repeal it because we want to be the Galahad of the world.

We ought to repeal it because through it we restrict our own actions in a world where we cannot possibly know what is going to happen from one day to the next.

U. S. Should Make No Commitments

WE OUGHT, in the second place, to maintain our freedom of action by making no definite commitments at this time. I think it would greatly help our freedom of action if the President would remove Mr. Kennedy from his post in Great Britain.

We need an American Ambassador. We had Walter Hines Page there before the last war. What we need there at present is another Charles Francis Adams.

The present British policy is still not at all clear. Both the British and the French are still being run by exactly the same people and exactly the same cabinets who are responsible for the present state of affairs that their countries are in. It is very difficult to have faith that France will pursue a straightforward policy as long as M. Bonnet is foreign minister, or that Britain may not in some fashion repeat the procedure of September, as long as Mr. Chamberlain is prime minister and Sir John Simon and Sir Samuel Hoare are in the cabinet and Anthony Eden is not.

Chamberlain's attempt at this time to unite all the small countries and Russia in an anti-aggression front—that is to say to restore the system of collective security which he, Sir John Simon and Sir Samuel Hoare did so much to destroy—may succeed. But Mr. Chamberlain's changing his mind does not automatically create a new situation. It puts the Poles in a very strong bargaining position, and exactly what the Polish policy is is not at all clear, from reading the Polish press.

Poles Play 2 Ends Against Middle

OFFICIALLY, judging from the press, Poland is still playing both ends against the middle. We still do not know whether Chamberlain has purchased a few days or months of armistice or laid the foundations of a new system strong enough to maintain peace.

The editorial of the Times of London, which hints that some concessions might be made, has been officially repudiated, but so was that other Times editorial suggesting that it might be a good thing to detach the Sudetenland—at the same time that Mr. Chamberlain was repeating his pledges to France and the French government was insisting on its intention of standing by Czecho-Slovakia.

THERE ARE TWO BILLS sponsored by Senator Pittman, and neither of them is wise. The provision that we should sell arms in time of war only to those nation that can pay cash and carry off the goods relegates the foreign policy of this country to a very low point of the grossest materialism. As a piece of legislation representing any permanent policy it is a fake.

Munitions Bill May Cause Jam

HIS OTHER BILL, proposing that our Government undertake in Government plants to manufacture munitions for South America, tends, in the opinion of this column, to get us into a most terrible jam, for it puts our Government itself into the business of supplying arms to South American countries who may possibly become embroiled with each other. And it may at some future date be the cause of subjecting our Government to enormous pressures from outside.

Nor can this column wholeheartedly concur with the proposal that the President of the United States shall be given the power to decide who is and who is not an aggressor, and on that basis control the supply of arms.

In the world at present there is no longer any criterion as to what is and what is not aggression, because there is nothing remotely approaching international law.

And, again, our policy will be determined by our vital interests. If, for instance, we had unquestionable information that Germany intended to seize the Azores, I think our Navy would believe it to be in our vital interests to get there first. But the German government would certainly regard this as an act of wanton, aggressive imperialism.

THIS COLUMN AGREES with Mr. Stimson that the world is in the most serious crisis in at least four hundred years. It is not at all certain that it is not the most serious crisis since the collapse of the Roman empire. For we are dealing with a combination of military aggression plus revolution. And the revolution is one that cuts itself off from the totality of Western thought, from the law, from the ethical beliefs, and even from such conceptions of the state as have not been challenged since the fourth century—not even by Napoleon—and which works with political and propaganda methods which are unique to the modern world.

In a time like this one is forced to live from day to day. Therefore, it is suicidal to tie one's hands by legislation designed to deal with situations which cannot be foreseen. The neutrality act has already in its short existence been amended three times. It is safe to predict that if it is again amended it will be amended yet again and again—whenever some new situation arises.

Meanwhile, by the very nature of things, leadership in foreign affairs is, actually, in the hands of the President and the Secretary of State. Day by day we take diplomatic action, neutrality act or no neutrality act, which leads us in a certain direction and which will in the end be determining.

Freedom Must Be Maintained

BUT WHILE WE LIVE from day to day, the one rock on which our security stands is the maintenance of freedom of action. We ought to maintain that freedom on all three fronts: legislative, diplomatic and military.

Maintaining it on the legislative front means that we do not weaken our bargaining power or our competence to act quickly by tying our own hands by laws.

Maintaining it on the diplomatic front means that we do not make commitments in advance of a very exact knowledge of what we are committing ourselves to.

Maintaining it on the military front means that we adopt a policy and stick to it. That policy is determined, in the first place, by geography. Our immense advantage is to be a continental power on two oceans, with a northern neighbor with whom we have had no quarrel for more than 100 years, and with such resources that we can certainly defend this continent and even this hemisphere.

We ought never to allow air bases to be established by any potentially hostile government within bombing distance from our shores and if it is perfectly clear that any attempt to do so will most certainly evoke immediate action it is extremely unlikely that the attempt will ever be made.

Washington Farewell Address Recalled

BUT WE ARE BOUND, again, in the nature of things, to intrust our safety to our State Department and to our armed forces, always with the restraining influence of a public opinion that is hostile to sentimental adventures and inexorably opposed to permanent alliances as between states.

This does not mean that we will not or should not collaborate on occasion and in crises with those whose interests are synonymous at the moment with ours. It is too bad that so few people have ever read Washington's Farewell Address. He never recommended that we should always and on all occasions avoid temporary alliances. He recommended that we should make no alliances that we cannot change at our own will and in accordance with our own interests. In other words he recommended freedom of action.

were Paul Bernard, 5, of 3707 Thirty-first place northeast, and Robert Jasinowski, 5, of 2021 Fifteenth street north, Arlington. Marching, one with an axe, the other carrying a popgun, they carried on for nearly the length of the parade as part of the Police and Fire Post 29, Sons of the Legion. Robert's mother said he smiled slightly, but kept his eyes stiffly ahead.

A colored unit of the Legion, marching behind a band, gold helmets pounded by the rain, drew cries of "swing-it." A slight line of Marines marched briskly, their band blaring a battle song. A line of sailors came by. An Infantry company from Fort George G. Meade marched in the new-issue slate-blue uniform now undergoing tests as possible substitute for the khaki. Sixty tanks of the latest build came in threes, vibrating the raindrops off the khaki sides.

The ambulances, with red crosses splashed on their sides, came by, followed by the Fort Myer horses, flanks steaming in the rain. Engineers came along, marching like infantrymen; the Reserve Officers marched 12 deep, dipping their swords at the reviewing stand; veterans of Indian wars came by in an inclosed vehicle, waving at the reviewing stand; trucks rolled with giant searchlights trained; women of the District of Columbia Chapter, Red Cross, rode by, smiling at the reviewing stand; lines of American legionnaires followed through the rain. A French military attache rose from his seat, his eyes following them up the Avenue.

Armored Cars, Field Guns

Amored cars rolled, machine guns sticking from the sides like quills. Horses, machine guns strapped to their backs, pranced behind bands; field guns on trucks passed, along with heavy trucks carrying pontoons, tremendous contraptions that 12 men can lift. Soldiers walked, bending forward, dragging machine guns in harness. Flags came singly and en masse.

The drenched officers and ladies, the embassy representatives and private soldiers who were ushers in the reviewing stand, were kept jumping to their feet like automatons as the flags passed. The hands of Admiral Leahy, Gen. Holcombe of the Marines, Gen. Maxwell Murray and other uniformed figures in the reviewing line kept swinging to the salute. The heads of Secretary Woodring and Secretary Wallace were kept bare most of the time.

A slight mix-up of signals delayed the start at New Jersey avenue and B street southeast, where the parade line was strung along for several blocks. Units including the United Sates Army Band, the Thirty-fourth Infantry, mounted men and the police escort, moved on schedule. Then, reaching Constitution avenue at First street, they were halted for ten minutes until the rest of the parade caught up.

Army officers pointed out that the trucks of the Thirty-fourth Infantry were caught in a traffic jam while crossing Memorial Bridge, and, arriving late at the starting point, were signaled to move before other sections of the line were even apprised of their arrival.

Rain Holds Down Parade

The parade was expected to send 20,000 persons marching up the avenue, including the Regular Army units from Fort Myer, Fort Belvoir and Fort George G. Meade, but the rain caused a falling off of the numbers, particularly the high school units who were expected in.

An official police count of the parade units, made by Privates Jerome Tarleton and John E. Cockrill, of the Traffic Division, at Tenth street northwest, showed there were 5,126 participants, 3,182 of them on foot. Mounted Artillery units totaled 655 men, and motorized Artillery, 158 men. Other mounted units totaled 536 men, while 529 persons rode in automobiles. The parade required 56 minutes to pass Tenth street, Tarleton and Cockrill stated.

Felicitations to the Army were sent to the Secretary of War by Secretary of the Navy Swanson, as follows: "It affords me great pleasure to extend to the Army, on behalf of the Navy, expressions of sincere congratulations and best wishes for Army Day, 1939. On April 6, each year, the Navy is pleased to recall the outstanding contributions made by the Army to the defense of our country, and the Army's pervading spirit of co-operation with the Navy in all matters involving a joint effort. The Navy takes pride in its close association with such an outstanding organization as the Army, and joins the entire Nation in a well-earned tribute to its sister service on Army Day."

Greetings also were sent by Maj. Gen. Holcomb, Commandant, Marine Corps, and Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations.

D.C. Churches To Observe Good Friday

Cathedral Rites, Outdoor Catholic Services in Park Day's Highlights

Recalling the most solemn event on the Christian calendar—Christ's sacrifice upon Calvary's Cross—Washingtonians will gather today for Good Friday services.

Featured by the traditional three-hour devotion, beginning at noon, one of the leading rites is to be centered at the Washington Cathedral, where the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will give meditative addresses on "The Seven Last Words of Christ."

Additional cathedral services are scheduled for 7:30 a. m., with Canon Anson Phelps Stokes presiding; at 10 a. m., when Canon Edward Slater Dunlap will read morning prayer and Litany, and at 4 p. m., Canon Stokes conducting evening prayer.

In Franklin Park, scene of one of the principal Catholic observances, an everybody's Good Friday service will be held at 3 p. m., under sponsorship of the Catholic Evidence Guild.

Dr. Hart to Speak

Among the speakers will be Dr. Charles Hart, director of the Evidence Guild; the Rev. Aloysius Burggraff, C. S. P., superior of St. Paul's College; the Rev. Clement Breen, O. P., of the Dominican House of Studies, and the Rev. Mark Kennedy, O. M., of Holy Name College. The vested choir from the seminaries of Catholic University will sing.

Leading Lutheran ecclesiastics will participate in services at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, from 12 to 3 p. m., conducted by the Rev. Edward Goetz, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church.

Beginning at noon at Foundry Methodist Church, Methodist union services will be addressed by Dr. E. C. Beery, presiding elder of the Southern Methodist Church; Dr. R. W. White, Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Protestant Church; Dr. Oliver J. Hart, St. John's Episcopal; Dr. J. M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University; the Rev. O. G. Robinson, of Calvary Methodist; Dr. W. S. Abernethy, Calvary Baptist, and Dr. H. W. Burgan, Hamline Methodist. Dr. G. Ellis Williams will preside, and the Foundry Choir, directed by Justin Lawrie, will sing.

Community Service

Also at the same hour is a three-hour Southwest Community service at Grace Episcopal Church, Ninth and D. Participating clerics and congregations will be the Rev. Harry V. Porter, Westminster Memorial Presbyterian; the Rev. Ralph E. Sharpe, Marvin M. E.; the Rev. Karl G. Newell, Ryland M. E.; the Rev. C. N. Williams, Third Christian; the Rev. Richard T. Scholl, Gorsuch M. E.; the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, host church rector, and the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, pastor of the Park View Christian Church.

Special services also will be held at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, with Dr. Albert J. McCartney speaking at 5 p. m., on "The Finished Work of Redemption."

Takoma Park Baptists will commemorate Good Friday with services at 7:45 p. m.

The Lenten cantata—"The Seven Last Words of Christ"—will be presented at 7:45 p. m., today by the choir of National City Christian Church, under direction of W. E. Braithwaite.

Dean Powell to Preach

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the Cathedral, will preach at three-hour devotionals at the Episcopal Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, at noon.

A Tre Ore service is scheduled for St. Dominic's Catholic Church, Sixth and E streets southwest, beginning with a solemn mass of the presanctified at noon. During the mass, only one of its kind celebrated throughout the year, the Passion will be sung by a trio of Dominican fathers.

At Christ Episcopal Church, Georgetown, the Rev. Spence Burton, father superior general of the Society of St. John the Evangelist and bishop suffragan-elect of Haiti, will conduct three hours devotion.

The Right Rev. Mgr. Fulton J. Sheen, associate professor of philosophy at Catholic University, will give his Good Friday address at 8:30 p. m. over the N. B. C. Blue network. The Paulist Choristers, directed by Father Finn, will sing.

Devotional Program

With "The Story of Redemption" as his theme, Dr. Alexander C. Zabriskie, of the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, will conduct a devotional program from 12 to 3 p. m. at St. John's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest.

Led by C. Wilfred Smith, the choir of Emory Methodist Church South, will present Stainer's "The Crucifixion" today at 8 p. m.

Services today at the Church of the Epiphany will begin at 10 a. m. with Litany, ante-communion, penitential office and a short address. Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, rector, will address the three hours devotions, from 12 to 3 p. m., while at 4:45 p. m. Charles E. Berger, student at Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, will conduct a prayer service. At 8 p. m. the choir will present "Olivet to Calvary."

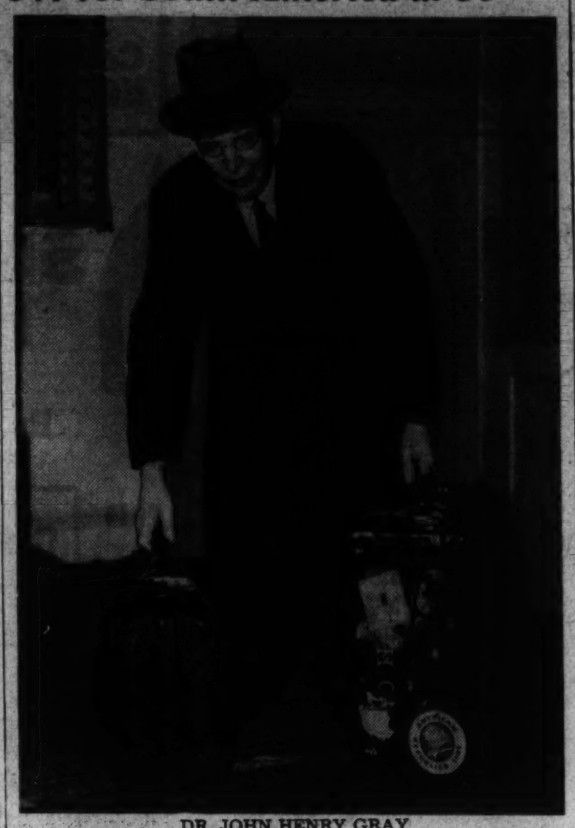
D. C. Elks Will Meet On Program for Aliens

Washington Elks will meet tonight to plan for participation in a Nation-wide program "to naturalize the aliens in this country."

A four-point program for the Elks throughout America was announced yesterday by Dr. Edward J. McCormick, grand exalted ruler.

Life Begins at 70

Adventure-Seeking Dr. Gray Off for South America at 80



DR. JOHN HENRY GRAY

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Yesterday's interview with Dr. John Henry Gray had to be conducted on the run, literally, because the 80-year-old former Harvard economist had less than an hour to catch a train for New York on the first lap of his wild animal hunting expedition.

The internationally known scholar and traveler was South America-bound, a member of the party led by William D. Mann, director of National Zoological Park to bring back snakes, birds and mammals from Argentina and Brazil.

This will be a new experience for Dr. Gray, who has done practically everything else. His professional accomplishments consume half a column in Who's Who, but beyond all that he's flown over the Swiss Alps twice, been manhandled by a Roman mob, toured Soviet Russia three times, been blessed by the Pope Leo XIII and has walked through Germany, Austria, Italy, Greece, parts of the Balkans and Asia Minor.

"I am still seeking to learn," said Dr. Gray. "Right now I'm having more fun than ever before in my life. This will be my fourth long trip within the year. Last April to the Guianas, to the Mediterranean last summer, the Lima Conference in December and now to Argentina."

Although he is retired from teaching, Dr. Gray is still a prolific writer on economics and he says that in order to understand that subject one must get to know people.

"I have always been attacked, even persecuted, for my economic views," says Dr. Gray. "I have always been called a radical and other emotion-provoking names but I consider myself a conservative."

It can't be said that he was excited—a 2½-month trip to South America is no more novel to him than an excursion to Baltimore is to most of us.

Dr. Gray was born in Charleston, Ill., on March 11, 1859. He is a widower, without living children. Since his graduation from Harvard in the class of 1887, he has taught there and at Minnesota, Northwestern, Carlton College and the University of California.

He narrowly escaped in Rome when an infuriated mob mistook him for a Frenchman. Previously, a French student had written insulting words on the guest book in the tomb of the former King Victor Emmanuel.

"But I think I'll have the most fun on this animal trip," he said, as he walked down the steps and into the taxicab waiting to carry him to Union Station.

His ship, the SS Uruguay, sails at midnight tonight.

Griffenhagen Plan Backed By Citizens

Connecticut Avenue Association Favors Walk Light for Cathedral Avenue

The Griffenhagen proposals for reforming the District government were indorsed last night by the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association, in a resolution ratifying the action taken by the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Other resolutions requested the Traffic Director to install a walk light for pedestrians at Connecticut avenue and Cathedral avenue northwest, and petitioned the District attorney and the Superintendent of Police to enforce the law against the sale of obscene and immoral literature. Homage was paid to George Schuldt, a member who died recently.

It was announced that 104 members had joined the association since its last meeting in February.

Washington Highlands

Strong opposition to a District sales tax and support for an income tax, if one is necessary, was voted last night by the Washington Highlands Citizens Association.

The tax measure advocated by the association would be based on the Federal plan. A similar proposal was made by the Federation of Citizens Associations Saturday.

The association also favored the Sheppard bill for an investigation of the package liquor trade in the District with a view to establishing a Government-owned dispensary system and opposed placing of the penal wharf on the Anacostia River near the Eleventh street bridge.

Northeast Council

The Board of Education and Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou were commended last night by the Northeast Council of Citizens Associations for their stand on the Marian Anderson case.

In its resolution the council held that since District schools were operated on the dual system the board was justified in refusing unconditional use of Central High School Auditorium to the colored singer. In further action the council asked for safety zones on Kenilworth avenue.

Citizens' Night

Fort Stevens Post, No. 32, American Legion, was host last night to representatives of four citizens' associations in its annual "Citizens' Night" at Stansbury Hall.

George A. Corbin, president of the Manor Park Citizens Association, spoke against the Griffenhagen plan for District reorganization, saying that the present commissioner type of municipal government is "safe." Other groups represented were Chillum Heights, O. N. Gabelein; Hampshire Heights, Harold Johnson, and Petworth, R. J. Haugh. Entertainment was furnished by the Kitt Accordian Quartet.

D. C. 3d in Safety Test

Washington placed third during February in a Nation-wide safety contest sponsored by the WPA, it was announced yesterday. Maine was first, Delaware second. Maine's score was 875.25, as against 817.19 for Delaware and 807.55 for the District.

Identical Twins Become Mothers Together For Second Time in Less Than Two Years

Identical twin girls, who have been doing just about the same thing all their lives, last week, for the second time in 20 months, became mothers a short time apart and set a new record at Columbia Hospital.

The young mothers, both dark-eyed and 20, are Mrs. Kathleen Robie, of Marshall Hall, Md., and Mrs. Eileen Moon, of 9 Wilson Lane, Bethesda.

"It's a girl," awed physicians told Mrs. Moon March 29 at 7:30 a. m., and the proud papa, Walter Moon, employe of the National Institute of Health, rushed out for a supply of cigars.

The same announcement was echoed to Mrs. Robie April 1 at 11:50 p. m., and the other father, William Robie, employed in the Treasury Department's Procurement Division, also bought cigars.

Mrs. Moon and Mrs. Robie, who were the Lynch sisters before they eloped on a double marriage venture at 16, are sharing a room at the hospital. Mrs. Moon, however, will go home today, it was said.

This same thing happened in July, 1937, Robie explained last night. At that time, however, Mrs. Robie's baby, a girl, arrived first. A few hours later Mrs. Moon's baby, a boy, arrived.

The parents are not sure what names they will give this second set.

"There'll be plenty of time for that," explained Robie.

Meteor Fragment From Australia In Smithsonian

A fragment of one of the largest shooting stars that ever hit the earth has just been added to the meteorite collection of the Smithsonian Institution, officials announced yesterday.

The iron meteorite weighing about a ton, is believed to be part of the Cranbourne meteorite, discovered in 1854 near Melbourne, Australia. The Smithsonian's specimen was found nearby at Pearcedale, and is thought to be a fragment that split away from the main body in the fall to earth.

The specimen's shipping weight, including burlap wrapping, crate and chains was 2,200 pounds.

E. P. Henderson, meteorite expert, said studies would be made to determine the composition of the specimen. It will be placed on display in the National Museum.

Pair Held in Theft Of $800 Diamonds

Morse J. Dwyer, 40, of 900 block of M street, was held to the grand jury yesterday in connection with the theft of $800 worth of diamond rings and $40 in cash from Bert Gabbard, jeweler, of 1513 L street northwest. Marie J. Hughes, 39, same address, was held on a charge of receiving stolen property.

Gabbard said the money and jewels disappeared when he was drinking with the couple.

Washington Man Hurt In Virginia Collision

Christiansburg, Va., April 6 (AP).—E. L. Kipp, 31, of Washington, described by Chief of Police D. M. Sumner as a Government employe, suffered concussion of the brain and other injuries tonight when the sedan which he was driving collided with a truck.

Capital News In Brief

'Spud' Etymology

If the lowly tuber, known as the Irish, or white, potato, knew the origin of its common nickname, "Spud," it would probably lower its eyes in shame.

For the term began with a bunch of Irishmen who had nothing but contempt for the potato. Seeing danger in the consumption of too much starchy food, they organized the "Society for the Prevention of Unhealthy Diet." Gradually only the initials were used, and thus "Spud" was born.

All this was revealed yesterday by Wendell Sooy, of Philadelphia, in a talk before the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton. He also showed that "tip" was derived from a cafe bill, "To Insure Promptness" and "cop" from the British "Constabulary of Police."

Patriotism Pays

Two families with small children had reason yesterday to be grateful to Secretary of Labor Perkins. Watching the Army Day parade from the window of her office in the Labor Department Building on Constitution avenue, she saw the two families, drenched but doggedly patriotic.

She sent for them and up they went, to finish seeing the military spectacle from her window.

Woman Routs Thug

Mrs. Anna Farley, 47, of 607 Fourth street northwest, last night successfully fought off a colored assailant with her umbrella. The man attacked her in front of her home as she was returning from work, threw her to the ground and tried to grab her pocketbook. She cracked him so hard on the head with her umbrella that he gave up the attempt and fled.

4,000 on FHA Face Pay Cuts Or Furloughs

More than 4,000 employes face salary cuts or furloughs if $500,000 lopped from the appropriation for the Federal Housing Administration yesterday by the Senate appropriations sub-committee in charge of the Second Deficiency bill is not replaced, the administration said last night.

The sub-committee voted to cut the appropriation for the FHA from $2,500,000 to $2,000,000 for expenses in May and June. The administration cannot operate on its present pay roll basis if the cut stands, officials said.

The difference between the committee's report and the amount approved by the Budget Bureau, they added, would not mean any call on the Treasury for funds. They said the money would be furnished out of the FHA's own income from mortgage insurance premiums and appraisal fees.

Senate to Get Request for Welfare Fund

$280,000 More Sought for District Child Care Agencies

The Board of Public Welfare yesterday voted to seek an additional $280,000 in the District supply bill to carry out the recommendation of Child Welfare Review Advisory Committee for reorganization and consolidation of the local child care agencies.

Following approval of the House of the $46,915,207 supply bill, members of the board decided to obtain the extra funds from the Senate District sub-committee which now begins consideration of the local budget.

Recommended by Kepecs

The additional funds would increase the budget for the child welfare agencies to $636,660 as recommended by Dr. Jacob Kepecs, who surveyed the local setup and presented his findings to the advisory committee.

Under the proposal all child care agencies would be placed under a central bureau. To carry out this program an additional $73,000 over and above that included in the House bill, would be needed to provide additional foster homes in the District.

A bureau of psychiatrical psychological services, to care for "mentally-disturbed" children would require $50,000. The question of whether this bureau would be placed under the health or welfare department is as yet undetermined.

Would Provide 55 Jobs

Enlarging the housekeeping services would require an additional $10,000; institutional case workers, $19,460; bureau of nursing, dental and medical services, $25,000; central administrational services, an additional $11,500; office space for protection and preventive work, an additional $34,800, and an additional $2,000 for office supplies and furniture.

All told the reorganization would provide jobs for 55 persons at an annual salary of $118,580.

12 D. C. Boy Scouts Promoted to Eagles; 85 Others Advanced at Honor Court

Impressive ceremonies marked the quarterly Court of Honor of the National Capital Area Boy Scouts of America at which 12 youths were promoted to the rank of Eagle Scout, scouting's highest award, last night at Macfarland Junior High School.

On a stage bedecked with American flags, 85 other scouts were advanced in rank, 18 Eagle scouts received bronze, silver and gold palms, 28 received veteran's awards ranging from 5 to 25 years service; three scoutmasters received their keys and one scoutmaster was presented with the scout's training award.

Presentations of the Eagle awards were made by the mothers of the honored scouts. Those who received Eagle rank are Walter Simpich, troop 5; Stuart G. Smith, jr., troop 24; Robert Quinnell, troop 38; Shelley Williams, troop 43; Gordon A. Gaumnitz, troop 51; Miller Foster, jr., troop 54; Irving Zirpel, jr., troop 54; William Fielder, troop 54; George D. Durham, troop 81; William Johnson, troop 666; Robert T. Ellis, troop 666, and Paul Hare, troop 666.

Other awards were presented by Capt. Chester Wells, president of the National Capital Area Scouts, and Dr. Paul Bartsch, director of the Court of Honor.

Musical numbers were interspersed throughout the program by the Knights of Columbus Boys' Band, the call to colors and assembly were blown by Council Bugler Calvert Weems and a song recital was given by Rock M. Kirkham. The following were honored:

Easter Breakfast Is Capital Tradition, Buffet Type Gains Popularity

An Easter breakfast table abloom with spring flowers and glistening silver makes a lovely setting for buffet service. Guests will especially enjoy the informal hospitality of a meal served in this manner and the hostess too will share in its advantages

Guests May Come Before or After Church Luncheon May Be Double Duty Event Eggs Are Featured on All Menues

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

THIS WEEK brings to us one of the most pleasant ceremonials of the year—Easter. This is the time to glorify breakfast in a leisurely fashion. Spring flowers, beautiful silver, lovely linens and other appropriate table accessories make an ideal setting for the meal.

Easter breakfast is a tradition in Washington, and it is the custom for Washington hostesses to make this meal an occasion for entertaining either before or after church.

Types of Breakfasts

Many types of breakfasts are served. Foods easy to handle and serve should be considered when planning the menu. The modernized version does not permit of a great selection of food. The substantial family menu should be the choice of those craving a heavy breakfast. There is the luncheon of so-called "brunch" variety served at a late hour. A very popular breakfast is the buffet one. Its advantages are legion—more persons can be served with greater ease; the guests can pick favored spots to enjoy hospitality, and will have a feeling of freedom in helping themselves to second cups of steaming coffee; also the early church-goer will have an appreciative appetite, while the one going to later services can leave gracefully without disrupting the rest of the party.

Following are suggested menus for three types of breakfasts.

Buffet Breakfast

Chilled pineapple juice
Creamed eggs on toast rabbits
Broiled Ham rounds
Hot buttered rolls, orange marmalade
Coffee

Family Breakfast

Fresh strawberries
in orange halves
Scrambled eggs, broiled sausages
Tiny hot biscuits, currant jam
Coffee

Luncheon Breakfast

Tomato juice
Egg souffle
Creamed asparagus
Buttered rolls, orange marmalade waffles, syrup

Creamed Eggs

Melt 3 tablespoons butter and add 4 tablespoons of flour. Mix thoroughly and pour in 2 cups of milk. Cook slowly and stir constantly until a creamy sauce forms. Add 6 hard-cooked eggs, diced, and [illegible] teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon paprika and ¼ teaspoon minced parsley. Let simmer 3 minutes. Blend in the egg yolk. Mix and serve over hot buttered toast. Serves 4.

Silver Brush

A small soft brush costing about 10 cents is very helpful in cleaning embossed silverware. The brush gets into the corners. After use, wash the brush in warm water and dry it before storing.

Cheaper Food Makes Budget Work Easier

District Prices Down 2 to 3 Cents, WPA Bureau Finds

IT IS EASIER to budget the menu on a small wage income than it was a year ago. This is no idle assertion either. Actual proof of this has come from those who know. Due to the never-ending thirst for practical homemaking knowledge, the WPA Housekeeping Aid of the District instituted a search of comparative food prices of last year's and this year's market products. The results? Here they are.

Staples Are Cheaper

It was found that most staple foods are from 2 to 3 cents cheaper now than they were in 1938. For instance that old standby, flour, is much cheaper than a year ago; butter is about 10 cents to the housewife's good, and citrous fruits, are several cents less expensive than in 1938.

One of the many worthwhile duties taught by WPA Housekeeping Aid is the value of knowing just such facts as those given above. That means that budgeting the menu on a tiny income is one of the duties of an authorized domestic, approved and sent out into Washington homes by the aid. These domestic helpers, usually over 35 years old and colored, are often women rehabilitated from useless and idle home environments. After training, they are qualified through knowledge of budget control, to cary on in a private home when the mistress of the house is sick or out of town, or otherwise incapacitated.

List of Budget Prices

The list which follows has been carefully compiled by teachers engaged at housekeping aid centers. It is designed to give a family of four the most value for their money at a weekly cost of a mere $6.50 for the entire food allowance. Naturally, these prices will vary slightly in different sections of the District, but they approximate the down-to-earth-cheapness which can be maintained in modest households if care and common sense are used.

HOUSEKEEPING AIDS' BUDGET FOODS

12 pounds flour	.45
2 cans peas	.15
8 pounds sugar	.25
2 dozen oranges	.25
1 pound prunes	.05
1 can syrup	.09
10 pounds white potatoes	.21
8 pounds sweet potatoes	.30
4 pounds spinach	.20
1 pound rice	.05
½ pound bacon	.16
1 pound butter fat	.19
4 pounds lamb (shoulder)	.67
2 cans salmon	.20
4 pounds fish porey	.56
3 pounds lard	.27
1 pound butter	.28
1 box salt	.03
1 box peppe.	.07
1 head lettuce	.08
1 box oatmeal	.08
6 cans canned milk	.34
2 dozen eggs	.44
½ pound cocoa	.12
3 bunches celery	.23
4 grapefruits	.10
5 pounds greens	.23
1 box tea	.10
1 pound coffee	.14

And here is a priceless, but practically costless, recipe, often prepared by domestics being trained as cooks by the Housekeeping Aid Bureau.

EGGLESS MUFFINS

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ to 1 cup milk

Sift flour, baking powder, salt, sugar. Cut in shortening as in making pastry—gradually add milk until smooth batter is formed. Beat until well mixed. Pour batter into greased muffin pans filling them three-quarters full. Bake in hot oven 15 minutes.

Recipes Flow Like Milk They're Made of Into Post Food Contest to Take Prizes

Puddings, Soups, Sauces, Salads Among Dishes of Dairy Origin

MILK and its healthful by-products made many new friends as a result of last week's Post recipe contest. Rich, bubbling milk, high in its body-building calcium contents, flowed into puddings, soups, sauces and a wide variety of kitchen-tested recipes, each competing for one of the cash awards.

As one milk-fed homemaker wrote from down on the farm: "Naturally, milk contests are of great interest to me, for my small family consumes five quarts of fresh-from-the-cow milk a day. This milk contest will help me no end in discovering new ways of keeping this food continuously fresh and new tasting."

Here are some of the interesting reader recipe "discoveries" for maintaining your family's enthusiasm for this "most perfect of foods:" Vegetable pies in creamy sauce with a peanut butter crust; pinanna delight, a blending of pineapple, bananas, whipped cream, and marshmallows; buttermilk fudge and buttermilk pie, spicy with cinnamon, nuts and citrus peel; Pocahontas pudding, early American, with its contents of corn meal, lots of foamy fresh milk, ginger, molasses and figs. One of the most amusing ideas suggested was "White Monkey," which, despite its jungle name, was a mild and gentle dish of eggs poached in milk, then combined with cheese and hot toast.

The dessert above was fashioned for lovers of rich desserts. The major ingredients are strawberries, heavy cream and eggs, and is further enhanced by a garnishment of pecans. You'll like this strawberry accent for it was an entry in The Post recipe contest this week

Palatable Prize Winner

The winner of today's first prize of $3 seems to come naturally by her fondness for cooking. Not only are all her weekly contest entries real culinary delicacies, but her own name spells edible goodness. Mrs. Sara Lee Orange is the fortunate homemaker who wins first place in the milky way by her savory potato salad, the base of which is sour cream. This recipe offers a complete meal in itself.

Mrs. Orange

Sour Cream Potato Salad

Peel 4 medium cold boiled potatoes, cut in small cubes, combine 2 tablespoons of vinegar, 2 tablespoons of lemon juice, 2 teaspoons of grated onion, 2 teaspoons of choped parsley and 1 cup of sour cream. Season with salt to taste and a dash of paprika. Add to the potatoes 2 tablespoons of chopped pimientos, ½ cup of chopped dill pickle and ¼ cup of chopped crisp bacon. Toss together with sour cream mixture. Chill before serving on crisp salad greens of your choice. Garnish with stuffed olives and additional sour cream dressing if desired.

Best for Last

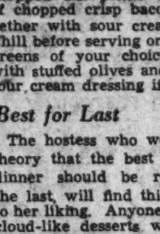
The hostess who works on the theory that the best part of the dinner should be reserved for the last, will find this confection to her liking. Anyone who enjoys cloud-like desserts will approve the second prize-winner. It is coffee ice cream with vanilla nut parfait, as exquisite in texture as old lace, and naturally twice as good to eat. Mrs. Donture as old lace, and naturally twice as good to eat. Mrs. Donald Campbell, 4306 Tenth street northeast, is the winner of the $2 award. Her basic ice cream blend of scalded milk, eggs, cream, flour and sugar is as practical as it is edible.

Coffee Ice Cream With Vanilla Nut Parfait

Scald ¼ cup of ground coffee with 2 cups of milk and strain through a fine cheesecloth. Mix 1¼ cups of sugar, 2 tablespoons of flour and a pinch of salt. Add 2 well-beaten eggs. Pour scalded milk and coffee over these, slowly stirring all the time. Cook in double boiler 20 minutes, stirring all the time until thick. Cool, add 2 cups of whipped cream and freeze. For vanilla nut parfait, boil 1-3 cup of sugar and ⅓ cup of water to a spun thread. Pour in slowly 1 beaten egg white, beating until cool. Whip ¾ cup of cream until stiff, add 1 teaspoon of vanilla and fold into first mixture with ½ cup of chopped nut meats. Line mold with coffee ice cream, fill center with parfait, cover with coffee ice cream, and return to freezing unit of refrigerator.

Scotch—But Not Tight

Although the ingredients of the prize-winning milk and vegetable stew are modest in price, they certainly cannot be accused of being Scotch. Yet that is just what the creator of this palatable recipe calls her $1 winning formula. Mrs. E. S. Warder, Breezie Point, Abell Postoffice, Md., creates this thrifty fare as her rich-in-milk offering. It is so easy and cheap to prepare and yet so appetizing that it will probably gain food fans over night.



Mrs. Warder

Scotch Stew With Dumplings

Have 2 pounds of lamb, shoulder or breast, cut into 1-inch cubes. Dredge with flour and brown in hot fat butter or margarine. Season with any herbs or spices to taste. Cover with rich milk, place on a hot plate to prevent scorching and simmer slowly until done. This will take about 2 hours. Forty-five minutes before serving, add 4 medium potatoes cut in halves, 4 carrots cut in 1-inch pieces, 6 small onions and ½-cup of diced celery. Add more top milk or a little meat broth or water, if necessary. Fifteen minutes before serving, drop dumplings (made by favorite formula) on top of meat and vegetable mixture. Cover closely and continue to cook slowly for 15 minutes. Place meat in center of platter, arrange vegetables and dumplings around it. Serve immediately.

Creamy Delicacy

Dessert after dessert, featuring cream and milk, arrived for recipe judgment in last week's competition. It was difficult to choose from among them as each recipe appealed to the taste as well as to the eye. Such definite charm of flavor blends did the molded date cream possess that it has been given a prize of $1. Mrs. M. Hook, 313 Douglas street northeast, wins for her unusual combine of peanut butter, dates, milk and eggs.

Molded Date Cream

Add 1½ cups of rich milk to ¼ cup of sugar. Sprinkle ½ tablespoon gelatine on milk. Stir over hot water until gelatine dissolves. Pour slowly on 2 beaten egg yolks. Cook over hot water, stirring until mixture coats spoon. Boil with 1 tablespoon of peanut butter, cool. Fold in ½ cup (scant) of chopped dates, ½ teaspoon of vanilla extract and ¼ teaspoon of lemon extract. Pour into mold, chill and unmold. Garnish with dates and whipped cream. This serves four.

To the Queen's Taste

Royalty, expected soon in this country, might never have tasted a soup more delectable and epicurean than the milk dish which wins one of today's $1 prizes. This outstanding recipe for chicken meringue milk soup is flavored to the queen's taste. Its milk and chicken broth flavor is made more elaborate with fluffs of egg white and choped parsley. Mrs. Frank E. Edwards, 7 Belle Grove road, Brooklyn Park, Baltimore, Md., is the winner.

Chicken Meringue Soup

Heat 1 quart of chicken broth with 1 sliced carrot, 3 onion slices and 1 sprig of parsley. Cook 15 minutes in a double boiler, strain. Slowly add 2 tablespoons of quick-cooking tapioca to broth. Place over hot water. Cook until tapioca is transparent, stirring occasionally. Add 2 cups of hot milk, then add 2 beaten egg yolks, combined with 1-3 cup of cream. Cook, stirring constantly, until slightly thick. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Add ½ teaspoon of salt to 2 egg whites. Beat until still. Serve soup in individual dishes topped with fluff of egg white sprinkled with paprika or chopped parsley.

Peppermint Sauce

Peppermint sauce makes a dressy dessert for custard bread pudding. Bake the pudding in baking dish and pass it in the same, but pass the sauce in a small dish. Add ¼ teaspoon of oil of peppermint to a cup of vanilla pudding sauce. Or you can add 3 tablespoons of crushed peppermint candy to the sauce and cook it slowly until the candy has dissolved in the sauce.

Advisory Body Would Set 1% D. C. Sales Tax

Also Proposes Lower Exemption For Income Levy

Replacement of the 2 per cent sales tax by a 1 per cent levy in the proposed District tax program was approved yesterday by the commissioners' tax advisory committee.

Shortly afterward, the citizens committee for fair taxation issued a statement charging "an inside lobby which is stronger than the expressed opinion of the people of the District" with forcing approval of the sales tax. Mrs. John Boyle, jr., is chairman of the citizens committee.

The new base for the sales tax is included in a three-point program which will be drafted by Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the District Board of Tax Appeals, for submission early next week to the House District tax sub-committee.

Two other points are a decrease in the proposed income exemption from $14,000 to $10,000, and an increase in the proposed corporation income tax from 4 to 5 per cent.

The committee met yesterday with Commissioner Hazen. Chairman Nichols, of the House tax subcommittee, was present. Lowering of the sales tax base and income exemption may save the program, it was indicated.

Wheeler to Lead Chest Unit Again

For the second successive year the Metropolitan Unit of the Community Chest campaign will be lead by William W. Wheeler, assistant to the vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., it was announced yesterday. The position calls for mobilization of 2,000 volunteer workers in 11 areas of the city.

Self-Help Exchange Provides Work for 429

Seven cash paying jobs were obtained for unemployed persons in the week of March 27 and 429 persons were given work by the Washington Self-Help Exchange, Inc., it was announced yesterday.

An average daily attendance of 261 persons at the exchange represents an increase of 20 above that of any previous week this year.

Throng Greets Miss Anderson On Brief Visit

MARIAN ANDERSON

Rushed to Hospital By Police Escort To See Accompanist

Admirers of Marian Anderson, colored contralto, who is to sing Sunday from Lincoln Memorial, had a glimpse of her last night when she paid a short visit to her accompanist, Kosti Vehanen, ill in George Washington University Hospital.

Miss Anderson stepped from the train at 7:45 p. m. and said she was "overwhelmed—and a little bit frightened—at this Washington demonstration." Rushed through crowds of autograph-hunters by her assistant manager, Gerald Goode, she hurried to the hospital behind a motorcycle police escort.

"Washington has delighted and depressed me," declared the singer whose open-air concert follows the refusal of the D. A. R. and the Board of Education to permit her to sing in Constitution Hall or the Central High School auditorium. "Depressed because so simple an issue as my singing in a public hall was raised; delighted because in a time when the whole world is threatened with a disease of racial intolerance, Americans like Mrs. Roosevelt, Secretary Ickes, and so many others of all races have responded so spontaneously."

Vehanen is expected to be well enough to play Sunday. Miss Anderson announced as her program, "My Country 'Tis of Thee," the aria, "O, Mio Fernando," from "La Favorita," by Donzetti; "Gospel Train," by Burleigh; "Trampin'," by Boatner, and "My Soul is Anchored in the Lord," by Florence Price.

Additional honorary sponsors of Miss Anderson's concert announced yesterday include Senators Norris (Independent), Nebraska; McCarran (Democrat), Nevada; Barbour (Republican), New Jersey; Mead (Democrat), New York; Wagner (Democrat), New York; Representatives McGranery (Democrat), Pennsylvania, and Gavagan (Democrat), New York; Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, Gov. Cramer of the Virgin Islands, Heywood Broun, Kirsten Flagstad, Talullah Bankhead and Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge.

Taxi Inspection Transfer Move Assailed by Elgen

Transfer of the task of inspection of taxicabs and buses from the Public Utilities Commisison to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic was effected in the District supply bill over the objections of Riley Elgen, chairman, the hearings disclosed.

Elgen told the sub-committee that consolidation of the inspection service would not be practical and predicted that "confusion would result" from the suggested transfer.

Lack of Height Is Reducing Obstacle, Not Insurmountable

Two letters culled from the mailbag today are from reducers whose lack of height is against them. One is 5 feet 1 and the other 5 feet 1½ inches tall and, as you may know, it is always harder for these short girls to reduce . . . but look what they've done! Here is a letter from a Newark, N. J., resident:

"I am so thrilled I just have to tell you about it! On January 24 I went on a diet. This wasn't the first time, but it is the first one I have stuck to. I have lost 19 pounds, and you should see how much younger I look. I feel younger, too!

Taunts of Friends

"When I used to weigh 125 pounds, my friends would remark about what a lovely figure I had. Then, when I gained so much weight, the same ones would ask what I had done with my figure . . . that I must be hiding it! That was enough for me. I am going to see them this summer with that same lovely figure. I know now that all I have to do is to stay with my program."

The second letter is from a reducer in Detroit—the one who is 5 feet 1½ inches tall—and she has reached the point where she cannot lose any more weight. Read what she writes:

"Since the first of November I have lost 26 pounds, and with the aid of the exercises I have taken five inches off the waist and four off the hips. I wear a size 16 instead of a 20! But now it looks as though I cannot lose another pound—and I want to lose 10 more!"

Standstill Expected

A weight standstill is to be expected after a considerable loss in weight. It may last from two to four weeks and all you can do about it is to continue to diet and exercise! However, there is one thing to be said for a stationary period of this kind—it does seem to help stabilize previous weight losses.

Some of you who are impatient to lose may find the fruit and vegetable regime a great help in getting started again. Return to the regime for two conservative days only, then follow the regular menus.

High Brow Spring Furs

Lavish, yet practical, spring furs are seen everywhere on women of finesse. Not only do such high-brow lightweight furs as fisher, Hudson Bay sable and baum marten create a feeling of luxury for the wearer, but they provide a real service in temperate April weather. The hip-length jacket, above, is of silky soft baum marten—one of spring's most becoming furs to women of every age, coloring and size. This model is classic in style with full loose sleeves and a Johnny collar. Indispensible for evening and dinner wear and over black or printed town frocks. The darkly handsome blended stone marten is very similar in appearance, but more modest in price and longer wearing

Spring Tempter

Of course, you are never, never going to have anything made again, but you'll just walk through the dress goods department and look at some of the new materials. My, they certainly are beautiful! Now, why is it you can never find colors and designs like those in the ready-made dresses?

Of course . . . maybe after all you could get a little dressmaker—no, no, now none of that! Remember what happened the last time! And the time before that! Remember tramping to every store to find the exact shade of solid color to match that perfectly gorgeous raspberry silk with the lilac sprays! Remember getting the thread . . . and the snappers . . . and the belt buckle . . . and having the buttons covered . . . and making those long trips out to the end of the car line for fittings!

No, no, you simply can't go through that again—oh, what a perfectly stunning luggage tan print! It would simply be adorable with your burnt straw hat. And you might hunt the town over and never get the right shade in the ready-made dresses. And anyway, this time, you might find a little dressmaker closer in . . .

No, no, there you go again! Anyway, if you did get a dressmaker downtown, you'd be having to go for fittings. And no telling what the dress would look like when it was finished. Remember that polka dot that turned you into your great aunt Minnie! No, you'll just do the best you can in the ready-mades. You may not get just what you want, but then—well, who ever does that . . . in anything?

What a lovely green print there with those sprigs of apple blossoms! It would be perfectly adorable for midsummer with your white accessories . . . and a white patent leather belt . . . and a little bolero. Of course, maybe, if you planned it carefully, and literally stood over the dressmaker . . .

No, no, you haven't the time to be bothered. And anyway think of the mistakes you HAVE made—such as insisting on that peplum with the figure.

Still . . . of course if you had the dress made very simple it might work out all right . . . No, wait, it's the simple things that need the expert tailoring . . .

Still . . . there's that wonderful little dressmaker the woman in the beauty shop said everybody was going to . . . Yes, and she probably wouldn't get around to your dress before August and you'd go out for fittings and find she hadn't touched it . . .

And yet maybe if you were really firm and she really were good . . .

Even then, though, you wouldn't know what it would look like on you until it was finished . . .

On the other hand, though, you might never find anything in the ready-mades . . . and there'd be that tramping from store to store . . . and trying things on . . . and mussing your hair . . . and trying to get away from the saleswomen . . .

Still, ready-mades always do have an air home-mades don't . . .

Yet in a cheap ready-made you'd always be meeting yourself . . . and seeing your dress on the most terrible people. And if you did get that luggage tan print and hunt up a cute little pattern you'd really have something individual . . . and you'd know the material was good. Maybe that's just what you'd better do—get the luggage tan!

You start toward the counter—no, you'll look at the patterns first to find out how much goods you'll need. You make your way out slowly from the tables of flower-sprayed fabrics, casting—back yearning glances. Now if there's just enough of that bolt of luggage tan to last until you get back . . .

You start toward the patterns. Out in the other part of the store everything about you seems a little different, a little more drab, settled, leisurely. Maybe . . . after all . . . you'd better take a look at some of the ready-mades.

Mary Haworth's Mail

In Love at Last, Wary Bachelor, 31, Fears to Put His Fate to Touch; Has He a Chance?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a normally attractive bachelor of 31, with a well-balanced range of interests—intellectual, musical, artistic and athletic. Although it is no special credit to me, for some years many girls have considered me a good matrimonial prospect—probably due in large part to the indifference I felt and expressed to the idea of marriage. As an incurable romanticist, I have been looking for the ideal girl—who would have as catholic a range of interests as myself, and who would have certain traits of appearance and character that were important to me. No one I ever met seemed to measure up. Then I met a girl who checked up to every requirement—and I couldn't fall in love with her, though I tried! That taught me, once and for all, that love can't be induced as a result of rationalization.

Now I have fallen in love—with a girl of about 22, who falls short of my former requirements in some minor respects, but there's no doubt about my emotions. I'm crazy about the girl; the interesting hours spent in her company are all too short. I knew her casually a couple of years ago. Then she got married and I glimpsed her only half a dozen times in two years, at the theater or in a restaurant, and gradually the feeling grew on me that I had missed the boat; her charm was irresistible.

Of course, it all seemed pretty hopeless, but recently we met on the street and I discovered that she had separated from her husband last summer and was now divorced. I invited her to lunch and have rushed her since then—if eight dates in three weeks can be called a rush. She is very reticent about her marriage, but has indicated that she married as a result of being romantically rushed off her feet in a couple of months, and that within three months after she married she realized she had made a terrible mistake as to her husband's character and abilities. She felt that he had pulled the wool over her eyes and had won her with misrepresentations. She tried to make a go of it; but it was no use. She is feeling pretty bitter about marriage, and is very independent where men are concerned. She is determined to have a little fun for a change. She senses that I am deeply interested in her, and has indicated that she would prefer my not getting serious.

Now here is my dilemma: I think that girls usually know right off the bat whether they can fall in love with a man. I believe they are much more certain of themselves that way than most men. So perhaps she knows that she is not, and cannot fall, in love with me, and is trying to indicate that any serious intention on my part would be hopeless. Or else she distrusts and is frightened by a "rush," having been rushed into one mistaken marriage.

But which is it? And is there any way of finding out? If she is trying to tell me that my case is hopeless, perhaps I should pull out now before I get hurt too badly. If it is only that she distrusts a rush, shall I feign an indifference that I do not feel? All my tender instincts are alive with respect to her; I want to be with her constantly and to shower her with attention, kindness and consideration. But her attitude makes me afraid to show all this, for fear she will ask me to stop seeing her. What do you think—do I have a chance to win her? And if so, how shall I go about it?

PUZZLED.

Wisdom of Centuries

DEAR PUZZLED: Don't be a fraidy-cat in courtship. "Faint heart," you know, "ne'er won fair lady." In a poem entitled, "My Dear and Only Love," written 300 years ago, one Marquis of Montrose voiced his (sound) philosophy of conduct when confronted by a comparably romantic and perilous situation. He said: "He either fears his fate too much, Or his deserts are small, That dares not put it to the touch To gain or lose it all."

For a man admittedly in love for the first time, I must say you are behaving in a singularly cautious and frigidly self-protective manner. I shouldn't call eight dates in three weeks much of a "rush"—and I doubt that the average woman would. It is indicative of interest, but scarcely of ardor. A man is "rushing" a girl when he is fervently and unabashedly moving heaven and earth to pre-empt every available moment of her waking hours, and bombarding her with telephone calls at unpredictable intervals seven days of the week. When a man goes into action along such lines, a girl has some reason to believe that she has really bowled him over; but a tidy and self-controlled two or three engagements a week is, as I have said, only a flattering brand of attentiveness at best.

Judging from the specific "background information" (omitted here, pursuant to your hint), there is some reason to believe that this girl is more receptive to your friendship, just now, than to your love; but, on the other hand, one might argue that her rejection of the latter potential gift is more passive than active; that she really isn't in a position to evaluate its merit or desirability until she has been made acquainted with it; that she couldn't possibly know her own mind, with any finality, until forced, again and again, to face, study, consider and reconsider the proposition.

As a result of random reading, I have the impression that Robert Browning and Samuel Clemens struggled against formidable discouragement in selling themselves to the ladies who eventually became their blissfully adoring wives. I daresay the list could be augmented endlessly. The lion-hearted true lover will never be guilty of skillful fencing intended to save his "face" (petty social pride); nor of craven retreat, designed to spare himself hurt. The person who is afraid of being hurt in love has not yet come of age for loving; he is still thinking too much in terms of himself to be able to yield his whole heart, or to offer up his life in the service of love.

If you have a chance of winning this girl, it lies not in making sure of your ground before you advance (since no one, not even the girl, can give you absolute assurances on that score), but in casting considerations of self to the winds; in making no secret of the fact that you have been loving her for years and longing to marry her, and in giving expression, in every conceivably sincere and graceful way, to those "tender instincts" she has evoked in you. The answers to your (Timid Soul) questions can only be found through putting your fate "to the touch."

A Woman's New York

—By Alice Hughes.

New York, April 6.

IT MAY BE a bit late for an Easter piece, but I am known from the Battery to the Bronx as "the late Miss Hughes." I don't suppose that in my entire life I have ever been within a half hour of a luncheon date, and if I rush into print with an Easter piece only two days before the great feast I am running true to form.

As far as staples are concerned, the current season here is very little different from any other. The clothes are gay, elegant and seasonable, and beyond the cute tricks thought up by the designers I find nothing much worthy of comment. In fact, as far as Easter clothes are concerned, the main thing as usual is that they be new and bright. There is little else to report.

Where gadgets are concerned, the imagination of the people who think them up has run amuck this year, as always. For instance, there is an enormous cartwheel Easter bonnet made by a leading beauty specialist, put up in a cellophane box, and under this stupendous hat is a square gold compact containing a matching automatic lipstick in the sky-blue pink so popular this spring. There is also a 2-dram bottle of bluegrass perfume. Another gift is a fairly colored basket full of varicolored eggs, which also holds a vial of flower-scented bath oils. I have also seen some transparent figures of Easter rabbits packed full of powder puffs.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Mary Martin continues to be the prize girl about the nightspots. She can usually be found, after her performance in "Leave It to Me," dancing in the best places, often with the other leading principals in her show, Billy Gaxton and the venerable Victor Moore. Of course, a great deal of cutting-in is done because Mary is just about the cutest thing of the year here, and all the lads want to shake a shoe with her. Winthrop Rockefeller, whom I hear is now ruled off the turf, take notice.

Vegetable Dishes, Contest Theme

Now is the time to give meals a springlike touch. And it's not such a job either, when there are so many interesting recipes. This week's theme of The Post Recipe Contest will be leafy green vegetables. Post readers will have an opportunity to tell of their favorite way of using these greens. Every kind of recipe may be entered. Be sure they are kitchen-tested, carefully written and of practical value. Mail recipes to Martha Ellyn, Post Food Editor, to reach her by noon, April 15.

The prizes for the five best recipes will be—first, $3; second, $2, and three additional prizes of $1 each.

Old friends are welcomed as well as new ones. Recipes of a practical and palatable nature are sure to bring rewards. If you know of some economical way of using spinach, such as utilizing a leftover amount in cream soup, or in stuffing onions; of some method of cooking greens with meat or making an attractive ring to delight guests; or some way to prepare the tender leaves of young beets, send in your recipes at once.

Russian Charge and Mrs. Oumansky Entertain 120 With Moving Pictures

Turkish Ambassador Mehmet Ertegun Among Members of Diplomatic Society Present; Congressional Circle Represented

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

THE SOVIET FILM "Alexander Nevsky," newest production of the director, Sergei Eisenstein, was the featured entertainment last evening when the Charge d'Affaires of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mrs. Oumansky entertained 120 guests.

Following the motion picture the company drifted from the ballroom to the dining room, where supper was served and guests gathered into groups to discuss the film. The latter treats of the struggle of the Russians under the leadership of Novgorod Duke Alexander, surnamed Nevsky, against the invading troops from surrounding sections.

The climax of the film is the battle between the Russians and the Teutons on the ice of Lake Chudskoye and draws to a close after the rout of the invaders. The leading role in the film is played by the Soviet actor, Nickolai Cherkassaov, and the music was written by Sergei Prokofieff, who was in Washington some time ago and gave a concert at the Embassy.

Mme. Oumansky, who, with her husband, received their guests last evening in the spacious second-floor hall, wore a blue evening dress fashioned on simple lines and set off with a short jacket. A corsage of orchids was a further accent for her costume.

The huge rooms of the Embassy were decorated with bowls and vases filled with spring blossoms—delphinium, Talisman roses, stock and snapdragons. Tall vases of red carnations were also effectively placed here and there. I don't know who looks after decorations at the Embassy, but whoever does, has an eye for beauty and never used it to better advantage than last evening.

Among guests last evening were the Turkish Ambassador Mehmet Munir Ertegun, the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan, the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar Johan Procope; the First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, Resid Anamur; the Air Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Weiser, Senator and Mrs. William H. King, the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, Representative and Mrs. John Coffee, Representative T. V. Smith.

Still others there were Laurence Duggan, of the State Department, and Mrs. Duggan; Mr. and Mrs. Loy Henderson, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Barton K. Yount, Col. and Mrs. Harrison H. C. Richards, Lieut. Col. William E. Shipp, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ralston S. Holmes, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Richard Patterson, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Oscar Chapman; the Commissioner of Labor Statistics, Isador Lubin; Dr. and Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Lowell Mellett, Oswald Ryan and several members of the Soviet Embassy staff.

Polish Envoy To Have House Party

After a flying trip to New York, the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki and his brother, Count Alfred Potocki, will return today, accompanied by two visitors whose arrival will be of wide interest here. They are Count and Countess Benedykt Tyszkiewicz, of Poland, who will be guests of the Ambassador until Thursday of next week. At that time they will return to New York to visit friends, but will return April 20 to be house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lammot Belin, who will give a dinner for them on April 27.

Also guests of the Ambassador this week-end will be Count and Countess Anthony Potocki of Chicago. The count is a cousin of the Ambassador and is married to the former Gloria Griffith, of Chicago, whose father achieved wide acclaim as an architect. Still another guest at the Polish Embassy over the week-end will be Baron Stefan de Ropp, Polish commissioner general to the World's Fair. The Ambassador will give a luncheon for his guests on Sunday, the event being in the nature of "a family affair" with most of those present members of the embassy staff.

Reception Planned For Nicaraguans

There's no doubt about it—the social calendar recently has been moving along at an unusually lively clip. But chances are, the whirl hasn't been half so fast and furious as it may become early next month when notables and nobility start the influx of foreign visitors to our town.

As everybody knows, among the first expected to arrive will be Gen. Anastasio Somoza, President of Nicaragua, who will be accompanied by Senora de Somoza. But a bit of news connected with their prospective visit is that they will be feted on Saturday, May 6, at a large reception to be given by the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle. Other items on their entertainment schedule have not yet been completed and won't be until the duration of their visit is set. They will arrive May 5; be feted at a dinner at the White House on May 7, and will be overnight guests at the White House during part of their Washington sojourn.

Parties Given For Cafferys

Jefferson Caffery, United States Ambassador to Brazil, and Mrs. Caffrey, who are in New York prior to sailing for Rio de Janeiro, were honored at a cocktail party given on Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Matthew Hanna in her apartment at Hampshire House. Mrs. Hanna is one of the hotesses for the New York World's Fair.

Among the guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Luke McNamee, of Wshington, Mr. and Mrs. Julius C. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Diego Suarez, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Lay, Mrs. Tuckerman Draper, Edmund F. Hackett, Walter de Mumm and Hugh Gibson.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Caffery was honor guest at a luncheon given by Mrs. Ned Arden Flood in the Oval Room of the Ritz Carlton. Mr. and Mrs. Caffery spent several weeks in Washington earlier in the winter.

Tomorrow Mrs. Fuqua will entertain a small company at the Fashion Luncheon in honor of Mrs. Mullaney.

Alexandria Tour to Include Historic Sites

Town Mansion Built by Fairfax 187 Years Ago to Be Shown

Those going on the Alexandria tour of old houses April 15, will step into the very same places where some of the most important events of American history took place.

To begin with mentioning one—there is the Fairfax House at 207 Prince street. Built for a town mansion 187 years ago by William Fairfax, of Belvoir, it was deeded one year later in 1753 to his eldest son, George William Fairfax, the brother-in-law of Laurence Washington. George Fairfax was one of the co-founders and trustees of Alexandria. The house next passed into the hands of Robert Adam, also a town trustee, founder of the Masonic Lodge in Alexandria, and a grand master of the lodge when the cornerstone was laid for the Alexandria Academy in 1785.

Storage Chambers Under Garden

Some of the features of the house include a well in the cellar and large underground chambers in the garden for storage purposes. The arch of the stable doors remains in the east wall and the lower portion of the lot now has been turned into a sunken garden.

The house had had many owners since colonial times, all leaving some imprint. In one bricked-up room were found half a dozen or more wire hoop skirts, a coin dated 1703 and another 1824. In the library, under the floor, was found a box built in, between one of the sills, and remodelers found a crane remaining in one of the fireplaces.

Another interesting place on the tour is the home of Lewis McKensie, at 207 Prince street. It had the first bathroom and tub in Alexandria and the first heated halls.

'Dixie' Bill A Collection Item

Among the curios in the house are several old Confederate bonds and a 10 dollar bill. It was this money that gave the South the name of "Dixie." These bills were engraved in Louisiana and on one side bear the word "Dix"—for ten. Traders called them "Dixies" and thus originated the expression, the "Land of Dixie."

When the present owners of the house, Col. and Mrs. Charles Beatty Moore, returned from Warsaw, where he served as military attache, they brought back with them a cup and saucer and a glass that were used by Alexander II, Alexander III and the late Czar Nicholas at their Polish shooting lodge. Another Russian "piece" in the Moore's collection, is a small china Easter egg, which was given by the late Czarina, when, making her last official Easter visit to the hospitals, she presented each patient with one of these mementoes.

Lunch Wagons To Operate at Hunter Trials

Mrs. R. A. Brodesser is chairman of a committee of young ladies arranging for luncheon to be served from station wagons at the hunters trials of the Potomac Hunt, to be held tomorrow, starting at 11:30 a. m., at Mrs. Paul Bowers' Farm.

Assisting her will be Mrs. Paul Banfield, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, the Misses Margaret and Frances Cox, Mrs. Carlton Echo, Mrs. Fenton Fadeley, Mrs. J. N. Greear, jr.; Mrs. William Lee, Mrs. Claude Owen, Mrs. Ernest L. Smith and Mrs. C. C Viers.

Daughter Born To the McBrides

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon W. McBride, of 4542 Harrison street, nounce the birth of a daughter, Barbara, at Columbia Hospital on April 2.

Grandparents include Mr. and Mrs. Russell S. McBride, of Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. E. Walter Evans, of Cincinnati. Four great-grandparents als oare rejoicing—Mrs. George S. Werner and John G. Evans, of Cincinnati; Mrs. J. D. Williams and J. M. McBride, of Minneapolis.

Mrs. Williams is now in Washington visiting her son-in-law and daughter. Gordon McBride is associated in consulting chemical engineering practice with his father here.

Cocktail Parties Are Conspicuously Absent on Good Friday Here

UNLIKE PALM BEACH, where members of society staged a circus ball on Ash Wednesday, Washington takes Lent more seriously, and today, Good Friday, there is not so much as even one of the inevitable cocktail parties on the books.

Strictly speaking, Washington never has had much of an Easter parade. Even in New York the traditional march down Fifth avenue on that day is gradually becoming less splendid and even shows signs of disappearing altogether. However, for those to whom Easter wouldn't be Easter without a glimpse of somebody else's spring finery, the crowds at St. John's Church on Lafayette Square and St. Matthew's Church, the latter frequented by many diplomats, are guaranteed to be the most fashionable.

Speaking of St. John's—head of the Men's Club of that church is Justice Owen J. Roberts, who has made such a success since taking it over last year that the enrollment is now too large to meet in private homes, as formerly. Justice Roberts never allows social engagements to interfere with the meetings, which take place once a month.

Concerning Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mann, who arrive next Tuesday for a visit in the Capital: The head of the Mann family loves music and likes to read aloud to his children in the evening as they gather in the living room. He has six, all of whom have joined their parents in this country.

Mrs. Mann is the only one who can decipher her husband's handwriting, which he scribbles illegibly, frequently using German characters. She types his manuscripts and takes care of his correspondence and business matters. The author has adopted hte American tomato juice as a first course at dinner, but is not yet aware of the difference between football and baseball.

His massive writing desk is now ensconced in a charming red brick dwelling in Princeton, N. J. There are also his beautiful empire bookcases, from the home of his parents in Lubeck.

SPEEDING departing diplomats and welcoming spring visitors to Washington seems to be the chief occupation of Capital society at the present moment. Baron Paul Schell, Secretary of the Hungarian Legation, is being feted within an inch of his life before he sails April 19, to return to the foreign office. The Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi will give a dinner for him next Wednesday, and tomorrow evening Mrs. Fleming Newbold will be hostess at a similar party in his honor. As Baron Schell has been here 13 years, longer than any other diplomat, he has a large circle of friends.

Arriving shortly for a visit in the Capital is Mrs. W. Murray Crane, of New York, sister of Miss Mabel Boardman and Mrs. Frederick Keep. The former will give a luncheon for Mrs. Crane a week from Sunday, April 16, and Mrs. Keep will give a dinner for her on Monday, April 17.

Odds and ends: Members of the "Hasty Pudding" cast looked very weary at the cabaret at the Sulgrave Club after their show. Instead of dancing, most of them preferred to sit together in a corner and devour scrambled eggs. One of the prettiest young ladies at the party was Countess de Baillet Latour, who wore a black and white figured print . . . The Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Countess Roberti will be joined for the Easter week-end by Count Bordasi . . . After his recent lectures at the Metropolitan Club Gov. Blanton Winship distributed tiny bottles of Puerto Rican rum to all the guests . . . Carlina Sheridan will arrive on Sunday for a visit after a stay at her home in Santa Barbara . . . The wedding of Nora de With, daughter of the former Netherlands' Minister here, and beautiful Mme. de With, will take place in June. Her engagement to Jonkheer Roell was announced last winter. The de Withs, who were transferred to Berlin, will spend Easter in Holland.

AND STILL more parties scheduled: Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss will entertain at tea on Monday from 5 to 7 at Dumbarton Oaks . . . Baron and Baroness Baeyenes are among tomorrow's dinner hosts . . . The Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen will give a dinner on Thursday, April 13, and Carolyn Chantry will entertain before the Thrift Shop ball . . . Following the concert of the National Symphony Orchestra next Wedensday, at which Bruno Walter will conduct, Mrs. Tracy Dows will give a supper.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, will be joined today by her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. David Hare, of New York, who will spend Easter with her.

The Speaker of the House and Mrs. William Bankhead moved yesterday from their apartment at the Mayflower to the home which they have leased at 1552 Thirty-fourth setreet.

Mrs. Lewis K. Rockefeller, wife of Representative Rockefeller, is improving at Garfield Hospital from a tonsillectomy. She will return to their apartment at the Wardman Park the first of the week.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Frank H. Sadler have with them at the Shoreham Miss Lily Barret Brown, of Chestnut Hill, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin, of Washington, are at the Plaza Hotel in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate, who are now at the Savoy-Plaza in New York, will entertain at a cocktail party on Sunday at their residence here. They will sail April 15 for a six-week trip to England.

Miss Jeanne Barry, of Woodley Park Towers, and her house guest, Miss Claude Balfour, of New York, will attend tomorrow's hop at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Mrs. Rees McDuffie and her sister, Mrs. Harry L. Clapp, were hosts at dinner last night at the Shoreham Blue Room.

Miss Florence Mackler, of Tampa, Fla., is spending her spring vacation from William and Mary College with Mr. and Mrs. Mark Friedlander, of Fairfax, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Jeweler are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Jesse Alvin, on Monday, at Garfield Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Quarles, of Washington, are at the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York.

Mrs. Alexander G. Mosle, of New York, is at the Wardman Park.

Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Tolles, of Washington, are at the Hotel New Yorker in New York.

Franklyn Waltman, Wife To Honor the Clappers

Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Waltman have issued invitations to a reception in honor of the President of the Gridiron Club and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, on April 18, from 5 to 7, at the Willard Hotel.

The spring dinner of the Gridiron Club will be held the evening before when the guest of honor will be the President of the United States. Mr. Waltman is publicity chairman for the Republican National Committee.

Baron Schell Feted

Baron Paul Schell, of the Hungarian Legation, who will leave Washington soon to return to Bucharest, was guest of honor yesterday afternoon at a tea given by Miss Anna Wolcott Archibald at the Roosevelt Hotel.

20th Century Club Told of China War

Nothing Stays Conquered, Says Mrs. Mendelson, for Many Years Resident of Tientsin

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Nothing stays conquered in China, Mrs. J. A. Mendelson, for nine years a resident of Tientsin and former president of the woman's club there, told members of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday. The cities the Japanese have taken have been left in flames by the fleeing Chinese and the invaders have not sufficient man power to dominate for any length of time any but a small portion of the country, she said.

Mrs. Mendelson, now living in Washington, expressed the opinion that, if Japan would evacuate south China, the Chinese would be satisfied to let her have the ports she holds and would simply move further back in their vast country and build a new China.

Japan is squeezing out foreign goods by classifying her own for low duties and goods of other nations for high ones, said Mrs. Mendelson. She explained how the Japanese maintain both Chinese and foreigners as puppets in official positions while the Japanese "observers" carry on business in their own way. Chinese who have been willing to go into Japan's employ in such capacity are hated by their countrymen and the mortality among them has been high, she said. Foreigners have had no choice in many instances. She cited the instance of English officials of a Chinese railway who had been there for years, representing British interests. They are still on the payroll, receiving the same salaries they had 18 months ago when the Japanese took control; but they have been deprived of their private offices and thereby of the great prestige a private office affords in China and they have nothing to do. All the railroad regulations are now in Japanese, instead of Chinese, so they have no idea what is going on.

Coolies Welcome Japanese Pay

The coolies in rural sections held by the Japanese are willing to work for them in most cases because it means regular pay.

Answering a question as to whether banditry had ceased in Manchuria, Mrs. Mendelson said it was called by another name. There are "incidents" known to be created by the Japanese in order to give them opportunity to step in with a show of strength and restore order, thus impressing the populace.

Commenting on the attitude of the people of Japan, she declared they were being worked and taxed to death to carry on the war. They do not desire it and are, on the whole, an entirely different type from the military leaders responsible for invasion of China.

Mrs. Mendelson preceded her discussion of the war-torn country by a description of life there in peace time, the quaint customs of the natives and the interests of the members of the foreign colony.

Mrs. West Heads Anniversary Committee

Mrs. Edward G. Montgomery, president of the club, introduced her and presided at the business meeting before the program. She announced Mrs. R. Thomas West as chairman of the committee planning for the club's golden anniversary gift to Gallinger Hospital to provide occupational therapy equipment for the crippled children. Others named on the committee are Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. George R. Bowerman, Mrs. Prentiss Willson, Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. Jesse Adkins and Mrs. Richard D. Stimson.

Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of maternal and child welfare in the District, explained the need for such equipment as the club will provide for the hospital. The first event to raise funds will be the card party Monday afternoon at the Raleigh Hotel.

Mrs. Alfred Brooks gave a short resume of the club's history, its vigorous growth and the spirit of service which has characterized its activities.

Mrs. J. K. McClintock, Mrs. Paul Heyl, Mrs. J. W. Goodwin and Mrs. Bowerman were named as the auditing committee.

The club passed a resolution referring to recommendations in the Griffenhagen report on reorganization of the District Government, that the public schools and the public library be taken from under the control of their existing board, and urged that "in any reorganization of the District government, the school system be made autonomous and developed in line with the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Education," and "that the public library remain under the administrative control of an unpaid citizens' board."

Luncheon followed the club meeting.

Retiring Board of Political Study Club

Underwood & Underwood.

Mrs. Edgar Briant Meritt, president of the Political Study Club, and members of her board will be succeeded by new officers with the annual election, which will take place May 20. The nominating committee will report at the monthly meeting April 15. Left to right (seted), members of the retiring board are Mrs. Harvey P. Baxter, recording secretary; Mrs. Meritt; Mrs. Edgar Boyd Kay, first vice president; (standing) Mrs. Joseph F. Lyvers, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Henry Gordon Clay, treasurer

Economist to Give Lecture

What is the "American Standard of Living" and "How Many People Can Really Afford It" are two of the questions to be answered by Dr. Hildegarde Kneeland, economist with the National Resources Committee at 4:45 p. m. Tuesday at the headquarters of the American Association of University Women, 1634 I street northwest. The meeting is sponsored by the Washington League of Women Shoppers, of which Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel is president, and is open to the public.

Dr. Faith Williams, director of the cost of living study for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, will act as chairman. This will be the first public meeting at which both of these authorities on living costs, living standards and family incomes will be on the program.

Miss Kneeland will evaluate the performance of American economy from the consumer point of view, drawing on the results of well-known studies of consumer incomes and expenditures in the United States which have been made under her direction. She will discuss such questions as: What does it mean to be a $60,000,000,000 Nation in terms of family incomes and standards of living? How many of us can afford an "American" standard of living? How many of us are "ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-nourished?" How do the present realties compare with our potential capacity to produce an adequate living for all? And, finally, what can we do about the problem here and now—what does it mean in terms of an immediate economic program for American democracy?

Pro Bonata Club To Meet Monday

The regular meeting of the Pro Bonata Club will be held Monday at the home of Mrs. Raymond L. Keith, 4400 Dexter street northwest. Mrs. J. W. Lyles, Mrs. J. W. Dunham and Mrs. E. F. McIntire will be hostesses. Mrs. J. Edwin Reid will preside.

Mrs. Lee D. Ritter, entertainment chairman, will present the guest speaker, Mrs. Thomas P. Ahrens, who will talk on a "Visit to the West Coast of South America," illustrating with moving pictures and native costumes worn by Mrs. Ennis Almond, Mrs. Alfred L. Fleming and Miss Esther L. Beale.

The domestic section will meet Tuesday, April 18, at 8 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Silas Baker, who will instruct members how to design and fit dresses.

Arlington County Woman's Club Hears Mrs. Dunbar, General Federation President

MRS. SAIDIE ORR DUNBAR, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday afternoon addressed the Arlington County Woman's Club at its April meeting.

She hurried over to fill the speaking engagement soon after her return in the morning from Columbia, Mo., where she led one of the discussion periods at a national conference on consumer education—a subject in which the federation is taking a serious interest.

Monday, Mrs. Dunbar leaves for Florence, S. C., to address the convention of the South Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs and, on April 14, will return to speak before the Woman's Club, of York, Pa.

THE WOMEN'S GUILD of Petworth Methodist Church is sponsoring a novel concert Tuesday and Wednesday of next week—by the Kitchen Band of the organization.

Mrs. C. Edet Reed is director of the program which will be at the church, New Hampshire avenue at Grant Circle, for the benefit of the new religious education building. A year ago, the Kitchen Band was heard on the air in one of the morning radio broadcasts and was also presented in the news reels.

This season, new music is promised but the same kitchen gadgets will be used by the musicians.

Cake, candy and ice cream will be on sale.

THE CHEVY CHASE W. C. T. U. is sponsoring a benefit movie program in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A., Saturday at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m. The pictures will be "Golgotha" and "The Pay-Off," both sound films. The proceeds will go to the W. C. T. U. educational fund.

Water Carriers Oppose ICC Rates Control

Shippers Also Join Protest of Wheeler Bill at Hearing

By the Associated Press.

Representatives of shippers and water carriers told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday that Federal regulation of water carriers would increase the Nation's transportation bill.

They appeared before the committee to protest legislation proposed by Senators Wheeler (Democrat, Montana) and Truman (Democrat, Missouri), which would give the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to fix rates and otherwise regulate transportation by water as well as railroads and trucks.

"Hysteria," Says Carriers' Counsel

Herman A. Bayless, counsel for the Mississippi River System Carriers' Association, said the measure was "inspired by hysteria to save the railroads" and was "not drafted pursuant to public demand." He said it will increase water rates both on account of the expense of regulation and the raising of minimum rates by the commission to provide more equal competition with the railroads.

"Rail rates now reduced to meet water competition will likewise be increased. This is the worst possible time to increase cost of transportation when the country is struggling to recover from the depression."

Chairman Wheeler, of the Senate committee, engaged in a dispute with H. A. Feltus, of Minneapolis, representing river interests and farm organizations, as to whether low water rates had benefited either consumer or producer.

Wheeler Scores Millers

"The steel and cement and all these people, when they use these subsidized rivers and barge lines, never pass on to the consuming public the benefit of any lower costs," Wheeler told the witness. "That's likewise true of your millers in Minneapolis and St. Paul—the farmers don't get the benefit."

Feltus denied Wheeler's assertion and suggested Congress should investigate cases where producers and consumers did not benefit by low water rates.

W. H. Day, chairman of the executive committee of the National Industrial Traffic League, said his organization had repeatedly opposed regulation of waterways in the belief it would tend toward higher rates, and in some instances put existing water lines out of business.

Financier Acquitted of Perjury

Grand Jury SuretyQuiz Involves Pendergast Aides, Says Murphy

Members of the political machine of "Boss" Prendergast are involved in a Federal grand jury investigation in Kansas City, Mo., of possible income tax frauds growing out of "the Missouri insurance compromise," it was revealed yesterday.

Attorney General Murphy admitted at a press conference that he had discussed the progress of the investigation with the Federal district attorney while in Kansas City on an airplane inspection tour this week.

In response to questions, Murphy said the inquiry presented a problem of "great magnitude."

"A great many persons, some of whom are members of political organizations, are mentioned in the inquiry," Murphy explained. "The investigation is making progress."

He declined to elaborate on this comment, explaining that the whole matter was in the hands of the District attorney.

Under the compromise, insurance companies received 80 per cent and policyholders 20 per cent of a special fund of millions of dollars representing excess insurance collected as a result of rate increase.

According to company statements, $447,000 was paid the late Charles R. Street, a company attorney, for what Street said was expenses.

Budd McKillips, Labor Reporter, Dies Here at 46

Budd L. McKillips, 46, for 10 years a reporter on "Labor," the weekly newspaper of the railroad unions here, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital, after six months' illness. He had been connected with the labor movement for 25 years, and was a member of the International Association of Machinists and the National Press Club. Before coming to Washington he was connected for many years with the Minnesota Labor Review. He lived at 6500 Delfield street, Chevy Chase, Md., and was a veteran of the World War.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Philomena McKillips, and two small children.

Executives of the International Machinists Association will serve as pallbearers at the burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Reserve Banks Report $3,710,000,000 Excess

Excess reserves of $3,710,000,000—a new high record—were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Banks and the flight of "war panic" gold from Europe was blamed. In the week ending April 5, excess reserves in member banks increased $190,000,000.

2 Experts Urge Rail Merger Plan

Two widely known railroad experts told the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday they thought consolidation of the Gulf, Mobile & Northern and Mobile & Ohio railroads was both feasible and desirable.

J. S. Pyeatt, president of the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad said he felt the two railroads should be merged. Miles C. Kennedy testified that consolidation of the two lines would provide substantial operating economies and reduce rentals.

E. M. Hopkins Heads Rockefeller Board

New York, April 6 (AP).—Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth College, today was elected chairman of the General Education Board by its trustees, succeeding John D. Rockefeller, jr. The board was created in 1902 by the late John D. Rockefeller, who gave $129,000,000 to it during his lifetime.

Garner Will Greet Huge Bull Hoofing It From Texas to Fair

One thousand four hundred and thirty pounds of slightly hoof-weary bull will amble up Capitol Hill this morning to receive an official greeting from Vice President John Nance Garner. Probably the largest order of live beef ever to visit Washington, the bull—known as "Scandalous John"—will be accompanied by "Texas Jack" Hill, a cowboy who rode him from Old Glory, Tex.

It's all part of a stunt to show the superior quality of Texas beef. The bull and his rider were camped last night in Rosslyn, Va., having left Texas August 28. "Scandalous John" appeared none the worse for his trek—in fact, his owner said he had gained 100 pounds during the trip.

The two are on their way to the New York World's Fair, where the bull will be on exhibit for a year under sponsorship of the State of Texas and the Texas beef industry.

It looked last night, however, like John will cover the distance from Rosslyn to the Capitol in a trailer because he has a 10 a. m. engagement with the Vice President.

Tex and John are accompanied by a caravan of Texans who also are en route to the fair. They include Elmer (Singin' Elmer) Westbrook, Mr. and Mrs. C. Meadows and Miss Ellen Edgemon, "Miss Texas," of Weatherford, Tex.

Stimson Assailed By German Press

Berlin, April 6 (U.P.).—Several German newspapers assailed Henry L. Stimson, former United States Secretary of State, today, for his testimony before a Senate Committee concerning revision of the American neutrality act.

"Mr. Roosevelt is surprised—Stimson can do it even better," said the Swoelfuhrblatt. The Lokal Anzeiger attacked Stimson for trying to align the United States with Russia on the side of the democracies and said, "There is talk of peace only in the totalitarian states. Warmongers sit on the other side of the fence. They shiver in fear of the war into which they talk themselves day after day."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., April 6.—There's a couple of million dollars worth of baseball talent on the loose, ready for the big leagues yet unsigned by any major league clubs. There are pitchers who would win 20 games this season for any big league club that offered them contracts, and there are outfielders who could hit .350, infielders who could win quick recognition as stars, and there is at least one catcher who at this writing is probably superior to Bill Dickey.

POVICH

Only one thing is keeping them out of the big leagues—the pigmentation of their skin. They happen to be colored. That's their crime in the eyes of big league club owners.

Their talents are being wasted in the rickety parks in the Negro sections of Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and four other cities that comprise the major league of Negro baseball. They haven't got a chance to get into the big leagues of the white folks. It's a tight little boycott that the majors have set up against colored players.

It's a sort of gentleman's agreement among the club owners that is keeping Negroes out of big league baseball. There's nothing in the rules that forbids a club from signing a colored player. It's not down in black and white, so to speak. But it's definitely understood that no club will attempt to sign a colored player. And, in fact, no club could do that, because the elasticity of Judge Landis' authority would forbid it. And the judge can rule out of baseball any character whose presence he may deem "detrimental" to the game.

Just how a colored player would be detrimental to the game has never been fully explained, but that seems to be the light in which they are regarded by the baseball brass hats. Perhaps it is because there is such an overwhelming majority of Southern boys in big league baseball who would not take kindly to the presence of colored athletes and would flash a menacing spike, or so. Perhaps it's because baseball has done well enough without colored players. It's a smug, conservative business not given to very great enterprise and the introduction of new and novel features.

There have been campaigns aimed at smashing the boycott. One New York newspaper openly advocated the signing of Negro players, and Heywood Broun has often berated the baseball magnates for drawing the color line. But despite the presence of thousands of colored customers in the stands, the club owners have blithely hewed to the color line. They are content, seemingly, to leave well enough alone and make no concerted play for Negro patronage.

A $200,000 Catcher

But in its restricted localities, Negro baseball has flowered. There are Negro teams which now might do very well in big league competition even if they played as a Negro entity. The Homesteads of Pittsburgh are probably the best colored team. They train here in Florida each spring, even as do the American and National League teams. The other evening at Tinker Field, the Homesteads met the Newark Eagles of the same colored league. Curious Washington players flocked to the game, went away with a deep respect for colored baseball.

Walter Johnson sat in a box at the game, profoundly impressed with the talents of the colored players. "There," he said, "is a catcher that any big league club would like to buy for $200,000. I've heard of him before. His name is Gibson. They call him 'Hoot' Gibson, and he can do everything. He hits that ball a mile. And he catches so easy he might just as well be in a rocking chair. Throws like a rifle. Bill Dickey isn't as good a catcher. Too bad this Gibson is a colored fellow."

That was the general impression among the Nats who saw the game. They liked the Homestead catcher, and they liked the big lanky Negro pitcher for the Homesteads who struck out 12 Newark players in five innings. They liked the centerfielder who can go a country mile for the ball, and they liked the shortstop, who came up with fancy, one-handed plays all night. They had to like 'em. They were swell ball players.

Until last season there was a colored pitcher around named "Satchel" Page. The colored folks have a penchant for picturesque names for their idols and "Satchel" Page was so-called because of the size of his feet. He was 6 feet 3, a left-hander and a whale of a pitcher. "He retired last year at the age of 44," said Jimmy Wasdell, "and he was still a great pitcher. I've been on clubs that barnstormed against Negro teams and in a dozen games against this Page we never beat him. He beat Paul and Dizzy Dean one night, 1-0, and we got only one hit off him. I was the only minor leaguer on our club."

Johnson Was Mistaken

Negro baseball is now a flourishing game, but as long as 30 years ago, the colored folks had their swell ball teams. Walter Johnson, on a barnstorming trip in 1909 went to Harlem to pitch for a colored team against the Lincoln Giants. "I didn't know it was to be a colored team," Johnson was saying, "but they were paying me $600 for the day's work and that was big money. I went up there with my catcher, Gabby Street. Gabby was from Huntsville, Ala., and he didn't like the idea of playing colored baseball, but the $300 he got was too much to overlook.

"It was the only time in my life that I was ever 2-to-1 to lose. Those were the odds they were offering against me. I'll never forget the first hitter I faced. He was an outfielder they called 'Home Run Johnson.' Up at the plate, he says to me, 'come on, Mr. Johnson, and throw that fast one in here an' I'll knock it over the fence.' That's what he did, too. But it was the only run they got off me and I won the game, 2-1.

"I didn't like the way this 'Home Run' Johnson was crowing about his hit, so the next few times up there I buzzed a couple close to his head just to scare him. He was hitting the dirt all day. Then in the last inning, he didn't even wait for me to cut loose. He ducked before I let the ball go. Then he got up off the ground to see what had happened and stuck his head in the way of a slow curve I had just cut loose."

On the Line

With Considine

New York, April 6.—The New York World's Fair is going to have a lot of sports exhibits, ranging from a lecture entitled "Why I've Never Sold a Ballplayer," by Connie Mack, to Joe Cook's famous baseball—a pellet known from coast to coast as the only ball not autographed by Babe Ruth.

It's all going to be very thrilling. Joe Louis is going to train on the fair grounds for that single punch he's going to throw at Tony Galento. All the great professional golfers are going to give lessons, guaranteed to be stolen from Alex Morrison. Johnny Vander Meer is going to be crowned as 1938's outstanding athlete, and a lot of other headliners will at one time or another go into a full knee squat and flex their muscles with a musical twang.

CONSIDINE

But Eleanor Holm is going to take off her clothes.

That gives her a natural advantage over the field, so of all the bicep blokes and muscles molls who'll parade before the millions of fair visitors this summer, only Eleanor has been singled out for official ballyhooing by the fair.

Her picture, you know the three-quarter view with her eyes half-closed and her legs crossed, is the only sports picture in the last and greatest of the bulletins issued today by the fair. She ranks right up with General Motors, the British Empire pavilion and the double-talk invitation from Grover Whalen, whose own picture accidentally slipped into the bulletin's first page.

No One Has Replaced Our Little Nell

The only record Eleanor has broken for the past few years is the one for continuous attendance at Billy Rose's Casa Manana, but the world still has a soft spot in its head for the most beautiful girl in the history of sport. Since the American Olympic committee gave her the old heave-o for lightheartedly taking on a load of champagne on the way to Berlin in 1936, no girl has taken her place in sports. Maybe that is because none of the current molls can knock your hat off by appearing in a zebra-striped bathing suit. But then, too, Nelly had a lot of class even when all you could note of her was a piece of trailing wet hair, a sound like a porpoise and a bubbly wake. She broke a record every time she used a finger bowl. Many of them still stand, though she cracked some of them as far back as ten years ago.

It looks as if Nelly is the first athlete in history to make more dough out of a torso after the spring ran down than was made during the period of competition.

Nobody has asked Babe Ruth to writhe into a strip-tease at the air, or Strangler Lewis to lie in a giant fishbowl, exposed to yokelry's rude and piercing stare. Nor has there been any audible demand for La Moody, in a grass skirt, or Babe Didrikson, in a leopard hide. The fair took Nelly, put her in the skin-tight lame number, told her to give it that oomph for the photogs and gave her equal billing with Ford and General Foods.

A Life Full of Laughs and Thrills

Nelly's had a life full of laughs and thrills, and came through it with a smile, a toss of her long bob and a hip twitch. She was a sports page figure (but not the figure she was later to be), when she was 14. She was the baby of the 1928 American Olympic team; the babe of the 1932 squad and the hot mamma of the 1936 team. She was chucked off the latter team for being honest enough to take a drink in public. Some of the officials who voted to drum her off the club never missed a cocktail party on the boat en route to Europe, and roared the loudest at the unpardonably lecherous mock trial held on board one night and presided over by Gustavus T. Kirby.

She's an old hand at fairs. She kept the one at Cleveland out of the red a couple of years ago under tough circumstances. Billy Rose's aquacade was built around a mosquito-breeding pool, which had been seasoned to taste with several truckloads of junk dumpings.

Many a night our favorite cutie dived in that loathsome stew and came up smiling theatrically with a rubber boot in her full ruby lips and a dead sunfish for a lavalliere. She'll find no such flotsam and jetsam at the fair. Her water theater cost a cool million bucks. There hasn't been a bath like it since Nero's dunk. Billy Rose is going to use soda water for water, to make Eleanor feel more at home. Nobody can ever say Billy didn't do right by our Nell.

Rip Hewitt Leads Team With 4 Goals

Terps Ahead, 5-1 At Half; Win Easily Over Crimson Ten At College Park

University of Maryland's black and gold clad lacrosse warriors proved too strong for Harvard yesterday at College Park and the mighty men of Maryland triumphed 13-3, before a few hundred spectators who were soaked to the skin by a continuous downpour.

The spirit of Coach Jack Faber's lads were not dampened, however, for with the game only two minutes and 19 seconds old, Bill Bond, first attack, sent the pellet into the net to register the Terps' first point, and to serve notice to the visitors that they were contending with a group of athletes that eyed the national championship.

Following Bond's shot, Rip Hewitt, Jim Meade, Hewitt again and Jim Heil scored in that order to give Maryland a 5-0 lead. Late in the second period, Jess Willard, Harvard center, smashed one through and the score stood, Maryland 5; Harvard 1, as the first half closed.

The Terps continued their hot scoring spree in the second half by whipping eight more shots by the Harvard goalie, while the Crimson could only muster two.

Rip Hewitt, with four goals, and Jim Heil, who scored the same number, were the big guns in Maryland attack. Milton Mulitz played a beautiful defensive game.

Jess Willard and Phil Hammond were outstanding offensively for Harvard, while Ben Wilcox and Norman Blotner seemed to be the entire Crimson defense.

20 Years' Golf Finally Rewarded With Hole-in-One

White Sulphur Spring, W. Va., April 6 (AP).—Twenty years of golfing was rewarded today for Earl E. T. Smith, wealthy sportsman, with his first hole-in-one.

Smith, first husband of Consuelo Vanderbilt, playing with Sam Snead, White Sulphur pro, scored the ace on the 200-yard third hole of the old White course.

After Smith drove, Snead shouted through the rain that it was a one-shotter. Whereupon Smith turned a somersault on the rain-soaked tee.

As far as the match was concerned, it did Smith no good. Slammin' Sam scored a 67 to beat the New Yorker in spite of a seven-stroke handicap.

Reds and Bosox Lose 48 Balls; Quit Tied, 18-All

40-Mile Gale No Help In Daffy Game; Craft's Foul Ends It All

By the Associated Press.

Florence, S. C., April 6 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox and Cincinnati Reds struggled through eight innings of a ball game today in a 40-mile wind that rolled great clouds of dust over the newly laid out diamond. Then they had to quit, with the score 18 to 18 (verified by expert statisticians).

Harry Craft, second man up in the Reds' half of the ninth, fouled the last of a supply of 48 balls into the gathering of 2,387.

Ival Goodman was on first because he singled. He might have scored to put the Reds in the lead once again. But they couldn't play ball any more so the score, the record, and all sentiments reverted to the eighth.

Up to that time the Reds made 24 hits and 3 errors and the Sox 22 and 2. Four home runs were hit. Any number of hits went into the crowd for ground rule doubles. Seven pitchers tried in vain to fight the wind and dust and opposing batters.

The field was completed just a week ago and there wasn't a blade of grass on the diamond. The fire department hosed it down just before game time, but the gale quickly dried it out and the dust rose again, completely obscuring left-field at times.

In the third the wind blew off Billy Meyers' cap and they called time to let him chase it. That inning the Red Sox got their first bundle of seven runs. In the seventh, L. Berger, of the Six, popped one out the leftfield foul line, but the wind picked it up and gave him a double. The Sox got three runs that inning to take the lead briefly.

This sort of thing went on and on until the bobtailed end.

Willis Hudlin hurled the first six innings and was touched for five hits. Bob Feller and Floyd Stromme twirled an inning apiece, each giving up one hit.

The Indians have made only 15 hits in their last three games against minor league opposition. Today only two of them reached second base.

Dick Chapman Beats Burke At Pinehurst

Intercollegiate Champion Bows 2 and 1 in 3d Round

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 6.—Johnny Burke, Georgetown University's Intercollegiate champion, from Providence, R. I., bowed out in the quarter-final round of the North and South Amateur Tournament here today to Dick Chapman, night club singer, of Greenwich, Conn. Chapman, semifinalist in the National Amateur last year, won on the seventeenth green, 2 and 1.

Burke was not extended in defeating R. A. Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, by a 5 and 4 margin in a second-round morning encounter.

Chapman and Burke were even through the fourteenth hole, but the collegiate champ's putter faltered on the next three holes and his inaccurate putting cost him the match.

Frank Strafaci, of Brooklyn, N. Y., the defending champion, and two other seasoned performers also marched through heavy rains today into the semifinals.

Charles Whitehead, of South Orange, N. J., and Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., were the other winners. In tomorrow's semifinals Strafaci meets Chapman.

Strafaci, former public links champ, defeated Palmer Laughridge, of Salisbury, N. C., 2 and 1 in the second round this morning and came back after the downpours this afternoon and eliminated E. H. Crandell, of Bronxville, N. Y., 5 and 4.

Ed Meister, a Yale student, put over the major upset with a second-round victory at the nineteenth hole over George T. Dunlap, jr., of Pinehurst, 1933 national amateur champion and five-times winner of the North and South title.

Dunkelberger, winner of the French amateur last summer and 1937 North and South winner, measured off Meister in the afternoon round, 4 and 3.

Paul Still Holdout After Refusing Cut In 1939 Wages

By the Associated Press.

Sarasota, Fla., April 6.—Outfielder Paul Waner, still a holdout, said today he would be in the Pittsburgh lineupon opening day April 17 "if the club needs me."

The one time fence-buster, who was offered a contract calling for a sizable salary cut because of a batting slump last year, is one of a pair of regular major leaguers who have not yet come to terms with the baseball bosses. The other is Don Heffner, of the St. Louis Browns.

Several weeks ago Paul returned a proffered contract unsigned and said today he had not talked terms with the Pirate management recently, but planned to do so before long.

He said:

"I got a letter from Benswanger (William E. Benswanger, president of the Pirates) about the 25th of last month telling me where I could

First Hockey Series Game Won by Bruins

Toronto Bows, 2-1, Before 16,523 in Opener at Boston

By the United Press.

Boston, April 6.—The Boston Bruins completed the first leg of their final flight to the world ice hockey championship tonight when they defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs, 2-1, in the opening game of a best-of-seven series, played before a crowd of 16,523 in Boston Garden.

Two lightning offensive thrusts by the famed "Kitchener Kid" line and a tight defense spelled victory for the Bruins, who have been eliminated four times in past playoffs by Toronto on hockey's most persistent jinx.

Bobby Bauer, scrappy little Boston winger, scored the winning goal on a brilliant solo rush late in the third period. Bauer picked up a loose puck about center ice and fought his way past the Leafs' defense of Bucko McDonald and Reg Hamilton to beat Goalie Turk Broda at 15:31.

The Bruins, who broke five records in their march to the league title and led the Leafs by 13½ games, now are 5-2 favorites to smash the Toronto jinx and win their first Stanley Cup title in ten years. The second game of the series will be played here Sunday night. Then follow games at Toronto April 11 and 13, and, if necessary, others April 16 at Boston, April 18 at Toronto, and April 20 at Boston.

Score by periods:
Boston	1	0	1—2
Toronto	0	0	1—2

Scoring:

First period—Boston, Dumart (Shore, Bauer), 16:04.

Second period—No scoring.

Third period—Toronto, Horner (Marker, Romnes), 13:54. Boston, Bauer (unassisted), 15:31.

Case Hits Homer That Winds Up a Double and an Out; Other Weird Doings

By Shirley Povich.
Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., April 6.—Beating the Dodgers at their own game with a display of quaint Brooklyn baseball, the Nats incidentally helped to beat themselves today. The score was 5 to 3, and at the finish the Nats had out-daffied the daffiness boys.

There were strange goings-on at Tinker Field today. The Dodgers got into the running for daffiness honors along about the seventh inning when Brooklyn Catcher Al Todd gave vigorous chase to a foul pop off the bat of Jimmy Wasdell. Showing rare speed, Todd galloped to the grandstand wall behind the plate in an attempt to make the catch. He'd have made it, too, if he had stopped running about 10 feet sooner. As it was the ball dropped harmlessly behind his back.

But the piece de resistance of the afternoon's daffiness was provided by the fleet-footed George Case, Washington's centerfield. Case, in the third inning, hit a home run that was not a home run. In fact, it started out as a single, became a home run, and ended up as a two-base hit.

How It All Happened

It happened this way:

Banging one of fat Freddie Fitzsimmons' pitches on the thick end of his bat, Case whacked it on a line into centerfield and saw it take a freak hop over Centerfielder Tuck Stainback's head. As Stainback gave chase to the ball, Case unleashed all his speed in a dash for home.

He was running in beautiful form. He rounded first with all sails set and dashed for second. He rounded second in a veritable burst of speed and streaked for third with another great sprint and crossed home plate standing up.

Imagine Case's embarrassment when Shortstop Leo Durocher called for the ball, flipped it to Tony Lazzeri at third base, and Umpire Grieve called him out. It seems that young Mr. Case, infected by the presence of the daffiness boys, had neglected to touch third base.

Chase Pitches Good Ball

Otherwise, except for the final score, the game was not especially displeasing to Manager Bucky Harris. He saw, among other things, young Ken Chase give the Dodgers a horrible time of it in the six innings he pitched. The Dodgers scored one run against Case, but

Reds Picked to Win National Pennant, With Cubs Second

Cincinnati's Mound Staff Called Tops

Redlegs Also Boast Plenty of Power; Cardinals Pegged For Third Place

Cuddy's Selections

1. Cincinnati	5. Pittsburgh
2. Chicago	6. Brooklyn
3. St. Louis	7. Boston
4. New York	8. Philadelphia

New York, April 6.—Picking the National League pennant winner:

For the past two seasons I have been singularly fortunate in naming the National circuit finishers—one, two, three. But this year I'll probably take a beating, for two reasons: (1) I'm forced to agree with most of the experts, and (2) the situation is so jumbled.

After browsing about the grapefruit circuit for a couple of weeks, I can come to but one conclusion—that the Cincinnati Reds will grab the flag. That's my prediction, and I make it with quaking knees because most of the baseball writers I talked to in the Southland seem to be of the same opinion. It's always dangerous to agree with them.

Tops in Hurling

I figure Bill McKechnie's Reds have the top combination of pitching, power, spirit and managerial guidance. Most observers place more emphasis on their pitching, but I rate the four factors of almost equal importance in a pennant campaign. I cannot forget that they were almost as strong in club batting in 1938 as the two power clubs, St. Louis and Pittsburgh. The Cards had a club average of .2789; Pittsburgh, .2786, and Cincinnati, .277. The Reds, incidentally, drove in 723 runs, just two less than the Cards.

There is no reason to believe that the Reds will be less powerful at bat this season than last, although some skeptics insist that Ernie Lombardi, the circuit's leading hitter; Ival Goodman and Frank McCormick were belting above their heads.

Their pitching should be the best by far in the circuit. They have a grand rotating staff in Paul Derringer, Lee Grissom, Bucky Walters, Johnny Vander Meer and Whitey Moore. Although Whitey won only four games in '38, Derringer says Whitey will be the mound sensation of the club this year. Paul says "Whitey has arrived." Despite Vander Meer's threatened appendicitis, he is rounding into shape rapidly and will be ready when the season opens.

Infield Only Problem

McKechenie's only problem seems to be the infield. Some observers question the abilities of Billy Myers and Lonnie Frey around the keystone sack. They ask also just how much strength Bill Werber will add to the infield. I am confident that McKechnie will have a very fine infield operating when the season opens. He is one of the greatest managers in the game, and, after witnessing the miracle he wrought with Lombardi last year, I would not be surprised at anything.

McKechnie's ability to develop players, particularly pitchers, is rivaled only by his ability to inspire a club with the proper team spirit—to make it a playing unit. At the present writing, the young hustling Reds have the best morale in the majors. They're out after that flag this time, and they'll probably get it—probably jump from fourth place to the World Series.

I figure the Cubs will finish second. It's quite doubtful that Manager Gabby Hartnett will be able to catch more than half the season for the league champions of '38, and I'm afraid Gus Mancuso is a bit too old to be a proper replacement, although Gus is plenty smart. Bartell, from the Giants, is having leg trouble, and even if his leg heals properly, it is doubtful if he can match the brilliant shortstopping of his predecessor, Jurges. The Cubs seem weak in pitching too, with Bill Lee and Clay Bryant expected to carry most of the burden.

Cardinals Rated Third

My surprise prediction is that St. Louis will finish third, rising from their sixth place spot in second division. They have the power, and I'm confident their new manager, Ray Blades, will add enough pitching strength from three promising rookies: Sunkel, Raffensberger and Cooper.

The Giants and Pirates will battle for fourth place, with New York winning out and the Corsairs dropping into second division. The Giants have added a bit of power in Bonura and Wyatt, but their infield looks like a floperoo defensively, particularly with Whitehead still a question mark. Their pitching may be uncertain, too, with Hubbell and Schumacher apparently fading. Pittsburgh's morale is gone. They lack an ace flinger and have no southpaw, now that Ed Brandt has been expelled from the club for breaking training.

Brooklyn will come sixth. Their new pilot, Leo Durocher, has the boys hustling, but even if Van Mungo wins 18 games, I don't see how they can better sixth place, they have so many weaknesses. Poor Casey Stengel and his Boston Bees will slip to seventh because of a slow outfield, despite Al Simmons' appearance there, and a weakened infield.

The Phillies have acquired a new manager, Doc Prothro, but that's the Doc's hard luck. His club is so bad it would have difficulties making first division in the Evangeline League.

Nats Beaten In Weird Game By Daffy Boys

Case Hits Homer and Winds Up Out on Third; Other Queer Doings

Nats

they didn't get a hit in the procedure.

In fact, except for a brief spree of wildness which he brought under control after the second inning, the left-handed Chase was considerable pitcher this afternoon. He walked four men in his six innings, but in the fourth he struck out the entire side in one-two-three order. And he gave up only five hits, none of which was of greater dimension than one base.

Lazzeri Scores

The lone run the Dodgers did score off Chase happened in the second inning after he had walked Ernie Koy and Tony Lazzeri. With one out, Lazzeri scored from third while Durocher was hitting into a force play.

The Dodgers won the ball game immediately after young Joe Haynes commenced to pitch for the Nats in the seventh. Six of their 11 hits they made against Haynes in the last three innings. Four of their hits they packed into the seventh when they came up with three runs to break a 1-to-1 tie.

Vito Tamulis, the former Yankee who relieved Fitzsimmons on the mound today, proved to be a better hitter for the Dodgers than a pitcher. It was he who drove in the last two Brooklyn runs in the seventh with a double to right field after Lazzeri had walked and Hudson had rifled a single to right. A third run was scored in that inning when Coscarart made his third straight hit—a single to right.

Dodgers Get Another

In the ninth, they picked up another run against Haynes, who disposed of Tamulis this time by walking him. A sacrifice, a wild throw by Jimmy Bloodworth at third base, and Moore's single to right got the run home.

The Nats weren't particularly against Fitzsimmons in the first five innings. The one run they made in the fourth tied the score at 1-all at the time. Buddy Myer drove it in with his second straight hit, a double to left after Estalella had walked and Wright had singled to right.

Trailing, 4-1, in the seventh, the Nats got back into the ball game with two runs against Tamulis. After Wasdell walked, Haynes himself drove in a run with a triple to right, and Bloodworth scored him with a single through the box. But thereafter the Nats made only one useless hit off Tamulis.

Notes of the Nats—The Boston Bees move in on the Nats tomorrow for the start of a seven-game series . . . They are apt to face Joe Krakauskas, who shut them out for seven innings at Bradenton the other day . . . Charley Gelbert went hitless this afternoon, but it wasn't his fault . . . It was the fault of Centerfielder Tuck Stainback, who galloped far, far into deep center to drag down a line drive off Gelbert's bat that was the most beauteous blow of the day . . . Speaking both offensively and defensively . . . Bobby Estalella tried valiantly to drive in the tying run in the seventh, with a two-bagger to left, but he could only advance the runner to third . . . The Nats looked better losing to the Dodgers today than they did winning from Baltimore yesterday . . . Two wild throws by Jimmy Bloodworth didn't help the Nats . . . Bloodworth, a natural second baseman, was playing third, because of a slight leg injury to Buddy Lewis . . . He made several fancy stops, but was off-line with his throws . . . Jimmy Wasdell finally got a hit today, but it was in the field that he starred with his fancy stops and pick-ups . . . Leo Durocher invited some Orlando friends of his to the World Series after the game . . . But apparently he wasn't banking on his Brooklyn club to be playing in the series, because his invitation was along these lines: "Why don't you come up and see the series with me? We'll have good seats."

With Richards Vidmer

News Release

When you're just sitting and meditating on what a dark, dull and dismal day it is and how you wished spring really would arrive, and the ball clubs would come home, and the outdoor fights would start, you don't mind an interruption. And it was under such circumstances that a little ray of sunshine came bursting in.

VIDMER

Perhaps you've heard me speak of Chick Wergeles in the past. He has been a very colorful character around parts of our town for several years. When I first knew him he was working for Jack Curley, trying to convince everyone who would listen that wrestling was on the level. But since then he has been turning square.

In the fall he come calling in behalf of the New York Giants of the Professional Football League. And he has learned not to call them "collateral passes" and that Colgate is a College, not a toothpaste. In the winter he comes around in the service of the college basketball games at Madison Square Garden. But this time it was something else, even more surprising.

"Nothin' but high class stuff for Chick," he grinned when I looked up with a questioning expression. "Me, I'm gettin' more and more class, see? Look, I want to tell you about a golf game they're going to have—"

"Wait a minute, Chick," I interrupted. "What do you know about golf?"

"Nothin'," he replied quite frankly: "But I didn't know nothin' about football either, did I? And what do I know about basketball? But that don't stop me from tellin' you about this game that's comin' off—"

Slight Confusion

Indifferently I wondered what he was stalking about. Vaguely I followed his explanations. And then suddenly I began to understand. It was when he mentioned Goodall that I realized what it was all about.

"It's the Goodall Tournament," he said. "You know, he's the champ, isn't he?"

"Who's the champ?"

"Goodall. Somebody told me Ralph Goodall won the title a couple years. I don't know who he beat though."

You mean Guldahl," I said. "Goodall is a manufacturing company and the Goodall tournament is a round robin affair that started last year."

"Sure, that's it! That's what I came to tell you about—a Round Robert—say, what's a Round Robert, anyway? What do they mean by that?"

So I told him that it was a tournament in which every player met every other player in the event and they totaled up the number of holes won by each contestant in order to decide the winner. Last year Sam Snead and Gene Sarazen each had taken 14 holes from their opponents in the field and Snead had beaten Sarazon in the playoff. That was at Cincinnati.

"Yeah," smiled Chick. "That's right. Somebody told me they played it at Cincinnati last year. Say, you know somethin' about this golf, don't you. Maybe you could tell me what this means."

First Lessons

He took a slip of paper from his pocket on which was written such items as the following: "Woods—driver, brassie, spoon. Irons—No. 1, driving iron; No. 2, midiron; No. 3, mid-mashie" and so on down to the putter. There also were such words as "interlocking," "overlapping," "hook," "slice," "stymie" and "honor."

"They told me to study that," Chick explained. "But I don't know what it means."

So I explained the various clubs and what they were used for and the various terms and what they meant. Chick followed the explanation with an uncertain expression as though he wasn't quite sure whether I was ribbing him or not.

"Yeah?" he asked, looking up when I had concluded. "That's what I thought." Then after a brief pause, he asked, almost timidly, "Do you play this game?"

I admitted that I did, after a fashion.

"Yeah, hey, look, maybe I could get you in this—what do you call it now? Round Robert?"

"With Snead and Henry Picard and Horton Smith and Ralph Guldahl? Never mind, Chick. I'm not in their class."

"Oh, a bunch of bums, eh?" he asked. "They told me these were good players."

More Explanations

I explained they were the best in the world and that I was the bum. But Chick apparently wasn't listening, for he registered no surprise whatever at this confession and immediately started asking other questions. He wanted to know what you played the game with, and when I took a ball out of my pocket and showed it to him he asked what you bounced it against. I explained that you hit it with a club.

"Like a baseball, eh? How far can you hit one of these things? I bet they're harder to hit than a baseball at that. What do you

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

"The general ordered all citizens to leave the city.

"The mayor and council petitioned him to revoke the order. They said:

RUNYON

"'It will involve consequences appalling and heartrending. There are many poor women with young children whose husbands are away in the army, prisoners, or dead. They have no house to go to and no means to build or buy one; no friends or relations to go to.

"'How is it possible for these women to find shelter or how can they live through the winter in the woods?'

"To this petition the general replied that he would not revoke his orders because they were not intended to meet the humanities of the case. They were to go be cared not where, the aged and infirm, women and children, to find shelter wherever they might—a cruel order."

Now we got the above out of an old book and it not about something that happened in a foreign land, either. It is about something that is said to have happened right here in this country and while it was a long time ago, the paragraphs we quote are worth reading at this time because they serve as a reminder that war is always about the same no matter where it is waged, or by whom.

We say "it is said to have happened" because we have to make allowances here for some partisan feeling in the paragraphs such as generally colors all reports of incidents in which partisan feeling is involved. We can find other books that take that identical order covered by the above paragraphs and show you that it was not a cruel order at all, but a matter of necessity.

A military necessity to one side in a war is usually a dastardly outrage to the other side, and this is what the author of the old book we have been reading considered an incident that a couple of generations of school children in many sections of these United States were brought up to believe was in truth and in fact a great and glorious triumph for their sectional arms.

This was Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman's campaign in Georgia during our great Civil War, when one part of the population of the country was imposing it's will on another part by force

Schoolboy Golf League to Be Split Into Two Sections

Frank Emmet Resigns Post At Hoya Prep

Will Continue Efforts In Behalf of Separate Sections, However; Colangelo Assisting

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The Metropolitan Scholastic Golf League, organized last year through the efforts of Frank Emmet, the District of Columbia Golf Association and Birch Bayh, will continue this year in two sections — the public schools in one and preparatory and suburban institutions in the other, with the winners meeting for the championship.

EMMET

Emmet will remain in his role as the chief backer of scholastic golf in this sector, despite his recent resignation as general manager of Georgetown Preparatory School, where he gained Eastern recognition for the school's links activities.

Emmet is working with Julian Colangelo, athletic director of Anacostia; Bayh, public school physical education head, and District Golf Association President D. D. L. McGrew on the schedule for this year.

Six of the public schools, Tech, Central, Western, Wilson, Anacostia and Roosevelt, will compete in a separate league for the Dawes Cup championship. Eastern has not yet recognized golf and will not compete.

Georgetown Prep and St. John's are missing from the Metropolitan sector, with Rockville and George Washington taking their place. Gonzaga, 1938 champions; Devitt, Bethesda, and Montgomery Blair will again enter teams.

The same conditions will mark the play that was successful last year in its tryout. The District Golf Association will furnish the private courses. The teams will be of six men, with all competitors under 19, and a faculty representative must be present for each match.

The season will be several weeks shorter due to the divided schedule, with competition opening Tuesday, April 18, and closing Tuesday, May 9, and now that it is reality Emmet has pushed plans for a league for the schoolboy golfers for years and now that it is reality, he hopes to place the loop on a self-supporting basis in the future. Graduates of the league will be made directors for tournament play after school closes.

Emmet, a member of the Congressional Country Club, expects to remain active in his pet hobby despite his severence with Georgetown Prep. As director of golf there, one of his final moves was to map out a schedule of competition with other private schools throughout the east, that caused the Little Hoyas to withdraw from the local loop.

With a majority of the junior stars in this sector entered in the schools, the league strength will be well divided, with George Vass, Western, Earl Skinker and Ralph Bogart, Wilson, upholding the public high end while Jim Thompson, Blair, and David Ross, Rockville, loom as the individual stars of the prep and county sextets.

Buddy Sharkey, captain of the champion Gonzaga team and scholastic titleholder, is the main loss through graduation of the outstanding players, others including Jack Dettweiler, Georgetown Prep.

'Pop' Woodfield Is Happiest When Handling Horse Hardware

Game's Greatest Booster Here; Arranges Matches

By Bill Burnett.

An unidentified British officer, back in the days when Great Britain was about the business of chastising its colonies for dumping its tea into Boston Harbor, has been credited with giving the game of horseshoe pitching its first international boost. The Britisher wrote home to merry England, attempting to explain why the Yanks were raising all Ned with the redcoats, "they keep themselves in excellent physical condition by throwing a horse's hardware back and forth."

That was a quaint and delicate way of putting it, and since then the game has been plugged by some of the greatest sportsmen of all time. Washington's best horseshoe builder-upper, however, lays no claim to the term "great," but lets the matter drop with a careless "I guess I'm just a bug on the subject."

Official Promoter

Harry (Pop) Woodfield, a horny-handed gent of 62 summers, is officially the promotion director of the Washington Suburban Horseshoe Pitchers Association, but he doesn't stick very closely to office hours. He never stops talking about the benefits and pleasures of horseshoes, and he could persuade a Fiji Islander to take up the game.

Pop's latest promotional effort is a set of international matches which will be tossed in Washington on Sunday, May 21. It will be the opening engagement in a solid week of horseshoe competition all over the country. Two Canadian teams, led by Dean McLaughlin, 17-year-old champion of Canada, will compete with the best pitchers from this area in a series of A and B team matches.

To hear "Pop" tell it, bringing the Canadian team here just about clinches a place for horseshoe pitching in the sports sun. That's what he hopes for, among other things slightly more definite and less possible. You'd think "Pop" had promoted horsesoe throwing since he was a youngster.

Best With Shoes

The fact is, however, that the elder Woodfield took up the game only two years ago. "Pop" and his son, Bill, played golf for a number of years and followed that with table tennis. As "Pop" puts it, "seemed like I was beatin' the boy all the time." The friendly competition finally led to horseshoes, and there Bill found his stride. He can beat his dad, now, and he managed to finish in second place in last year's D. C. championships behind Irwin Carlberg.

"Pop" goes on with his promotion, though, unmoved by his son's superiority. "Someday," he promises, "horseshoe pitching will be included in the Olympics, and the 4,000,000 pitchers now exercising every day will be doubled—even tripled."

"Why," he continues, "it's without a doubt the healthiest game in existance. Give me any man with a 42-inch or bigger waist and I'll guarantee he'll knock off six inches in six months. And, mark this, it's not strenuous enough to cause those deaths from heart failure that are laid to golf and other sports."

"Organization," the kindly gentleman concludes, "has definitely put horseshoe pitching up among the major sports. Why, one big club in Rhode Island was started from nothing more pretentious than a dead horse. Yes sir, an Irish policeman took all the shoes off the animal, pounded two stakes into the floor of his stable, and built one of the largest clubs in the East with that humble beginning."

Hader Victory Is Unfavorable With Mat Fans

Red Ryan Defeated In Feature Match; Murphy Is Winner

Most of the 1,500 fans who packed Turner's Arena last night went home protesting Jack Hader's victory over Red Ryan.

The usual trouble started when Hader, better known as "Bad Boy," began using illegal holds on Ryan. Finally Ryan came to life and started dishing out the same kind of medicine to his stubborn opponent and was on his way to victory when he knocked down the referee. This unfortunate break brought about his defeat.

As Ryan was using his dropkick effectively on Hader, Bortnick got in the way and was thrown to the floor, and was out for several seconds. It was then Ryan put Hader's shoulders to the floor and kept them there for the necessary count. When he got up and paraded around the ring proclaiming his victory, Hader landed a terrific blow on his chin that brought Ryan to the floor. After that Hader had little trouble pinning his opponent.

P. S. Benny Bortnick came to in time to count Ryan out.

In the opening bout, "Dropkick" Murphy defeated Jim Mahoney with his famous dropkick in 23¼ minutes. Nanjo Singh won over Nick Campofreda in 20½ minutes after both wrestlers were thrown out of the ring several times. This bout nearly caused a riot as spectators threatened to enter the ring and do battle with the unpopular Singh when he deliberately fouled his opponent after being warned by the referee. The riot didn't materialize, however, as spectators calmed the excited fans. The end came after Singh got his Hindu necklock on Campofreda.

"King Kong" Symkowsky defeated Jim Wright in 8½ minutes and Alonzo Wood was disqualified after he continually fouled Ernie Power. The bout was stopped after 11 minutes.

Operation Is Set For Lamaster's Arm

Orlando, Fla., April 6 (AP).—Wayne Lamaster, southpaw pitcher obtained by the Brooklyn Dodgers from the Phillies last year, will have an operation performed in St. Louis for removal of a cartilage from his left elbow. Lamaster would be out of action for six weeks.

Veteran Will Referee Louis-Roper Fight

Los Angeles, April 6 (AP).—George V. Blake, veteran fight referee and manager of boxers, was named by the California Athletic Commission today to be the third man in the ring for the heavyweight championship bout here April 17 between Joe Louis and Jack Roper.

Two Midshipmen to Compete at Wimbledon

Joe Hunt, David Marks Will Leave Fleet at Antwerp for Net Play

Hunt's Game Reported Sharper; Gilbert Hunt Helps Him Along

Annapolis, April 6 (AP).—Official announcement that two midshipmen would play in the Wimbleton World Tennis Championships for the first time in Naval Academy history was made here today.

Joe Hunt, Los Angeles plebe, who gave up a berth on the Davis Cup squad to enter the academy, and David A. Marks, ranked No. 1 on the Naval varsity, will enter the all-England championships June 26.

The two midshipmen will leave the Navy practice cruise at Antwerp in time to enter the world championships on the famous grass courts at the British tennis mecca.

Hunt was ranked fifth last year in the national tennis listings when they were first issued. When Don Budge turned professional, he was automatically advanced to fourth in the United States standings.

Arthur Hendrix, once ranked tenth in national standings and now coach at the academy, reported Hunt's game was sharper this year than ever before. Gilbert Hunt, ranked eighth nationally, has been coming to the academy from his Washington, D. C., home every Sunday to practice with the Navy plebe.

Hendrix and Marks have been playing regularly with the two Hunts.

Marks and Hunt, in addition to playing in the Wimbledon singles, will also enter the doubles tourney as a team.

Their entry in the tournament will mark the first time the Blue and Gold colors of the United States Naval Academy have been entered in the world's No. 1 tennis classic.

Goodall Tourney Is Slated June 1

New York, April 6 (AP).—The annual Goodall Trophy Round-Robin Golf Tournament, for $5,000 in cash and a $500 cup, will be played June 1-4 at the Fresh Meadow Country Club, Flushing, N. Y., it was announced today. The first Goodall Tourney was won last year by Sammy Snead at Cincinnati, and the West Virginia slugger will be back to defend his honors against a field including Ralph Guldahl, two-time U. S. Open Champion, Henry Picard and Horton Smith.

Other starters will be named later. There will be fourteen players in all, with the winner decided on the aggregate number of holes won in a series of 168-hole threesomes and foursomes.

Georgetown-Harvard Game Is Rained Out

reach him if I wanted to talk terms. I haven't answered that letter.

"However, I'll tell you this—I will talk with the club management before the season opens, and unless they have some better player, P. Waner will be in the starting lineup at Cincinnati."

Waner has been taking it fairly easy at his home here where he and his wife are spending the winter, but he hasn't neglected his baseball.

"I started working out a good ten days ahead of any other players in the league and have continued it daily since," he explained.

"I have been working out in a Class AA minor league club and I'm in better shape right now than when the season opened last year."

Paul asserted before spring training began that he was confident his slump last season was only temporary. He expressed hope today that the Pirates still would find him useful.

"They won't find me hard to talk to, and I don't think we will have much trouble coming to terms," he added.

Bearing Down

Sure Miss Takes Jackson Purse in Blanket Finish at Bowie

Pays $9.50 Price; Topee Is Second

Romaunt Takes Down Show Money; 6,000 Brave Bad Weather To Attend Sport

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., April 6.—It was a beautiful day for the betterment of the breed and the destruction of the bankroll here in Prince Georges County today. Army Day racing was conducted under Navy Day conditions for the benefit of some 6,000 turf fans and for the most part the tears of the favorite players were mixed with the downpour.

But despite the worst racing weather seen here since last Thanksgiving Day's freeze out, the sport was thrilling and a three-horse blanket finish marked the fourth event designated as the Mayor Howard W. Jackson purse but in reality another claiming affair.

Sure Miss, a daughter of Swift and Sure and well known on the smaller tracks before she became a much improved filly in Florida last winter, carried the colors of Mrs. M. Nelson Bond, of the Baltimore insurance family, to victory. She finished a head in advance of John E. Hughes' Topee with Romaunt, owned by Gustav Ring, of Washington, third. Sure Miss was one of several well played horses and produced a $9.50 mutuel for the faithful. She slopped over the 6-furlong course in 1:15, creditable time under the conditions.

The winner did not break on top but Jockey George Seabo soon had her out in front winging. She was given several stiff challenges by Romaunt but shook him off each time. In the stretch Sure Miss drew out to what looked like a safe lead. Nearing the wire, however, she tired suddenly and Topee and Romaunt came on with rushes but too late to stop her.

In the Dodge City purse in fifth position on the program, the A. C. C. Stable's Lady Roma defeated I. Bieber's Panorama just as she did the last time they met here. Franco Saxon was third in this test. The crowd went to Panorama in the betting due to the shift in riders that put Jockey Oros on the ancient mare. This helped the price of Lady Roma which paid $11.60.

Eddie Smith, Northeast Washington jockey, held Oddsbodkin, half of the Millsdale Stable entry, together long enough to win the first race. The gelded son of Pilate held a head margin over Baltee at the end of the four-furlong dash which drew seven juveniles. Din, running in the interests of Mrs. K. N. Gilpin, was third. With Baltee on the inside and Din on the outside, Oddsbodkin fought for the lead from the break. He took a short advantage in midstretch and then stuck by his guns long enough to stave off the repeated challenges of Baltee. Milltea, of the entry which paid $3.40, closed with a rush after being taken back directly after the start.

The second race brought memories of Charles Town and a $48.70 mutuel to those who backed the combination of Hiblaze and Jockey Lou Machado. Hiblaze, trained by C. M. Feltner, bounded to the front at the start of the six-furlong battle and stayed there to the end, holding a length and a quarter lead over Currants. The latter was a length in advance of the favored Early Times. Chief Cherokee, well played, appeared to be a sore horse on the way to the post and refused to get in action as the field left the gate.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIBLAZE, $48.70, $18.20, $10.30; CURRANTS, $12.80, $6.90; EARLY TIMES, $2.90.

HIBLAZE, first away, was hard ridden while challenged by CURRANTS and held on gamely under strong handling. CURRANTS forced the pace from the beginning and weakened slightly in closing test. EARLY TIMES worked way to contention, but hung in final stages. APPREHEND, within striking distance from start, moved up menacingly in midstretch, but faltered under pressure. CHIEF CHEROKEE appeared sore going to post and refused at break.

Daily Double, Oddsbodkin and Hiblaze, Paid $195.60.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates for all but He Goes. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:33½. Off 3:41. Winner, W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS FIX IT, $65.00, $17.30, $8.10; MASTER HOWARD, $3.90, $2.90; FINE TAG, $5.00.

MISS FIX IT, slow to begin, saved ground while improving position readily after a quarter and held on gamely under intermittent punishment in final stages. MASTER HOWARD raced REDFOOT and MOERALICE into defeat to get to front and fought it out willingly under punishment. FINE TAG slipped through on inside entering stretch and came with good energy in closing test. HE GOES, virtually left, circled field to reach contention and closed full of run.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURE MISS, $9.50, $4.70, $2.80; TOPEE, $5.20, $3.30; ROMAUNT, $3.10.

SURE MISS, hustled to front in opening 50 yards, shook off ROMAUNT to open good lead in midstretch, but had to be ridden out to stave off closing bid of TOPEE. The latter, off slowly, worked way to contention gradually and closed full of run, was under intermittent punishment and just missed. ROMAUNT forced early pace, dropped back and came with good energy under pressure in closing sixteenth. BLACKY BEE raced on inside from beginning and had speed in spots.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Dodge City. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:37½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY ROMA, $11.80, $4.50, $3.20; PANORAMA, $3.20, $2.30; FRANCO SAXON, $2.90.

LADY ROMA, steadied along closest to pace of FRANCO SAXON, took command approaching stretch when placed to drive and held away thereafter under strong handling. PANORAMA lacked early speed, came between horses to reach contention in early stretch, but was held safe in closing drive. FRANCO SAXON was sent to front under hustling tactics approaching backstretch and weakened gradually when caught. KNIGHT WARRIOR was hard ridden to keep up in opening half and tired.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:04½. Off 5:07½. Winner, D. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRANDON PRINCE, $6.30, $3.70, $2.50; LAUERMAN, $2.80, $4.20; REBEL YELL, $2.60.

BRANDON PRINCE, steadied along within striking distance of the leaders, came through on inside entering stretch and under good handling took command to just last under drive. LAUERMAN was rushed into lead at once, set good pace and continued gamely when displaced. REBEL YELL was closest to pace from start and weakened slightly in closing stages. DUEL went well for a half and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:36. Off 5:37. Winner, A. C. C. TURKISH BRAND, outrun for half, improved position with rush when put to drive and closed full of run to be up in conceding stride. FOREIGN LEGION, forward factor from beginning, took command in stretch under drive and weakened right at end. NANCY MAE went evenly, but could not threaten seriously. MON DOIT raced BROOKE HEROD into defeat to get to front and weakened thereafter.

Ciencia's Donkey Mascot Greets the Preakness Entry

Buddy Hirsch, her trainer, is taking things easy with Ciencia, shown bundled up after a run. A Preakness victory added to her Santa Anita triumph would make the filly the top-money winner among the 3-year-olds. The donkey slept in Ciencia's stable until recently

12 Additional Entries Made In Preakness

Nine Owners Promise To Pay $1,500 Each For Late Starters

By the Associated Press.

Bowie, Md., April 6.—Maryland Jockey Club officials announced today nine owners had promised to add 12 supplementary entries, at a fee of $1,500 each, to the list for the $50,000 added Preakness Stakes at Pimlico, May 13.

April 15 is the final declaration date for the 114 horses eligible for the Pimlico classic. Club officials expressed hope the fees for entries and starters would be sufficient to boost the gross value of the Preakness to $85,000.

Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan said William Ziegler, jr., planned to enter his speedy El Chico, Our Mat and Superficial.

Other 3-year-olds listed as possible supplementary entries were Greentree Stable's Day Off, Hugh H. Jackson's Aerial Toy, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Impound and Hysterical, King Ranch's Ciencia, Mrs. Bessie Franzheim's Xalapa Clown.

Foxbrough II Tops Epsom Favorites

London, April 6 (AP).—Foxbrough II, owned by William Woodward, New York banker, tonight was made the favorite for the Derby, which will be run at Epsom May 24.

In the first callover of odds on the classic, the son of Sir Gallahad III was quoted at 15 to 2. Foxbrough, a full brother of Gallant Fox, never raced in the United States.

The Earl of Rosebery's Blue Peter was second choice at 9 to 1, with Fox Cub, Casanota, Fairstone, Heliopolis and Rogerstone Castle bracketed at 100 to 8.

Churchill Downs Denies Lottery

Louisville, Ky., April 6 (AP).—Churchill Downs officials, in a statement today said they had no connection with any lottery based on the running of the Kentucky Derby.

Officials said they had been "swamped" with inquiries as to the authenticity of various sweepstakes and lotteries.

Willie Reddish Will Spar With DeChard Today

Colored Slugger, Matched With Howell, Starts Work Early

Willie Reddish, Philadelphia colored heavyweight, who will be on one end of the slugging Monday night in the Belleville Industrial School benefit at Turner's Arena, is expected to arrive in town today. He will pitch his training camp in the National Sporting Club and start off with a public workout this afternoon at 1:30 p. m.

Reddish's arrival today will give the 195-pound battler, once distinguished by the fact that Tony Galento is supposed to have run out on a bout with him, a one-day jump on his opponent, Jim Howell. The latter, former international amateur champ, will not come to town until tomorrow.

Outstanding of the heavies who will spar with Reddish this afternoon is Jimmy De Chard, Frankie Mann's youthful though promising Golden Gloves winner. Buddy Thomas, matched with Johnny Kaplovich, of Baltimore, for a four-rounder on the same program, and Battling Zuzu will also participate in the warmup.

Besides the headline scrap between the huskies, the four other supporting bouts between white fighters will be Frankie Wills, local fighter, against Johnny Foley, in one six-rounder; Jake Friedman, Baltimore heavy, against Jim Bowden, in another six, and Killer Marino against Nick Manfredo and Sid Silas against Johnny Buchanan, in a pair of fours.

No Competition Seen as Threat

Louisville, Ky., April 6 (AP).—Trainer Roy Waldron of the Milky Way Stable said today he considers No Competition the likeliest of the seven thoroughbreds Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, of Chicago, has nominated for the Kentucky Derby.

On the strength of his 2-year-old record No Competition appears the tops of the Milky Way eligibles, but his disappointing showing at Oaklawn had led many to believe Magic Keys, Giles County or On Location might be the stable's ace.

Waldron explained that the Bull Dog—Aloof colt, which is quoted at 30 to 1 in the winter books, did not favor the footing at the Arkansas track and can be counted on for improved effort at Churchill Downs.

Other Milky Way eligibles are Up The Creek, Sports Writer and Rule All.

Waldron said he would ship a division of Mrs. Mars' 37-horse stable to Keeneland Race Course, where several 2-year-olds have stake engagements. Waldron said after the meet at the Downs a unit would be sent to Detroit in charge of Fred Morris.

Newark Bears Being Picked As Repeaters

Neun Is Reluctant to Discuss Chances but 'Experts' See a Flag

By the Associated Press.

Sebring, Fla., April 6.—The two-time champion Newark Bears haven't been out of first place in the International League standings since about May 1, 1937, and there is no indication they will be evicted from that perch this season, in spite of a mediocre record in training camp clashes.

Manager Johnny Neun, starting his second term with the Yankees' farm club, is reluctant to discuss his team's chances but many shrewd baseball men envision another flag for the team which spread-eagled the field in 1937 by a record margin of 25½ games and then whipped all competition last year by 18 games. Rabbit Maranville, ex-Montreal pilot now at Albany, saw the Bears in action against the Yanks and predicted they would take this year's flag by 30 games.

It may be that the momentum of enthusiasm accumulated in the last two seasons has the boys climbing far out on the limb again, for there is cause for a bit of hesitancy when it is considered that an almost entirely new cast will represent Newark when the league campaign gets under way against Rochester, April 20.

There is only one hold-over in the infield, which sparkles with brilliant young talent. Mickey Witek, shortstop last year, is switching back to his normal position at second base. In addition to doing a better fielding job, Mickey predicts he'll hit at least 20 points above his 1938 average of .296.

Frank Baroni a 373 set, while team high totals went to Riggs' game of 897 and W. B. Hibbs' 1,660 set.

Mt. Rainier League

Walter Mutzbaugh cracked out a season's set record of 426 in the Mount Rainier League, including a 146 game, while Fitzgerald also had a 401 set. Whalen's Pit Bar B Q won two from M. P. M. Market, with a 626 game and 1,808 set.

American Legion

The leading Columbia and runner-up Bunker Hill teams each scored odd-game triumphs in the American Legion League at Lucky Strike, and had a respective game and set counts of 557 and 1,604, high for the night. Wright's 140 game and a 371 set for Carrayai led the individual scores.

Ladies Procurement

Virginia Wright accounted for game and set laurels in the Ladies Procurement League at Lucky Strike, with 117 and 299, while her Maulers team won three from Crazycats and jumped to third place. Jitterbugs had a 1,443 set and won two from Empires to tie for second.

National Capital

John Chaney's 372 set led Daily News to an odd game win over Benmacs in the National Capital League at Lucky Strike, while the winners had high-team game and set of 624—1,789. Dome Oil's league leaders dropped two to Washington Beef, with Lambert's 365 high.

Department Store

Ray Utterback rolled a 170 game for a season's record in the semi-final week's competition of the Department Store Bowling League at Recreation. Utterback's Woodward & Lothrop pinmen took first place over Kann's by a one-game margin by winning twice from the second-place team in a first-place battle. Tom Scrivener had 388 for the winners, while Irwin Simon's 373 led the losers.

Lansburgh's won two from Guy-Curran, with Mike Shugrue's 379 high, while Raleigh Haberdasher won twice from Hahn Shoes. Credit Bureau and Hecht's also scored odd-game triumphs.

Silver Spring Ladies

Alma Schulte joined the new season's record holders by posting a 369 set while bowling with the Shepherd Park Restaurant team in the Silver Spring Ladies League.

Americans Land 708-Pound Marlin

"Mike" Lerner, of the American Museum, Lerner expedition, and Capt. Bill Hatch, Miami, pictured with a 708-pound marlin caught off Mayers Island, New Zealand

Bill Ackerman

—On Fishing

The American Museum-Michael Lerner expedition to New Zealand seas to study the lives and migrations of big game fishes has been the source of very little news, even though it has taken some sizable fish. The occasional photo-postcard from Capt. Bill Hatch, Miami guide taken along to lead Mike and Helen Lerner on their fishing forays off Mayer's Island, are our sole means of knowing what they are doing.

ACKERMAN

To date—it takes a letter 30 days to reach this side of the world—they have caught several mako shark, four or five striped marlin, and a thresher shark. Mike has to his credit a 708-pound black marlin, taken in 28 minutes, while Mrs. Lerner was successful in catching a 297-pound black in 18 minutes.

Their return was looked for early in May, but the collection of material for the New Zealand exhibit which the Museum is planning has been a gigantic task, so it is hard to say just when they will get back.

Dr. Robert A. Nesbit, tagging expert of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, has just returned from New Jersey, where with Orton Dale and Ned Schaefer, of New York, and representatives of sporting associations of Jersey, he tagged 94 striped bass averaging 5 pounds in weight.

The experiment was conducted in the hope of obtaining definite information regarding the migratory habits of those stripers inhabiting New Jersey coastal waters in the winter months.

Although places suitable for netting operations are limited in the Mullica River, the fact that 32 of these bass were taken in one haul leads Mr. Nesbit to believe that a generous natural reproduction may be expected this year.

Any person taking one of these tagged stripers is asked to return the tag to the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, noting where and when the catch was made, and the weight and length of the fish when caught. There is a reward of $1 for each tag so returned.

The New Jersey Fish and Game Commission is making preparations to seine and strip striped bass in the Mullica River during the spawning period in May. A fish culturist will be on hand to collect and fertilize the spawn and hatchery, where it will be hatched in black bass ponds set aside for that purpose.

It is hoped that this experiment, if successful, will provide opportunity for scientific study of the striped bass with a view to supplementary stocking of Jersey's waters by artificial propagation.

It is generally recognized that only by further intensive scientransport it to the Hackettstown tific study of the habits of this species can intelligennt legislation be enacted to insure their maintenance in sufficient quantities and to determine the character and extent of protection necessary to achieve that end.

With the exception of Maryland, every State along the Atlantic Coast from North Carolina to Maine has passed some sort of legislation for the protection of striped bass, recognizing the fact if the species is to endure every fish must spawn at least once.

Maryland, beyond the most cursory and inadequate law extended to other food fish, has not sought to conserve or protect this grand sport fish that could, and will, in the other States protecting it, bring a return in dollars per pound instead of the few cents it is returning now as a commercial proposition in Maryland.

Nature has truly been beneficent to Maryland, otherwise this and many other marine species would have entirely disappeared from her waters.

of arms, a proceeding that we now deem most reprehensible when it happens in another country.

Understand, we are not bringing this up to start the War Between the States all over again. We just think that it is a reminder that as against our own history, we cannot throw many rocks at the methods of other nations in waging their war. An examination of the military records of the United States will fail to disclose that our American soldiery has ever waged war with any distinctive delicacy or tact or with any other purpose than to win.

The book we have been reading is a pale, thin little volume entitled "The Campaigns of the Confederate Army." It was written nearly 40 years ago by Augustus Longstreet Hull, then secretary of the University of Georgia, and the paragraphs with which we openly refer to Sherman's occupation of Atlanta.

General Sherman is the chap who said, in essence, "War is hell." He certainly made it so in Atlanta. After he ordered the people out, he burned the city, and then on November 15, 1864, with 60,000 men in light marching order he began the march to the sea which the North commemorated in that still tactless paen, "Marching Through Georgia."

Pillage and Plunder

The North thought that march was a pretty swell stunt, but our author, Mr. Hull, who was perhaps related to the Confederate General Longstreet, wrote:

"It was a career of pillage and plunder; the unopposed advance of an army of veterans equal in numbers to the entire Confederate forces then in the field, met only by defiant women, frightened children and submissive slaves; an army perfectly equipped for war, sustaining itself on the captures of a section well stored with a crop just harvested."

Gen. Robert E. Lee, mightiest of the military leaders of the South, did not think much of Sherman's march as a military exploit, according to our Mr. Hull, who said Lee remarked of it: "There was nothing to oppose him, (Sherman) and the only military problem to be solved was whether his army could live on the country by taking all the people had."

Mr. Hull admitted that no just complaint could be made for Sherman's seizure of food for the men and horses as they passed through enemy country, but said "for open violence, robbery and murder, that raid has no equal in modern warfare. Homes were entered and looted, the privacy of bedrooms forced, pictures and furniture wantonly destroyed, carpets ripped up and old men were hung until they should tell the hiding place of their money."

There is more of this, but we think we will desist before we get the Georgia Rifles steamed up to marching on Indianapolis.

try to do, see how far you can hit it?"

He kept on asking questions about golf, until finally I think he became a little bored in addition to being completely confused.

"Well, anyway," he concluded, moving toward the door. "They wanted me to tell you about this Guldahl Round Robert and since I done that I guess that's all."

"Hey, wait a minute. You didn't tell me anything about it," I reminded him. It seems to me I've been telling you."

"Yeah, I guess that's right at that." Chick grinned. "What I wanted to tell you was that they're goin' to play this Round Robert at —let's see, now. What's the name of that place?—Oh, yeah, Fresh Meadow. That's out on Long Island, isn't it? And there was something else—Oh, yeah, it's goin' to be played the first four days in June. I don't know why they wanted me to tell you about it."

StandardsRiflemen Split Even in Shoot

Bureau of Standards rifle team No. 1 was defeated, 1193-1101, in a three-position match last night at the N. R. A. range by Experimental Team. No. 2 team of the Bureau, however, turned in a close 1171-1162 victory over Internal Revenue. Atlee, of the No. 2 squad, was high for the night with a 264 total in the three positions.

Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

NEPTUNE PREVIEW: On Monday the general public, meaning you and you, are invited to drop in the new Neptune Room, in the Earle Theater Building, between noon and 5 p. m. and look over this gorgeous new spot. This is purely in the nature of a preview and advance welcome, since service will not be under way. But it will give you an opportunity to view the fantastic undersea murals and marine lighting, the "aquarium bar," that give the Neptune Room such a novel beauty.

Next day, Tuesday, April 11, you can come in and say, "Hello, Father Neptune!" in earnest. Music, entertainment and service will be in full swing from noon until midnight, or later.

What pretty society girl is working strictly incognito at one of the town's most popular night spots? And for a good reason. Later, she may blossom out as a society warbler at a swank Philadelphia club.

STRAIGHT FROM MIAMI to Pall Mall are coming Enters and Borgia, dancers noted for their witty caricaturing of modern dances. Their Pall Mall engagement begins next Monday. All during the last winter and early spring they have been at the Dempsey-Vanderbilt in Miami, quite an achievement. Also they've received high praise from those toughest of critics, the professional news organs—Variety, Billboard and the New York Telegraph.

Robert Montgomery of the movies and Maestro Pete Macias of the Lounge Riviera compared their union cards the other evening, decided they were "union brothers," though Robert is a member of the Screen Guild and Pete of the Musicians Union—then settled down to a lengthy gabfest about labor. Montgomery came to the Riviera with a party including Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Jeffries, Mrs. Childress Tompkins and Lieut. Richard Hunt.

MASCULINE, FEMININE, NEUTER: That's the classification of the prizes Paul Kain is going to award at his new Wednesday evening "song title guessing contests." (Yes, I heard you the first time. Please go and take a jump up in the air.) Anyway, the best guessing lad will win a fine cigarette case or something equally valuable, the ditto lass will receive some smart accessory, and the third best guesser (man or girl) wins a bottle of fine wine or liquor.

Warning to lasses: That late afternoon ray of sunlight that streams through the Anchor Room door is worse than an X-ray. Just notice that Hostess Frances Chapman and the white clad Anchorettes are so careful to dodge it.

FRESH TALENT: Two bright lads from Atlantic City have just started to hold forth in the Uptown cocktail lounge. They're Singer Buddy Parsons and Parodist-pianist Arthur Howe. Both are new to Washington, have played steadily at Atlantic City for the last four seasons. Folks who've just visited Uptown tell us never to miss Arthur's slightly offside "Zoo Song."

The ball season has opened early in the Shoreham Blue Room. Any guest who so wishes can play ball with Serge Flash, of the floor show. Serge takes the handicap by catching tossed rubber balls on a small stick he holds between his teeth.

PIRATES' DEN PICTURE: That impromptu "Buccaneers' Ball" when ten girls from Texas State University came in with one man, but found plenty of pirate dancing partners . . . That magnetic black-eyed wench, "Hell-cat Pat," dancing daintily amid crossed cutlasses . . . Mrs. Evalyn McLean wearing that lump of fateful azure fire, the Hope Diamond — and accompanied by Daughter Evalyn McLean and John Galliher . . . "Pickle Puss" growling because he got a cold while looking at the cherry blossoms . . . "Port Watch Patsy" showing us around Don Dickerman's completely fascinating "Pirate Museum." Did you know that the old-time blunderbusses were the ancestors of the modern sawed-off shot guns?

"Bedtime Snacks" are the new specialty at Hi Hat. They include a variety of tasty hot dishes and appetizing sandwiches—just what you want for a light and late supper. The "Bedtime Snack" idea is the offspring of Manager Oscar's fertile brain.

LOTUS' ALLIS-DANCERS: Nothing less than a "Parisian Can-Can" will be offered by Lotus Frances Allis Dancers next week. They'll also do a superheated swing number in top hats (well, that's all we know about the costumes) and a combo-ballet-modern dance. Janet Gilbert will presetn some fancy high kicking.

Luba Malina, Continental singing star, who will appear at the Troika, beginning tomorrow evening

A recent honored visitor in the Rainbow Room was Mrs. Julius Manger, owner of the Manger chain of hotels. She came in especially to hear Milton Davis do his fancy tricks on the novachord.

TOP TRICKS IN FOOD. Fried Wun Tun with sour sacuse as concocted by the Bamboo Gardens' gifted chef. No, you don't get quite Wun Tun of it.

That combination of spring chicken and Virginia ham that Hour Glass' Chef Lube puts together in perfect harmony.

Lobster Newburg as Hall's (near the water-front) chef makes it according to the same recipe used in the days of Lillian Russell (and enjoyed by her, according to tradition).

Impresario Maurice Kafka tells us that the new and tricky tune, "That Sly Old Gentleman From Featherbed Lane," is a prime favorite in the Mayflower Lounge.

PICTURES IN CAPRICE: Bruce Cabot, of the cinemas (who certainly is getting around this town) . . . Lawrence Murphy, temperamental scion of the famed "five and ten" Murphy . . . Piquant Jane Davis, daughter of Senator Jim Davis, of Pennsylvania, dancing with Britten Young.

Boy Hurt by Auto, 2 Drivers Held

Eight-year-old Kenneth Lawson, 3302 M street northwest, regained consciousness at Georgetown Hospital late yesterday, 18 hours after being struck by one of two automobiles while playing in front of his home, Thursday night.

LAWSON

His condition was described as critical and doctors said he suffered a fractured skull, severe internal injuries and shock.

Drivers of the two automobiles, one of which ran down the boy, were arraigned in Police Court and both pleaded not guilty and demanded jury trials.

Kemper C. Rector, 45, of Arlington, Va., was charged with driving while intoxicated, and Floyd Lawrence, colored, 22, of McLean, Va., was accused of reckless driving. Rector was released under $500 bail and the colored man was required to post $300 bail.

Assistant Corporation Counsel J. Francis Reilly, who filed the papers against the men, explained to Judge Casey that "there was grave doubt which of the drivers struck the child."

Police said that eight persons witnessed the accident and that they were evenly divided in their opinions over which automobile struck the child.

William A. Lynn, 54, of 620 Independence avenue southwest, received a fractured leg and concussion of the brain when he was struck down last night at Seventh street and Constitution avenue northwest. Police said the automobile was operated by James H. Steffe, 51, of Baltimore.

Bandit Uses Note In Store Robbery

Albert Lawrence, proprietor of a liquor store at 2005 M street northwest, who has ben held up three times in the last three years, knew what to do last night when a neatly dressed young man handed him a note. The note said, "Hand over your money or I'll shoot," and Lawrence, seeing the man apparently held a gun in his pocket, handed over $10. The thief fled toward New Hampshire avenue and entered a taxicab.

Shortly before, a man answering the same description robbed Ann Murphy, manager of a High's ice cream store at 2930 Fourteenth street northwest, of $7.

Loan Groups Pay Dividends To U. S., HOLC

Payments in Last Half of 1938 Totaled $4,574,007

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Federal investments in insured savings and loan associations are steadily paying earnings to the United States, Federal Home Loan Bank Board officials announce. For the last half of 1938, the United States Treasury and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation received a total of $4,574,007 in dividends on their investments in 1,370 associations, when thrift institutions over the country needed more funds to supply the demand for sound loans in their communities.

For the six months insured savings and loan institutions, both State and Federal chartered, are estimated to have paid more than $24,000,000 to their private investors, making a total half-year dividend of nearly $29,000,000, after providing for reserves.

Dividends paid to investors by Federal savings and loan associations since their authorization by Congress in 1934 have passed the $95,000,000 mark, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports, in part. Of this amount $73,000,000 represents earnings on the savings of individual investors, and corporate and trust accounts in these institutions; $15,934,232 went to HOLC, and $6,440,907 to the United States Treasury.

Trade Executives to Meet

Six local men have places on the program of the spring meeting of the American Trade Association Executives scheduled for May 1 and 2, at the Mayflower Hotel. They are: A. M. Ferry, secretary of the Wire Cloth Manufacturers Association; Bond Geddes, vice president of the Radio Manufacturers Association; John B. Gordon, secretary of the Bureau of Raw Materials for American Vegetable Oils and Fats Industries, serving on the program committee, and Emmet Dougherty, public relations director of the Millers' National Federation, on the publicity committee. Presiding officers of sessions are V. P. Ahearn, executive secretary of the National Sand and Gravel Association, and Harold R. Young, Washington secretary of National Retail Dry Goods Association.

"The Relation of Government and Private Statistics" will be the subject which Dr. Stuart A. Rice, chairman of the central statistical board, will explain, at the conference. Other program subjects include a luncheon talk by Ray Tucker, Washington columnist for the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, and reports by Herman Fakler, of Washington, vice president of the Millers' National Federation, and president of the American Trade Association Executives, and Roscoe C. Edlund, of New York, manager, Association of American Soap and Glycerine Producers, on cooperation of the American Trade Association Executives with the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Industrial Council respectively.

Sharing interest with these program topics will be the presence of Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins who as chairman of the association's committee of award, will present to the winning trade association the bronze medallion bestowed each year in recognition of meritorious services.

Entries for the association's annual prize have closed and the jury of award is now determining which trade group is entitled to special recognition for accomplishing the greatest achievements during the year. The award has been a much coveted prize since 1929 when it was founded by Margaret Hayden Rorke, of New York, managing director of the Textile Color Card Association of the United States, who long has been one of the leading national figures in the trade association field. It is a bronze medallion designed by a noted artist and becomes the property of the association to which it is awarded. In addition to the main award, honorable mention certificates will be presented to associations which have performed outstanding services during the year.

Associated with Secretary Hopkins on the jury of award are Neil Carothers, dean of the College of Business Administration, Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pa.; Virgil Jordan, president, National Industrial Conference Board, Inc., New York, N. Y.; Charles F. Hughes, business news editor, New York Times, New York, N. Y.; Donald M. Nelson, vice president, Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Previous awards have been won by these trade groups: 1929, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce; 1930, National Association of Dyers and Cleaners; 1931, American Paint and Varnish Manufacturers Association, Inc.; 1932, Cotton-Textile Institute, Inc.; 1936, National Machine Tool Builders Association; 1937, National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

Brokers' Loans Drop $32,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $579,000,000. The week ended Wednesday, and the total represented a decrease of $32,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $503,000,000.

Lehman Corp. Net Assets Equal to $29.73 a Share

New York, April 6 (AP).—Lehman Corporation, investment company, today reported net assets totaled $61,883,587 on March 31, equal to $29.73 a common share, contrasted with $70,713,296 or $33.97 a share December 31 last.

During the initial 1939 quarter, the report disclosed, the company completely eliminated holdings of a number of companies as follows: Kennecott Copper, Anaconda Copper, American Smelting & Refining, F. W. Woolworth, New York Central Railroad, Phillips Petroleum, American Tobacco "B," Liggett & Myers "B," and American Steel Foundries.

General Motors holdings were reduced to 20,000 shares from 35,000. Other reductions included U. S. Rubber to 9,000 shares, American Radiator to 17,600, Otis Elevator to 5,000, Owens-Illinois Glass to 9,000, General Electric to 25,000, Westinghouse Electric to 10,300 and North American Co. to 26,400 from 31,000.

New items added to the common stock portfolio included 1,300 shares of American Telephone & Telegraph, 1,100 Chrysler Corporation, 4,900 Firestone Tire & Rubber and 2,200 Armstrong Cork. Holdings of Pennsylvania Railroad were increased to 20,000 shares from 13,000.

Germany Fails to Solve Problem of Raw Materials

New York, April 6.—Germany's annexation of nearly all Czecho-Slovakia and her recent economic accord with Rumania will fall far short of supplying her with the basic industrial raw materials she needs, according to a study of German and central European resources made by the economic research division of the conference board.

Czecho-Slovakia's resources too closely parallel those of Germany to be of much help in achieving the Reich's Four-Year Plan for economic self-sufficiency. Small surpluses of wool and timber are produced above local needs, and there will probably be a slight reduction in Germany's imports of these commodities. As to minerals, Czecho-Slovakia was, like Germany, an importer of petroleum, iron ore, manganese, copper, sulphur, nickel, aluminum and chrome ores, and various rare but essential ores and metals. Antimony is the only mineral that the former republic can supply to Germany in an appreciable amount, and only about 20 per cent of German's requirement can be met.

The study indicates that Rumania's contributions to Germany's raw material needs, as the result of the recent commercial treaty, will be much greater than those of Czecho-Slovakia. The Reich's desperate requirement of petroleum should soon be satisfied under the arrangements made at Bucharest, because the Rumanian oilfields have been producing more than 60,000,000 barrels a year, or about thirteen times the amount Germany has been forced to import. Rumania can also supply Germany's deficiencies of wheat and feed grains.

Wheat Prices Advance With Trade Buying

European Events And Holiday Lead To Purchases

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 6.—Wheat purchasing by traders who were unwilling to risk the chance of a more serious turn of events in Europe over the Good Friday holiday helped to lift prices fractionally in moderate active trading today.

Orders to cover previous short sales were mixed with buying to lift hedges on wheat sold to mills and exporters or in connection with flour business. Some dealers purchased may contracts in view of good premiums being paid for cash wheat. Shippers sold 106,000 bushels, mostly to mills, indicating a fairly good demand for cash grain.

Other grains followed the action of wheat, corn closing ⅛-⅜ higher, May 47¼-47⅜, July 48⅜; oats unchanged to ¼ higher; rye unchanged to ¼ higher; lard unchanged to 5 higher.

L. & N. Reports Lower Net Income

Louisville, Ky., April 6 (AP).—President James B. Hill reported today the Louisville & Nashville Railroad's 1938 net income after charges was $4,394,331 under that of 1937. Hill, in his annual report to stockholders, said the net income for the road in 1938 was $12,500,358, compared with $16,772,777 in 1937. The net income after deduction of interest on funded debt and other charges in 1938 was $2,706,015, compared with $7,100,346 in 1937.

The report revealed a total railway operating revenue decrease of $10,800,433 in 1938 or a 12 per cent reduction compared with 1937. Freight revenues were off $9,258,267 or 12 per cent, and passenger revenues off $1,009,509, or 14 per cent.

Ingersoll Rand Co.

New York, April 6 (AP).—Ingersoll Rand Co. today reported net income for 1938 of $5,219,188, equal after preferred dividends to $5.20 a share on common stock, compared with $9,726,411, or $9.83 a common share, in 1937.

Fairchild Aviation Corp.

New York, April 6 (AP).—Fairchild Aviation Corporation reported a net income for 1938 of $322,473, equal to 95 cents a share on capital stock, compared with $139,675, or 41 cents a capital share, in 1937.

Pathe Film Corp.

New York, April 6.—Pathe Film Corporation and subsidiaries today reported net profit for 1938 of $77,158, including $245,000 dividends received from du Pont Film Mfg. Corporation, equal after preferred dividends to 4 cents a share on common stock. This compared with 1937 net profit of $466,918, including $472,500 du Pont dividends, equal to 70 cents a common share.

Italian Warships Off Albania Coast Revives War Fears and Stocks Drop Rail and Treasury Issues Fall

New York, April 6.—The naval display by Italy off the Albanian coast brought a return of war fears to the financial district today, carrying prices off 1 to more than 4 points and sending the composite average of the market to another new low for the year, and below the so-called Munich low of last September by 0.42 point.

The continued down trend in domestic business is as important a factor in shaping prices as is the fear of war, but the latter received more attention today because of the new move by the Italian government.

At the close the above composite average had lost 1.44 points, and at no time during the day was there a rally worthy of the name. It reached its lowest figure since June 23, 1938. Losses were 1 to 2 points on the leaders at the opening, there was a second wave of heavy selling before noon and then some more easing during the afternoon, the close being near the worst of the session. Of the 887 individual issues dealt in, only 58 carried plus signs at the close. New lows for the year were made by 310 stocks. The average of rail stocks only is still slightly above the Munich low. The day's volume was 1,313,290 shares.

Oils Least Affected

The bets performance of any group of stocks today, or rather the least worst performance, was that of the oils. The statistical position of this industry has shown improvement, with the refiners holding down production and stocks of gasoline showing a small decrease. The level of refinery stocks is below a year ago, while motor-car registration is well above a year ago. The price level, however, is unsatisfactory.

The average price of oil securities, in the table compilation, is about 1.30 points above this time a year ago. With the exception of rails and equipments, the other groups run from 6 to 13 points above their 1938 comparisons.

Values Sink Quickly

The action of the market during the last two weeks, particularly the last few days, has demonstrated again the often repeated observation that values sink faster than they rise. No one is ever forced to buy stocks unless he is a short trader, and the number of such traders is small compared with the number that hold securities. But frequently there is a large proportion of those who hold stocks on margin that must liquidate in a hurry and such selling accelerates the decline.

Restricted Accounts

The practice of placing accounts in a restricted classification, in which they cannot increase their debit balance but are not forced to liquidate immediately, has helped offset forced liquidation but, of course, such accounts are frozen and cannot be used to buy securities.

Moreover, the owner of a restricted account wants to get it unfrozen as soon as possible and is bound to join the sellers before he does the buyers. The latest report on restricted accounts indicates that as of March 20 nearly 15 per cent of the margin accounts were in this classification, and the market is considerably lower now than on March 20.

Wheat averaged slightly higher. The market for this important munition of war has given no indications recently that traders are expecting a major conflict abroad. The close today was unchanged to ⅜ cent a bushel higher. Cotton eased 2 to 6 points.

Bond Trading Recedes

Listed bonds receded sharply today, and many issues moved into the lowest ground of the current year. United States Treasury securities dipped slightly on the spreading fear of a European war and its complications. Speculative rail bonds were hard hit in a selling wave that drove levels 2 to 5 points lower.

The foreign section remained weak, but there was no tendency to press bonds on the thin market to an undue extent. Trading totaled only $7,280,000, indicating that lack of buyer interest had much to do with the extent of the drop.

Treasury Issues Fall

Long term United States Treasury bonds fell 1-32 to 14-32 point in the ragged market, with official dealings modest and counter trading also on a relatively small scale. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were dull and lower. Telephone debentures remained at their highs, but best grade power and light, railroad and utility obligations tended to ease by small fractions.

Rail Bonds Decline

Medium-priced rail liens fell drastically, as buyers were reluctant. Bonds pressed for sale occasioned large declines, and scores of lows for the year were registered. New York Central and Southern Pacific issues were prominent on the downside, and other bonds of like ratings were similarly weak. Borderline and default rails dropped, and the downward drift also affected local tractions, communications bonds and other special groups.

In the foreign dollar section the gloom that surrounds the European scene was reflected in sharp declines of German, Italian, Scandinavian and other bonds. The selling was obviously based on the war crisis and the status of debt service had little bearing on the situation. Australian and Canadian bonds fell with the rest. Japanese obligations also lost ground. Latin-American default issues showed small declines.

Time Business Index Declines for Week

New York, April 6 (AP).—The index of business conditions compiled by Time magazine declined last week to 94.8 from 95.6 the preceding week.

The drop of .8 of a point reflected the continued inflow of gold which adversely affected the "monetary inflation" component of the index. Spending held up in financial centers but declined slightly in trade centers contributing to the downward tendency. The index, however, remained substantially above this year's low of 93.0 and the comparable week last year when it stood at 89.5.

Bank Clearings Fall 2 Per Cent Under 1938

But Total of 22 Cities Climbs Above Previous Week

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 6.—Bank clearings rose quite sharply over the total for the preceding week, but the volume failed to equal that of the corresponding 1938 period for the first time this year. This was due to a decline in New York clearings, as the aggregate for outside cities continued to show a gain over last year for the seventh consecutive week.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities for the week ended April 5, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $5,511,244,000, a loss of 2 per cent from the $5,622,128,000 recorded for the like week a year ago.

Clearings of the latest period were $613,326,000 greater than those for the previous week. Between the two similar weeks of 1938 the increase amounted to $1,116,461,000.

New York transactions totaled $3,503,412,000, against $3,683,924,000 a year ago, giving a decrease of 4.9 per cent. Turnover for outside cities, however, aggregated $2,007,832,000, an increase of 3.6 per cent, compared with the $1,938,204,000 last year.

Bank clearings at leading cities, together with percentage charges from a year ago, follow:

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $27,272,796.87 for the week ended Wednesday, which compares with $26,690,451.79 for the corresponding period a year ago, an increase of $582,345.08. Compared with a total of $19,772,515.62 for the previous week clearings increased 7.24 per cent.

Cotton Futures Drop 2 to 6 Points

New York, April 6 (AP).—Cotton futures—balked by Washington legislative hurdles still to be jumped—chalked up net losses of 2 to 6 points today in a one way market.

Fairly heavy liquidation of Bombay straddle accounts again proved to be the chief bearish factor. Also depressed by general selling through commission houses and professional pressure, prices showed little recuperative powers.

Shortly before the opening rumors that the export subsidy plan might be revived circulated about the ring, and this was an additional factor in unsettling the market, brokers said.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil moved in the face of declines in most other commodities to close 6 to 8 points net higher today. Support came through trade and Southern interests, which erased small early dips.

Sales totaled 123 lots; May, 6.57; July, 6.73; September, 6.73; October, 6.86.

Crude oil continued quiet with buyers in the market at 5⅝ cents in the Southeast and Valley, and 5½ to 5¼ cents in Texas.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

J. Littleman had not been concentrating on the cards as he should have been and as a consequence he was down several thousand points. He was usually a good player, a winning player, but today he had been consumed with thoughts about losing an important sale, and it was only through habit that his feet had carried him into the bridge club.

He had been standing on the street corner just after P. W. had told him bluntly that he was giving his order to another concern. "It's not your fault," P. W. had said, "and if you go to work for another company I'll continue to buy from you, but I won't be stuck more than once by the same people."

"I've lost the P. W. account. I've lost the P. W. account," sing-songed in his brain, as his hand unconsciously felt the few bills in his pocket and his feet led him toward the bridge club.

J. Littleman looked at the score-sheet. Down 33 points. "Nothing goes bad but that it does not get worse." He looked at his cards. They were those of the South hand shown in today's box.

Soon he found himself at a small slam contract in spades, and West had made the "killing" opening of the king of clubs. "Any other lead but that," thought J. Littleman, "and the slam would have been easy."

"There is no use trying to set up the hearts now, for one adversary must have three spades, and there is no entry to the dummy after the trumps are drawn.

"I've lost the P. W. account. I've lost 33 points already. I've lost my wife's respect, and I'm going to lose this hand. What's the use? I might as well give up and concede down one." J. Littleman was just about ready to show his hand when an inspiration gave him hope.

"I don't have to work about establishing the heart suit. With a little luck, I can cross-ruff the cards for 12 tricks," he said to himself as the new possibility changed the appearance of the hand.

J. Littleman won with the ace of clubs and led another club, trumping in his hand. He cashed the king of hearts, played a heart to the ace and ruffed a heart with a small trump. West chose to discard a diamond instead of overruffing. If he overtrumps, all declarer has to do is to pull the remaining spades with the ace, king, and the hearts in dummy are good.

Then Littleman led the ace and a low diamond, ruffing with North's king of spades and trumping a club on the way back and another diamond with North's spade ace. A club was trumped on the return, and Littleman claimed the queen and jack of spades, giving the opponents the last trick.

Littleman experienced a warm glow as the successful small slam was added to the game score and the total amount, less the opponents' paltry points, was entered in the book, cutting down his losses considerably. He smiled with pleasure as his partner congratulated him on his excellent play.

"By jingo," he thought, "if P. W. hasn't signed that contract yet I may be able to think of a plan to keep him on our books. There is more than one way to play a bridge hand, and there is more than one way to make a sale."

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

THE Civil Service Commission has made public the results of a survey on Government salaries, as taken by the sampling method, and says the average salary in the Federal service is $1,871. The average in Washington was given as $2,066, and that in the field, $1,838.

The president of the American Federation of Government Employes, Col. Charles I. Stengle, comments on these findings as follows:

"Doubtless these are mathematically correct as arithmetical averages, but they give, I believe, an entirely erroneous impression of conditions in the Government service. Two points I wish especially to emphasize: First, that because of the large number of high-salaried officials in Washington, the average as given by the commission is misleading; and, second, that the relatively large number of postal service salaries of $2,000 or better in the field service means that nonpostal field salaries must average considerably under the $1,838 figure given.

"The commission makes the situation somewhat clearer when it points out that more than half the Federal employes in the District of Columbia receive between $1,000 and $1,800, and that three-fourths of the employes covered by the survey get less than $2,200.

"The Commission's tables show that 36,710 employes in the District get less than $1,500 a year, and 61,522 less than $1,800. Of 112,500 employes in the District, 74,693 got less, and fewer than 38,000 got more than $2,000, which is the group figure closest to the average given by the commission, namely $2,066.

"The commission also pointed out that the largest salary group is between $2,000 and $2,199, in which are included a large number of postal employes and some Customs and Immigration groups. Just as the high salaries in Washington among top officials weight the arithmetical average so that it tends to mislead, the large number of postal and other salaries in the $2,000 to $2,199 bracket brings up the arithmetical average for the field. It would doubtless be a considerably lower figure than $1,838, possibly $100 or more lower, if we had the field service average eliminating the postal service employes, and the other groups whose pay is fixed by law at or above the $2,000 figure."

NINE employes, one with more than 48 years service, were retired recently from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. They are: Charles W. Good, chief distributor of stock, 45 years' service; Mary A. Boucher, perforating machine operator, 36 years'; Jennie L. Price, examiner, 21 years'; John H. Jacobs, plate printer, 42 years'; Charles H. Godfrey, jr., plate printer, 37 years'; Emil A. Kreutzer, plate printer, 36 years'; Donald J. MacDonald, distributor, 21 years'; Mrs. Nellie G. Smith, examiner, 26 years', and Mrs. Margaret G. Donnelly, cost clerk, 48 years' service.

TH7 Agricultural Department Riding Club has elected Hilda Nelson (SCS) as president; Laura Dowers (BAI), secretary, and Mary Bonn (BAE), treasurer. Those wishing to join the club may communicate with Miss Bonn, room 3509 South Agricultural Building. The club also wants suggestions concerning activities—and new members . . . The District Department, A. F. G. E., holds its first April meeting on Friday evening, April 14, in the Hamilton Hotel. During sessions of Congress, the Department meets on the second and fourth Fridays of each month . . . ARA hikers will visit White Oak Canyon Sunday, April 16. They will meet at the south side of the Treasury Building at 8:30 a. m. Registration for cars and passengers may be sent to Miss Burnie Benson, room 4403 Agriculture Building. They plan to go in swimming on the trip . . . The Agriculture Women's Tennis League will hold its first meeting and election of officers Friday, April 14, at 4:45 p. m. in room 4649 South Building. Members who played last year are especially requested to attend. Plans for this year's activities will be discussed and applications for membership into the various teams will be considered.

Bob Burns Says—

I guess some people are born to one thing and others to another. It's just what you get accustomed to I guess. This was brought home to me not long ago when I took a trip back home. We stopped at one of them paradises for city hunters and a bunch of them fellas got off the train, they were sure dressed to kill. They wore the latest modern hunting clothes, they carried all kinds of decoys and pearl-handled knives and the very latest kind of guns.

Well, I got to thinkin' about my Cousin Bead-Eye. There's a boy who use'ta go huntin' and he'd come home every night with the limit. And all he ever used was rocks. So I says to myself if he can do all that with just rocks what a sensation he'd be if he had one of them new guns. So at the next stop I got off and I bought him the best up-to-date rifle that money could buy.

When I got home I gave it to him. Well, he was so excited he wanted to start out huntin' right away. So we started out. We hadn't gone through the woods 50 feet 'til he spied a squirrel 'way up in the top fork of a tree. He brought his rifle to his shoulder and I waited for the report, but nothin' happened. Finally, he threw the rifle to the ground and he says, "Doggonit, Robin, that squirrel's a beauty. I got to get him—give me a rock."

A Blunder Into Trouble

Watch well your step, for trouble lies
In wait to take by surprise.
—Peter Rabbit.

One of Peter's small sons, a very small son, the Little Wanderer, was out on the Green Meadows all alone and not knowing where he was or with the least idea of where he was going. He had left home to see the Great World and find a place in it for himself. He was on his own, independent, free, and not much more than a baby. How could such a helpless litle chap escape the dangers of which there always are so many for a Rabbit? It didn't seem possible that he could. Yet his father had gone out into the Great World just as young and as seemingly helpless. So had his mother. And, of course, both had survived.

Trouble sometimes really does come to one but more often than not it lies in wait and the careless walk into it. This is one of the things that most people have to find out for themselves. The careless, the heedless and the headstrong simply won't believe that trouble lies in wait for them until they blunder into it. The Little Wanderer was to find this out.

Just like his father, Peter Rabbit, and his mother, Mrs. Peter, he had a wabbly little nose. He was prone to follow that wabbly little nose without regard for where it might be leading him. Perhaps you have been told when searching for something to "follow your nose." The Little Wanderer never had to be told that. He found it the most natural thing in the world to do and he did it.

His father being full of curiosity the little Rabbit was full of curiosity. He had even more than Peter, if that were possible. You see everything was new to him and so he was curious about everything and there was no one to tell him about things. He had to find out about them for himself. So he made pleasant discoveries and he made some that were not so pleasant.

He sat chewing a leaf of clover and trying to decide which way to turn next when a whir and a buzz and a hum, all sort of mixed, and right close to one ear startled him a wee bit. Then he saw the maker of all that noise. As compared with anybody who could fly whom he had so far seen, she was very small, though as compared to other members of the family to which she belonged she was very big. She wore shining black with bright yellow trimmings and she seemed to be full of business to judge by the way she fussed about in the grass, now here and now there. It was Queen Bumblebee.

Right away the Little Wanderer was curious. He wanted to know who she was, where she was going, what she was doing. So he followed. She buzzed here and hummed there and finally disappeared in the grass. Yes, sir, Queen Bumblebee went down in the grass and right out of sight. The small Rabbit waited for her to reappear. When she failed to do this he went a little nearer to the place where he had last seen her. Then he began to poke his wabbly little nose here and there and finally he found a small hole in the ground.

At first he thought nothing of this and continued to look around in the grass. Presently he came back to that little hole and suddenly he realized that something was going on in there. He wondered what it could be. He could see nothing in that hole, for it was dark in there. He grew impatient and his impatience caused him to thump on the ground as you might stamp a foot because of impatience. He didn't thump a second time. Out came Queen Bumblebee, and although he knew nothing whatever about her he knew by the sound of her humming and by the manner in which she headed straight for him that he had no business there; that he had blundered into trouble and the best thing for him was to go somewhere else and do it quickly. He did.

Adm. Friedell To Command Submarines

Admiral Marquart Will Succeed Him As Minecraft Chief

Rear Adm. Wilhelm L. Friedell, commander of minecraft battle force, was named commander of the submarine force, succeeding Rear Adm. Charles S. Freeman, who will take command of the naval activities in the Panama Canal Zone.

Rear Adm. Edward J. Marquart, now on duty with the Naval Examining Board here, will relieve Admiral Friedell as commander of minecraft.

The present Commandant of the Balboa Naval Station and 16th Naval District, Rear Adm. Walter N. Vernou will take command of Battleship Division 2 of the Fleet. Rear Adm. Adolphus E. Watson now heading division 2, will be assigned later to duty ashore.

New Attache to Tokyo

At the same time, the Navy announced that the aide to Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander in chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, Lieut. Comdr. Henri H. Smith-Hutton, has been assigned as naval attache to Japan. He will relieve Capt. Harold M Bemis, who returns to the United States to command the battleship California.

Commander Smith-Hutton has served three years as a Japanese language student, a like period as assistant naval attache at Tokyo and prior tour with the Asiatic fleet. Ordinarily, naval officials said, the Japanese post goes to officers ranking much higher.

Selection of the staff of the new No. 2 of the United States Fleet, Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, has been completed, the department revealed. Capt. Sherwoode A. Taffinder, director of ships' movements division here, will be chief of staff to Admiral Richardson when he becomes battle force commander in June.

Other members of the staff will be: Operations, Capt. Bernhard H. Bieri; aviation, Commander Osborne B. Hardison; gunnery, Commander Ernest E. Herrman; flag secretary, Commander George C. Dyer, now on duty here; assistant operations officer, Lieut. Comdr. M. M. Dupre; communications, Lieut. Comdr. M. E. Curtz; aerologist, Lieut. Comdr. Thomas J. Raftery; radio, Lieut. D. T. Ferrier; surgeon, Kent C. Melborn; contractor; Sidney E. Dudley, marine officer, Lieut. Col. Leroy P. Hunt.

2 Justices, Host Of Senators, Others Dined by Neely

Two Supreme Court justices, a host of Senators and other Federal officials yesterday were luncheon guests of Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia.

Justices Frankfurter and Black were present, along with RFC Chairman Jones, Stewart McDonald, FHA administrator; Matthew McGuire, Department of Justice; Commissioner Smith and Secretary McCullough, of the Coal Commission; Marshall Davis, comptroller's office; Former Senator Hawes, of Missouri; Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate; Harry Newman, magazine editor; Alfred Neely, son of the Senator; Gould Lincoln, and Senators Barkley, Pittman, Ashurst, Andrews, Herring, Murray, McKellar, Sheppard, Logan, Green, D. Worth Clark, Hatch, Minton, Smathers, Mead, Bulow, Schwellenbach, Overton, Lee, Brown, Hill, Guffey, O'Mahoney, Connally, Schwartz, Lucas, Stewart, Bilbo, Gillette and Ellender.

Banker Opposes Indenture Control

Brian Reuter, vice president of the Pittsburgh Union Trust Co., told a House Interstate Commerce sub-committee yesterday that proposed regulation of trust indentures would erect "another bar" to business recovery.

He said the securities commission, which has indorsed such control, had not proved the necessity for it.

G. S. Canright, of Chicago, officer of the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co., also opposed the plan.

Fiddler, 13, Who Was Starred Last Year to Be at Folk Fete

Indianapolis Boy's Letters Show Him Full of Anticipation

"Well, good afternoon to you—Jimmie Powers."

Thus conclude the letters received almost daily at National Folk Festival headquarters from the youngest featured performer who will appear at the festival April 27, 28 and 29.

Jimmie, who at 13 is an accomplished fiddler, will come all alone from his home in Indianapolis to take part in the National Folk Festival. He is so enthusiastic about the trip that he keeps in constant communication with the festival leaders, fearful lest something may come up to prevent his participation.

When he was five, Jimmie's father gave him a one-string fiddle and taught him to play such old favorites as "The Arkansas Traveler" and "Turkey in the Straw." Later he received a regulation instrument and started collecting his extensive repertory of tunes.

Two years ago he won the junior championship in a fiddler's contest held at Indianapolis. As a result of this recognition, he was invited to the Ohio Valley Festival at Cincinnati, Ohio, last year. Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, director of the National Folk Festival, heard him play there and invited him to the 1938 festival in Washington, where he received tumultuous applause.

Last year Jimmie was accompanied to the Capital by his father. But a few months ago Jimmie's father died suddenly, leaving his wife and son with little money It looked as though the young fiddler would not get to Washington again.

Walter J. Pray, member of the Indianapolis Optimist Club and former president of Optimist International, learned of the situation and asked Jimmie to play at an Optimist meeting. No sooner had the boy put down his fiddle than 40 members of the club guaranteed his expenses to the festival. Ever since the meeting, Jimmie's letters to Washington have been full of excited anticipation.

Tickets for the sixth annual National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall are on sale at The Washington Post Building, 1337 E. street northwest, from 8 a. m. until midnight, daily and Sunday. Prices for the three matinees range from 50 cents to $1; for the evening shows, from 50 cents to $2. A different program will be presented at each performance.

Marshall Favors McGehee Bill

John A. Marshall, director of the District Unemployment Compensation Board, yesterday indorsed the McGehee bill to divorce the board from the Social Security Administration and permit the local agency to cut its payroll tax from 3 to 1½ per cent. He told a House subcommittee of the Distrcit Committee that the surplus in the unemployment compensation fund is now $11,000,000 and that a $10,000,000 fund can be maintained with a 1½ per cent tax.

Prominent Va. Man Shoots Wife; Kills Self

Mrs. Ann Robertson Near Death Here; Children See Tragedy

With bullet wounds in the chest and head, Mrs. Ann Peyton Robertson, member of a prominent Virginia family, was reported near death in George Washington University Hospital last night following a family quarrel in which she was shot by her husband, Rolfe Robertson, 42-year-old sportsman-farmer. Robertson took his own life, believing he had killed his wife.

Mrs. Robertson was brought here from their home in Hickory Grove, Va., about 6 miles from Haymarket. The couple had been estranged for some time and the shooting was an outgrowth of attempts to effect a reconciliation. The tragedy, which occurred about 10:30 p. m. Wednesday, was witnessed by two of the Robertson's six children.

Still Unconscious

According to Prince William County authorities, Robertson went to see his wife in an effort to patch up their marital difficulties. The shooting followed. Robertson died instantly with a bullet in his heart.

Sheriff J. P. Kerlin, of Prince William County, said the case would be listed as attempted murder and suicide.

Physicians at George Washington Hospital last night said Mrs. Robertson had not regained consciousness and had only a slight chance to recover. She is the daughter of the late John William Peyton, who for 50 years was postmaster at Rapidan, Va.

World War Veteran

Robertson, a World War veteran, once served on the board of county supervisors in Prince William. He was active in Virginia hunting affairs and just before the tragedy attended field trials at Manassas.

The Robertsons were scheduled to appear next week before Judge Walter McCarthy, of Domestic Relations Court in Arlington, in a final attempt to reconcile their troubles.

LaGuardia Halted By Sandwich Man

New York, April 6 (AP).—A little, gray-haired man from a Bowery flop-house has blocked Mayor La Guardia's effort to banish 3,000 sandwich men and women from the sidewalks of New York.

When a policeman told 72-year-old George Walters he would have to give up his profession the veteran sandwich man looked up a lawyer.

Holy Thursday Rites Observed At St. Peter's

Vatican City, April 6 (AP).—Federico Cardinal Tedeschini, recently appointed archpriest of St. Peter's, conducted the ancient Holy Thursday ceremony of washing the central altar stone of the basilica with wine and water tonight.

The ceremony was one which for the past several years had been performed by Pope Pius XII who, before his election to the chair of St. Peter, was the high priest of the church.

Hundreds of faithful flocked to the basilica to witness the ritual.
